The bill (H. R. 21077) for the relief of W. F. Crawford was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

COMMERCE BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND FOREIGN COUNTRIES.

The bill (S. 2999) to foster commerce between the United States and foreign countries by facilitating the reexportation in bond from ports of the United States of goods imported into the United States, duly entered for warehousing and stored in bonded warehouses, was announced as next in order.

Mr. SMOOT. Let that bill go over, Mr. President.

Mr. RANSDELL. I hope the Senator from Utah will withdraw his opposition to that bill.

Mr. PENROSE. Let the bill go over, Mr. President.

Mr. RANSDELL. It is a matter of considerable importance.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection has been made to the consideration of the bill and it goes over.

Mr. RANSDELL. Does the Senator insist on his objection to that bill? I can not see how there can be any objection to it. It is a measure that is universally believed to be wise.

Mr. SMOOT. It can not pass the House. All other Senate bills have gone over.

POST-OFFICE BUILDING, MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

The bill (H. R. 21383) to change the name of the old post-office building at Minneapolis, Minn., was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICAN TOWING & LIGHTERING CO.

The bill (H. R. 17174) to pay the claim of the American Towing & Lightering Co. for damages to its tug Buccaneer was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

INTERNATIONAL ARBITRATION (S. DOC. NO. 987).

Senate resolution 562 to print the manuscript entitled "International arbitration" as a Senate document was announced as next in order.

Mr. PENROSE. I object.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I hope the Senator from Pennsylvania will not do that. It is a Senate resolution providing for the printing as a public document of a brief communication.

Mr. PENROSE. I will withdraw the objection, but it certainly seems to me that the Senate is making itself ridiculous by printing all these inconsequential matters, manuscripts from unknown authors on such bizarre and fanciful subjects as "Know your city," piling up all these matters and treating them as Senate documents, which nobody will ever read, with their privilege of being deposited in libraries throughout the country and the advantage of the franking privilege. It has been carried to an extreme that never has been witnessed in the United States Senate until this Congress.

If the Senator from Colorado thinks that the country will suffer a great loss by reason of the failure to print this document, I will withdraw my objection, but I venture to say that there are not 10 people in the United States who will ever read it.

Mr. HUGHES. If I thought there would be, I would object. [Laughter.]

Mr. SHAFROTH. I have read the document, and it is a very able one indeed.

Mr. PENROSE. Any schoolboy could write a document equal to it. I withdraw the objection out of courtesy to the Senator.

and in view of the good feeling that prevails at this hour when we are all to separate to-morrow morning.

The resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the manuscript submitted by Mr. SHAFROTH on February 24, 1915, entitled "International arbitration," by Oscar T. Crosby, Esq., of Warrenton, Va., be printed as a Senate document.

NATIONAL ACADEMY OF SCIENCES (S. DOC. NO. 989).

Senate resolution 563, to print as Senate document report of National Academy of Sciences, was announced as next in order.

Mr. PENROSE. I object.

Mr. FLETCHER. I hope the Senator from Pennsylvania will not object. The printing of this document is provided for by law.

Mr. PENROSE. Then, why is a resolution required?

Mr. FLETCHER. The resolution was referred to the Committee on Printing, and this is a resolution from the committee in favor of printing it. I repeat, it is provided for by law.

Mr. PENROSE. Does the Committee on Printing make a habit of reporting out everything of this character, whether it is needed or not?

Mr. FLETCHER. Whenever a subject is referred to the Committee on Printing it makes a report on it one way or the other.

Mr. PENROSE. I never heard of the National Academy of Sciences before, Mr. President.

Mr. FLETCHER. I can not hold myself responsible for the Senator not knowing of a matter required by law.

Mr. PENROSE. I am not going to delay the Senate. I simply want to call the attention of the Senate to a matter which shocks every sense of propriety that I have regarding the printing of these publications.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, the reason so many of these resolutions are being reported on by the committee is that we have been stopping the printing of all of these documents until they could be referred to the committee.

Mr. FLETCHER. The Senate Committee on Printing has had documents referred to it and requests for that printing amount to over half a million dollars. It has reported in favor of printing but $60,000 worth in the past year.

Mr. OVERMAN. Regular order!

Mr. PENROSE. Will the Senator consent that the notable document "Know your city" shall not be printed if I withdraw my objection to the printing of the other one?

Mr. FLETCHER. I do not want the Senator to do that. That is a document that is worth printing.

Mr. PENROSE. I will withdraw my objection to the printing of the report of the National Academy of Sciences on the theory that it never will be read, and can, therefore, do no harm.

There being no objection, the resolution was considered and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the report submitted by the National Academy of Sciences on February 22, 1915, for the year ended December 31, 1914, be printed as a Senate document.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED OVER.

The resolution (S. Res. 564) to print as Senate document "Know your city," etc., by Le Roy Hodges, was announced as next in order.

Mr. PENROSE. I object to that and will persist in my objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I desire to submit a conference report on the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. FLETCHER. Will the Senator not withhold that until we have concluded the calendar? There are only two or three more resolutions on it.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. There are only three more items on the calendar.

Mr. ASHURST. I withhold the report.

The resolution (S. Res. 565) to print as Senate document "The old Roman Senate," was announced as next in order.

Mr. PENROSE. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

The resolution (S. Res. 566) to print as Senate document "Yea-and-nay votes in the Senate on the Federal reserve act," approved December 13, 1913, was announced as next in order.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I object to that.

Mr. PENROSE. I object also.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will go over.

The resolution (S. Res. 567) to print as Senate document "Proceedings of the twentieth meeting of the convention of American instructors of the deaf," at Staunton, Va., June 25 to July 1, 1914, was announced as next in order.

Mr. PENROSE. I object.

Mr. O'GORMAN. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be passed over.

Mr. LEWIS. Regular order!

Mr. FLETCHER. I hope, Mr. President, Senators will not press the last objection. The senior Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] made a special request to have this document printed.

Mr. BRANDEGEE and Mr. PENROSE. Regular order!

Mr. FLETCHER. I should like very much to have the document printed on account of the desire of the Senator from California in the matter.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The trouble is that there is objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. If the Senators——

Mr. PENROSE. I refuse to withdraw the objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. I should be glad if the Senator would allow me to say a word.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Pennsylvania refuses to withdraw the objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. Let me ask who objected?

The VICE PRESIDENT. At least two Senators objected.

Mr. PENROSE. I objected, and the Senator from Connecticut [Mr. BRANDEGEE] also objected, to any such folly as this.

Mr. FLETCHER. Does the Senator object to the last order announced?

Mr. PENROSE. Most emphatically. That is the worst yet.

Mr. FLETCHER. As I have said, the Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS] has made a special request, one of the last requests he has made of anybody in the Senate, to have this matter printed.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I object to speeches being made after an objection is made.

Mr. FLETCHER. Senators have the power to do as they are doing, I presume, but matters may be evened up some time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the next business on the calendar.

PORT OF VAN BUREN, ME.

The bill (H. R. 21069) to make Van Buren, Me., a port through which merchandise may be imported for transportation without appraisement was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It extends the privileges of the first and seventh sections of the act approved June 10, 1880, governing the immediate transportation of dutiable merchandise without appraisement to the port of Van Buren, in the district of Portland, State of Maine.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

Mr. PENROSE. I should like to ask what bills the Secretary is now reading? I did not find the last bill on the calendar.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary is now reading bills which have been reported to-day and which, under the unanimous-consent agreement, it is in order to consider.

Mr. PENROSE. Do I understand the bills now being considered have been reported to-day?

The VICE PRESIDENT. They have been reported to-day and come within the terms of the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. PENROSE. In view of the fact that they are not on the calendar, I suggest that the Secretary read them at length, so that we may know what we are voting on.

STEAMER "MINNESOTA."

The bill (S. 7632) to provide American register for the steamer Minnesota upon certain conditions was announced as next in order.

Mr. PENROSE. I object, because that is a Senate bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be passed over.

Mr. SMITH of Maryland subsequently said: I will ask the Senator from Pennsylvania to withdraw his objection to Senate bill 7632.

Mr. PENROSE. I withdraw the objection at the request of the Senator from Maryland, although the bill can hardly pass the House.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill, which had been reported from the Committee on Commerce with amendments in line 10, after the word "be," to strike out "registered" and insert "document"; in line 13, after the word "vessel," to insert "made in American shipyards, including salvage"; and in the same line, after the word "vessel," to insert "after such repairs," so as to make the bill read:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Commissioner of Navigation is hereby authorized and directed to cause the foreign-built steamer Minnesota, wrecked at or near Cape Hatteras, if purchased within one year from the date of the passage of this act by the Baltimore & Carolina Steamship Co., of Baltimore City, incorporated under the laws of the State of Maryland, or by Mason L. Weems Williams, a citizen of the State of Maryland and of the United States, to be documented as a vessel of the United States whenever it shall be shown to the Commissioner of Navigation that the repairs on said vessel made in American shipyards, including salvage, amounted to one-half the actual cost of said vessel, after such repairs, and that the said vessel has been purchased by the said Baltimore & Carolina Steamship Co. or by the said Mason L. Weems Williams.

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended and the amendments were concurred in.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JACOB BARGER.

The bill (H. R. 11256) granting relief to Jacob Barger was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that in the administration of the pension laws Jacob Barger shall hereafter be held and considered to have been mustered as a private in Company E, Fourteenth Regiment Illinois Volunteer Cavalry, on the 20th day of June, 1864, and to have been honorably discharged on the 1st day of March, 1865.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

REMOVAL OF REMAINS OF ROBERT C. CULBERTSON.

The bill (H. R. 20702) authorizing the Health Officer of the District of Columbia to issue a permit for the removal of the remains of Robert Caldwell Culbertson from Woodlawn Cemetery, District of Columbia, to Rocky Spring Cemetery, Chambersburg, Pa., was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

JAMES GRADY.

The bill (H. R. 13470) for the relief of James Grady was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that in the administration of any law conferring rights, privileges, or benefits upon honorably discharged soldiers, James Grady, who served as a private in Company G, Third Regiment United States Infantry, shall be held and considered as having been mustered in as a member of said company on October 8, 1860, and honorably discharged therefrom on October 28, 1864, and that no back pay, pension, or other emolument shall accrue prior to or by reason of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

FRED GRAFF.

The bill (H. R. 17464) for the relief of Fred Graff was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that in the administration of the pension laws Fred Graff, who was commissioned by the governor of the State of New York as second lieutenant in the Seventy-eighth Regiment New York Volunteer Infantry, shall hereafter be held and considered to have been duly enrolled and mustered in and attached to that regiment from the 25th day of October, 1863, until the 11th day of July, 1864, and that no back pay, back pension, or back allowances of any kind shall accrue by reason of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AUGUSTUS DUDLEY HUBBELL.

The bill (H. R. 13756) for the relief of Augustus Dudley Hubbell was considered as in Committee of the Whole. It provides that in the administration of the pension laws Augustus Dudley Hubbell shall be hereafter held and considered to have been honorably discharged from the military service of the United States as a private in Company C, Third Regiment New York Volunteer Cavalry, on April 4, 1864, and that no back pension, back pay, or back allowances shall accrue by virtue of the passage of this act.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That concludes the bills on the calendar.

STANDARD BARREL FOR APPLES.

Mr. SWANSON. I ask to call up House bill 4899.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the title of the bill.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 4899) to fix the standard barrel for fruits, vegetables, and other dry commodities.

Mr. SMOOT. Has that bill been referred to a committee?

Mr. SWANSON. It has not been referred to a committee. I will say to the Senator from Utah that a bill practically the same was reported and passed by the Senate.

Mr. CLAPP. I want to say that I polled the committee on that matter and was authorized to move to substitute this bill for the Senate bill.

Mr. SMOOT. Is there a Senate bill on the calendar dealing with the same subject?

Mr. CLAPP. The Senate bill passed the Senate. This bill differs very slightly from it, so slightly that when I called the attention of the members of the committee to it they authorized me to make the motion and ask for its consideration.

Mr. SMOOT. Then the Senator reports it from the committee?

Mr. CLAPP. I do.

Mr. SMOOT. That is all right, then. I have not any objection to it.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. What committee did it come from?

Mr. CLAPP. The Committee on Standards, Weights, and Measures.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I am not going to object. I simply want to say that the proceeding is highly irregular and very dangerous at this late hour, when people's attention is relaxed. The proper way to have made the record would have been to make a report from the committee and ask present consideration for it, and not to call up a House bill without any record whatever to show that it has ever been before a standing committee of the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. May we have the title of the bill stated once more?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will again state the title of the bill.

The Secretary again stated the title of the bill.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, I want to say that I had intended to offer an amendment to this bill practically in the same terms, but applicable only to fruit boxes. Among the fruit growers barrels are used in the East and boxes in the West; but because of the lateness of the hour and the desire of my friend, the Senator from Virginia, to get this bill through, I have, at great sacrifice to the interest of my own constituents and to accommodate him, concluded that I would not offer the amendment.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The Secretary read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the standard barrel for fruits, vegetables, and other dry commodities other than cranberries shall be of the following dimensions when measured without distention of its parts: Length of stave, 28½ inches; diameter of heads, 17¼ inches; distance between heads, 26 inches; circumference of bulge, 64 inches, outside measurement; and the thickness of staves not greater than four-tenths of an inch: Provided, That any barrel of a different form having a capacity of 7,056 cubic inches shall be a standard barrel. The standard barrel for cranberries shall be of the following dimensions when measured without distention of its parts: Length of staves, 28½ inches; diameter of head, 16¼ inches; distance between heads, 25¼ inches; circumference of bulge, 58½ inches, outside measurement; and the thickness of staves not greater than four-tenths of an inch.

SEC. 2. That it shall be unlawful to sell, offer, or expose for sale in any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia, or to ship from any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia to any other State, Territory, or the District of Columbia or to a foreign country, a barrel containing fruits or vegetables or any other dry commodity of less capacity than the standard barrels defined in the first section of this act, or subdivisions thereof known as the third, half, and three-quarters barrel, and any person guilty of a willful violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and be liable to a fine not to exceed $500, or imprisonment not to exceed six months, in the court of the United States having jurisdiction: Provided, however, That no barrel shall be deemed below standard within the meaning of this act when shipped to any foreign country and constructed according to the specifications or directions of the foreign purchaser if not constructed in conflict with the laws of the foreign country to which the same is intended to be shipped.

SEC. 3. That reasonable variations shall be permitted and tolerance shall be established by rules and regulations made by the Director of the Bureau of Standards and approved by the Secretary of Commerce. Prosecutions for offenses under this act may be begun upon complaint of local sealers of weights and measures or other officers of the several States and Territories appointed to enforce the laws of the said States or Territories, respectively, relating to weights and measures: Provided, however, That nothing in this act shall apply to barrels used in packing or shipping commodities sold exclusively by weight or numerical count.

SEC. 4. That this act shall be in force and effect from and after the 1st day of July, 1916.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

Mr. SWANSON. From the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, I report back favorably House bill 11694 to provide for the purchase of a site for a public building at Binghamton, N. Y., and I ask unanimous consent for its consideration.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in the Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Virginia through what mysterious process or channel this bill got before the committee?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say to the Senator that it was referred this morning. The members of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee who are here have authorized me to report House bills favorably as they come over, because it is impossible to call a meeting of the committee.

Mr. PENROSE. If there is a record of this reference, I will not object.

Mr. SWANSON. It was referred this morning.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ELKINS, W. VA.

H. R. 20340. An Act to increase the appropriation for a public building at Elkins, W. Va., was read twice by its title.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, this bill has just passed the House of Representatives. There are only 7 lines in it. It is simply to increase the appropriation already made for a public building in the city of Elkins, W. Va. It is demanded by the Secretary of the Treasury. All of the estimates have been made for it. It is demanded because they have found that the needs of this city and the requirements of the new building are very much greater than they were when the building was first estimated for. I want to appeal to Senators on the other side of the Chamber to permit its consideration at this time. It is now near the close of the session, and this bill was passed in the House only a few minutes ago. I would like to amend the bill so as to increase the appropriation in accordance with the recommendation of the Treasury Department, but if this should be done, the bill would certainly fail, because the House would not have time to consider it again. I know that the rule requires the bill to go to a committee, but such action would also defeat the bill. I appeal to the Senate to permit this bill to take the only course possible to bring about its passage, and that is to give unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Mr. FALL. I should like to understand the language in which the Secretary of the Treasury demands the passage of this bill.

Mr. CHILTON. I mean he "requests" it. It is more accurate to say that he recommends it.

Mr. FALL. Oh!

Mr. CHILTON. I desire to put his letter in the RECORD. That letter explains the whole situation.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the absence of objection, permission is granted.

The letter referred to is as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, January 28, 1915.

The CHAIRMAN COMMITTEE ON PUBLIC BUILDINGS AND GROUNDS,
House of Representatives, United States.

SIR: Complying with your verbal request of January 28, the following report is submitted on H. R. 20340, which provides for an increase in the appropriation for a public building at Elkins, W. Va.

The branches of the service to be accommodated are the post office, United States courts, Internal-Revenue Service, Forest Service, Weather Bureau, and the Civil Service Commission.

The amounts paid for rented quarters are as follows: Post office, $1,800; Forest Service, $168; and the Weather Bureau, $288.

The post-office receipts for the fiscal years 1914 and 1904 were $22,471.14 and $9,868.28, respectively. The population last census was 5,260.

It is estimated that a three-story and basement building of 8,000 square feet ground area will be necessary to provide accommodations for all branches of the service, and the cost of such a building, fireproof, will be $160,000, or $75,000 more than is now available.

As the legislation heretofore enacted does not provide for the accommodation of the courts, it is recommended that lines 4 and 5 of the bill under consideration be changed to read "accommodation for the post office, United States courts, and other offices of the Government."

In order that the committee may have the department's estimate in the usual form, a separate report is inclosed which contains the information given in the second, third, fourth, and fifth paragraphs of this letter.

Respectfully, W. G. MCADOO, Secretary.

Mr. CHILTON. I now ask unanimous consent to take up the bill and put it upon its passage.

Mr. FALL. How much is this little amount?

Mr. CHILTON. It increases the former appropriation, I think, by——

Mr. FALL. Oh, that is a matter of indifference.

Mr. CHILTON (continuing). Fifty thousand dollars.

Mr. FALL. Is that all?

Mr. CHILTON. That is all. The report is here, and this work is recommended by the Secretary.

Mr. FALL. What was the original appropriation?

Mr. CHILTON. Eighty-five thousand dollars.

Mr. FALL. This only increases it by $50,000?

Mr. CHILTON. To $135,000; and it is shown clearly by the report that the present demands of the city of Elkins require a larger building than can be built for $85,000.

Mr. FALL. How many people are there in Elkins?

Mr. CHILTON. It grows so fast that I can hardly tell the Senator. At the time of the last census it had increased 140 per cent. There are at least seven or eight thousand people there, in my judgment.

Mr. FALL. If the Senator has the report there must be some estimate stating the number.

Mr. FLETCHER. He has not heard since yesterday.

Mr. CHILTON. I have not heard since this morning how many there are in Elkins, but in 1910 it had a population of 5,200.

Mr. FALL. When was this original appropriation made?

Mr. CHILTON. In 1910, as I now recall.

Mr. FALL. And the business has increased so rapidly that you need $50,000 additional?

Mr. CHILTON. I will say to the Senator, if he will give me his attention——

Mr. FALL. Yes; the Senator has my attention.

Mr. CHILTON. I will say that since the original appropriation was made a report has been made showing that there is a necessity for a larger public building there for the court, and so forth, and they want to provide for those additional requirements.

Mr. FALL. I have understood that there was a court needed somewhere in West Virginia.

Mr. CHILTON. The court has been established there.

Mr. SWANSON. This has been delayed on account of the growth of the town, and the necessity of increasing it.

Mr. FALL. How many people are there now?

Mr. CHILTON. I think there must be seven or eight thousand people there. It is a railroad center, and it is a very important city. I have stated the situation, but the confusion during these closing hours probably made it difficult for the Senator to hear.

Mr. SWANSON. This money was appropriated 4 years ago. It has been delayed for the reasons I have stated. I hope the Senator will not object.

Mr. JAMES. Regular order!

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection?

Mr. KERN. I desire also to say that Elkins is the national headquarters of the Society of Veterinarians of the United States. [Laughter.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection? The Chair hears none.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill. It proposes that the limit of cost heretofore authorized for the erection of a building for the use and accommodation of the post office and other offices of the Government at Elkins, W. Va., be increased from $85,000 to $135,000.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

BUREAU OF LABOR SAFETY.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I ask unanimous consent to return to Order of Business 621, House bill 10735.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, a point of order. We have a unanimous-consent agreement. I am heartily in favor of the bill that the Senator asks to take up, but the unanimous-consent agreement has not yet been carried out, and until it has been carried out I do not believe this is in order, as I told the Senator before.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Are we not through with the calendar?

Mr. SMOOT. We are not through with the committee reports. Just as soon as we are through with committee reports it will be in order.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Then it is understood that after the completion of the committee reports, the Chair will recognize me?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair makes no promise.

HOURS OF SERVICE ON RAILWAYS.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I submit a report (No. 1072) from the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ask leave for its present consideration; and pending that question, I ask permission to make a very brief statement.

The report is on a bill fixing a minimum penalty for the violation of the hours-of-service act. When it was presented the other day, the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. OLIVER] objected. Subsequently he stated that if an amendment were made striking out "$100" and inserting "$50" in lieu thereof as the minimum penalty, he would not object. It is my purpose to offer that amendment if unanimous consent is given for the present consideration of the bill.

Mr. LIPPITT. What is the bill? What is the purpose of it?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the title of the bill.

The SECRETARY. From the Committee on Interstate Commerce the Senator from Arkansas reports House bill 17893, to amend section 3 of an act entitled "An act to protect the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by limiting the hours of service of employees thereon," approved March 4, 1907.

Mr. LIPPITT. I object to the consideration of the bill.

Mr. ASHURST. Regular order!

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER BRIDGE.

Mr. SHEPPARD. From the Committee on Commerce I report back favorably a bridge bill, and ask that it may be passed. (S. Rept. 1069.)

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the title of the bill.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 21563) granting the consent of Congress to the Keokuk & Hamilton Bridge Co. to construct a bridge across the Mississippi River at Keokuk, Iowa.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

AMERICAN INSTRUCTORS OF THE DEAF (S. DOC. NO. 986).

Mr. SMOOT. When Order of Business 947 was asked to be considered the Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE] objected. I now ask that Senator to withdraw his objection.

Mr. SIMMONS. What is the resolution?

Mr. SMOOT. It is a resolution (S. Res. 567) for printing the report of the American Instructors of the Deaf and Dumb. It calls for the printing of it as a public document.

Mr. OWEN. I ask, as an amendment, that there be printed as a separate document the address of Prof. Johnson on the preferential ballot.

Mr. SMOOT. Of course that is contrary to our unanimous-consent agreement, I will say; but——

Mr. OWEN. Can I not propose an amendment?

Mr. SMOOT. Not to this. This is a committee report, Order of Business No. 947. Is there any objection on the part of the Senator?

Mr. OWEN. Oh, I am not going to object. I simply wish to move an amendment that would take care of Order of Business 333. Is an amendment out of order under the unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. SMOOT. Then I will withdraw the request.

Mr. OWEN. Oh, no; I would not have the Senator do that.

Mr. SMOOT. I do not desire any amendment to this request. You can not print both of them together in the one request.

Mr. OWEN. I propose that that shall be printed as a separate document.

Mr. SMOOT. If there is any objection to my request, I will withdraw it.

Mr. JAMES. There is no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection? The Chair hears none, and the document is ordered printed.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, in reference to that matter, I will state that this association was incorporated in 1897, and the report has been ordered printed each year since.

ADDITIONAL SUPERVISING INSPECTORS, ETC.

Mr. FLETCHER. On yesterday the Senator from Utah asked to have passed over Orders of Business 734 and 735, I believe, because he and the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN] were under the impression that they had been taken care of in an appropriation bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That is outside of the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. FLETCHER. Then I ask that the letter which I send to the desk may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY,
Washington, March 2, 1915.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In looking over the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of yesterday, I saw where H. R. 20282, "to provide for the appointment of 11 supervising inspectors, Steamboat-Inspection Service, in lieu of 10," was reached on the calendar and, because of some misunderstanding, was temporarily laid aside in order that you might look the matter up. The misunderstanding seems to have arisen over the fact that the legislative appropriation bill carried a provision for some additional inspectors, as for Florida, Louisiana, New York, Michigan, and some other places, and it was thought that the act in question might cover the same persons.

The legislative bill, it is true, did carry a provision for assistant inspectors at the points named, but the supervising inspectors were left at the same number as now provided by section 4404, Revised Statutes, namely, 10. The purpose of H. R. 20282 is to amend section 4404 and provide for 11 supervising inspectors instead of 10, as is now the law. The department urges this additional inspector, as the present inspection district on the Pacific coast is entirely too large for one man to handle. The department feels that this bill should be passed, and requests your cooperation toward that end. In this connection I also desire to call your attention to H. R. 20107, the act providing for amendments to several of the present statutes governing the Steamboat-Inspection Service, which act the department is heartily in favor of. However, as I wrote you some time ago, all bills which passed the House of Representatives at the present session relating to any of the bureaus of this department have my unqualified approval, and I am very anxious to have as many of them passed as possible, if not all. In this connection please accept my appreciation of your successful efforts in connection with the bill for lighthouse improvements.

Very truly, yours,

WILLIAM C. REDFIELD, Secretary.

Hon. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

INSPECTION OF LOCOMOTIVE BOILERS.

Mr. ROBINSON. I ask leave to submit a report (No. 1068) from the Committee on Interstate Commerce, and I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Mr. SMOOT. Let the bill be stated.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will state the title of the bill.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 17894) to amend an act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto," approved February 17, 1911.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, I can explain briefly the purpose of this bill. It proposes an amendment to the boiler-inspection law, which contemplates the inspection of the entire locomotive. I believe experience has shown the wisdom of the boiler-inspection law and that it is necessary, or at least advisable, that this bill should be passed.

Mr. JONES. Will the Senator permit me? Is this what is known as the Goeke bill?

Mr. ROBINSON. It is.

Mr. JONES. Is it reported just as it passed the House?

Mr. ROBINSON. There is an amendment. I was just about to state that there is an amendment proposed striking out the provision which denies to the Interstate Commerce Commission the right to proceed under the original boiler-inspection act, with its penalties, and allows them to proceed under this act.

Mr. JONES. I wish to say to the Senator that I have received a good many protests from labor organizations against the Goeke bill as it passed the House. I do not know anything about this measure. I want to know whether the amendment of the committee meets the objection.

Mr. ROBINSON. It does not meet the objection which I think the Senator from Washington has in mind. Certain of the organizations insisted upon an amendment to provide in effect that boiler inspection shall be made by persons who have had five years' practical experience in boiler making, and that the inspection of the remainder of the locomotives shall be made by a person who has had practical experience in the construction and operation of locomotives, which is contemplating practically two separate inspections of every locomotive.

Mr. JONES. The Senator, of course, thinks that this improves the existing law.

Mr. ROBINSON. Certainly. I will state that the representatives of a great majority of the labor organizations were heard regarding the bill, and they approved the bill in this form.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President——

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. The Senator from Arkansas has not finished explaining the present form of the bill.

Mr. SIMMONS. I am not going to object to the request of the Senator from Arkansas, but I wish to inquire whether we have not finished the main work under the unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. FLETCHER. No; I have some reports to make from the Committee on Printing.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I wish to ask the Senator from Arkansas if the bill in the form in which the committee reports it provides for one inspection and requires that the inspector shall be a man capable of doing the work upon any part?

Mr. ROBINSON. It contemplates it. That is the form of the bill. It is in the form approved by the head of the Boiler Inspection Bureau.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. He is an expert in boiler inspection and examination, and is familiar with the entire work?

Mr. ROBINSON. He is.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, I do not know anything about this bill, but I think it is too late to allow a bill of this kind to pass without objection. Simply because the bills come from a committee with a favorable report, to pass them without discussion is rather a bad practice. As the Senator thinks this ought to become a part of the law and is satisfied that it is necessary, I have such confidence in him that I do not like to object, but it seems to me that this is not the proper method of legislating.

Mr. ROBINSON. If the Senator from New Mexico will permit me, I will state that a subcommittee of the Interstate Commerce Committee had extended hearings on this bill. Representatives of the railroad companies and representatives of all the labor organizations throughout the United States interested in the matter appeared and were permitted to express their views fully, and the bill represents the deliberate conclusion of the subcommittee which considered it, consisting of the Senator from Iowa [Mr. CUMMINS], the Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS], and myself.

Mr. FALL. I shall offer no objection.

Mr. POMERENE. There were very full hearings had on the bill in the House, and it received a unanimous report.

Mr. FALL. I shall make no objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. HARDWICK. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. I yield to the Senator from Georgia.

Mr. HARDWICK. What is the qualification of the inspector provided in the bill?

Mr. ROBINSON. The qualification that existed in the original boiler-inspection law.

Mr. HARDWICK. Will the Senator explain it?

Mr. ROBINSON. I can not from memory, but it seems to be very carefully safeguarded. I will state experience has shown that the service rendered in that department is very satisfactory.

Mr. HARDWICK. Is it the amendment that the boiler makers wanted to have put in?

Mr. ROBINSON. It is not.

Mr. HARDWICK. The qualifications will be those fixed in the original law?

Mr. ROBINSON. Yes; the effect of the amendment which they suggested would be to limit the department in the selection of its employees to a certain class of laborers, and the committee did not think it wise to do that. We thought that the department could, under the law, make a proper selection, and experience has confirmed that opinion.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the bill was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The amendment was, on page 3, line 1, after the word "acts," to strike out the following words:

> Except that for a violation of the act of February 17, 1911, as hereby amended, or of any rule or regulation made under its provisions, or of any lawful order of any inspector acting thereunder, the offender shall be subject to prosecution by the United States for a penalty under said act, as hereby amended, only: Provided, That the passage of this act shall not affect any suit pending or offense committed prior to the passage hereof.

The amendment was agreed to.

The bill was reported to the Senate as amended, and the amendment was concurred in.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the bill to be read a third time.

The bill was read the third time and passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20415) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House disagrees to the amendment of the Senate No. 296, down to and including the amendment of the Senate No. 706 to the bill (H. R. 8846) making appropriation for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and the Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section No. 151 of the act approved March 3, 1911, commonly known as the Judicial Code, and agrees to the residue of the amendments to the bill.

The message further announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 544) for the relief of the Virginia Military Institute, of Lexington, Va.

The message also announced that the House had passed the following bills and joint resolutions, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate:

The message further announced that the House agrees to the amendment of the Senate to the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 439) to empower the President to better enforce and maintain the neutrality of the United States.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice President:

S. 2789. An act to award the medal of honor to Maj. John O. Skinner, United States Army, retired;

H. R. 21546. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year 1915 and for prior years, and for other purposes;

H. J. Res. 437. Joint resolution authorizing and directing the Sergeant at Arms to refund to Members of the House of Representatives amounts of money deducted from their salaries; and

H. J. Res. 438. Joint resolution concerning estimates and expenditures for the Reclamation Service.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed the bill (S. 5042) legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada, with an amendment, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed a bill (H. R. 20604) to construct a public building for a post office at the city of Forsyth, Ga., in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTION SIGNED.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolution, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice President:

OMNIBUS CLAIMS BILL.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the action of the House of Representatives disagreeing to the amendment of the Senate No. 296 down to and including the amendment of the Senate No. 706 to the bill (H. R. 8846) making appropriations for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and the Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section No. 151 of the act approved March 3, 1911, commonly known as the Judicial Code, and agreeing to the residue of the amendments.

Mr. BRYAN. I move that the Senate recede from its amendment No. 296 down to and including amendment No. 706 to the bill.

The motion was agreed to.

PREFERENTIAL BALLOT.

Mr. FLETCHER. I submit three resolutions from the Committee on Printing. I ask for the consideration of the first resolution (S. Res. 573), which I send to the desk.

Mr. PENROSE. Let it be read for information, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the manuscript submitted by Mr. OWEN, February 13, 1915, entitled "The preferential ballot, as a substitute for the direct primary, by Lewis Jerome Johnson, be printed as a Senate document.

Mr. PENROSE. I object, Mr. President.

Mr. FLETCHER. I submit another resolution and ask for its consideration.

Mr. SIMMONS. I wish to ask if the unanimous-consent agreement is not subject to conference reports? I understand that the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill is ready to be presented to the Senate.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understood that the Senator from Arizona was yielding to the request for unanimous consent.

Mr. SIMMONS. I have no objection to going on with the unanimous-consent agreement when ge get through with the conference report, but I protest against going on with this calendar while we are ready here to consider a conference report upon an important bill that may take hours.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Carolina want to have the report laid down?

Mr. SIMMONS. Certainly.

Mr. FLETCHER. I have had these reports on my desk for nearly a week and I have waited for an opportunity to present these simple resolutions.

Mr. SIMMONS. I have no objection to that. I am not objecting.

Mr. FLETCHER. The people interested in them are entitled to have the subject matter printed. I ask unanimous consent——

Mr. PENROSE. Let us hear the resolution read subject to objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. The Senator has objected, but if the Senator from Pennsylvania——

Mr. PENROSE. I will object to it now if the Senator wants.

Mr. FLETCHER. I will consider them objected to.

Mr. PENROSE. I object.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I am very anxious to ask the Senate to proceed to the conference report, but before doing so I should like to yield to the Senator from Washington [Mr. JONES] and the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MARTINE].

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. ASHURST. Beyond that——

Mr. GRONNA. Has the Senator from Arizona asked unanimous consent to take up the conference report?

Mr. ASHURST. No; I am not required to ask unanimous consent. I am simply yielding to other Senators.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arizona has a right to call it up whenever he wishes. The Chair understood that he did not want to call it up now.

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from Washington if the matter he wishes to call up leads to no discussion.

Mr. JONES. A while ago I objected to the consideration of the bill (H. R. 16029) to authorize the Secretary having jurisdiction of the same to set aside certain public lands to be used as national sanitariums by fraternal or benevolent organizations, and for other purposes. I wish to withdraw my objection, because I have talked with those interested and an amendment will be offered which will make it entirely satisfactory to them. It is a bill from the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. ASHURST. If it leads to discussion I shall object.

Mr. JONES. I shall not discuss it. I withdraw my objection.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be read by title.

The SECRETARY. The bill (H. R. 16029) to authorize the Secretary having jurisdiction of the same to set aside certain public lands to be used as national sanitariums by fraternal or benevolent organizations, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection?

Mr. PENROSE. I should like to have the bill read.

The Secretary read the bill.

Mr. OVERMAN. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MARTINE], and I shall yield no further.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of House bill 10735.

Mr. OVERMAN. Regular order! That bill comes before Order of Business 820, which was the first bill on the calendar under the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I am asking for unanimous consent. This was a bill passed over.

Mr. ASHURST. Objection has been made, and I ask for the regular order.

Mr. HUGHES. No objection was made, I think; it was a misunderstanding.

Mr. LIPPITT. Is the unanimous-consent agreement yet finished?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair understands that the Senator from New Jersey is asking to take up a bill under the unanimous-consent agreement. The Chair does not know what it is.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. It is House bill 10735, to create a bureau of labor safety in the Department of Labor.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry. I should like to have a definite understanding of the inquiry made by the Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. LIPPITT]. Has the unanimous-consent agreement under which we have been operating been exhausted? Have all calendar bills and reports been considered?

The VICE PRESIDENT. They have, unless there are further reports of committees.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. Does that mean that any committee during the rest of the session has the right to submit a report under the unanimous-consent agreement and have it considered?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair does not know what it did intend, but the Chair thinks it was intended to go through the calendar from the point indicated; and if a Senator had a report to make, he could submit it and, if it were not objected to, it could be taken up.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. During the time we were on the calendar?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Yes.

Mr. SIMMONS. I object to anything further until the conference reports are disposed of.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I trust the Senator will withhold it.

Mr. SIMMONS. I will withhold it at the Senator's request, but I object to any other unanimous consent until the conference report is disposed of.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I appreciate the Senator's courtesy.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The conference report is in order. The Senator from Arizona sends it up.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. ASHURST submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20150) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 10, 11, 16, 17, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 32, 34, 38, 44, 48, 49, 51, 56, 58, 63, 65, 66, 75, 77, 78, 79, 80, 82, 88, 91, 92, 93, 96, 98, 100, 107, 109, 113, 117, 118, 120, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 138, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 148, 153, 156, 157, 158, and 159.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 5, 8, 12, 13, 15, 21, 30, 31, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 45, 46, 47, 57, 59, 60, 61, 71, 73, 83, 95, 99, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 110, 111, 114 116, 119, 121, 122, 123, 125, 128, 137, 139, 141, 147, 149, 151, 154, 155, 160, 161, 165, 167, 169, and 170 and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 3: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment to the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 1 of the proposed amendment, after the word "sum," strike out the figures "$25,000" and insert in lieu thereof figures "$10,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 4: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by this amendment insert the following: "maintenance of hospitals and sanatoriums, for incidental and all other expenses for their proper conduct and management, including pay of employees, repairs, improvements, and for necessary expenses of transporting Indian patients to and from such hospitals and sanatoriums, and for the correction of sanitary defect in Indian homes, $350,000: Provided, That not to exceed $90,000 of the amount herein appropriated may be expended in the erection and equipment of new hospitals for the use of Indians; and no hospital shall be constructed at a cost to exceed $15,000, including equipment"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 6: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,500,000," and on page 5 of the bill, line 4, after the word "schools," strike out the period, insert a colon, and add the following: "And provided further, That $75,000 of the amount herein appropriated shall be expended for tuition of children of Indian blood enrolled in the public schools of New Mexico"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$420,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 9: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$425,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 14: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$115,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 18: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$300,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 19: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$75,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 20: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 20, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment insert the following: "The Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs, as now constituted, is hereby continued during the period of the Sixty-fourth Congress, with powers and duties as provided in the Indian appropriation act of June 30, 1913 (38 Stat. L., p. 81), and the unexpended amount therein appropriated for the expense of said commission is hereby reappropriated and made immediately available for the purposes therein authorized. Said commission shall make their findings, conclusions, and recommendations to Congress during the Sixty-fourth Congress: Provided, That should a vacancy occur in said commission by resignation or otherwise it shall be filled by appointment in the manner in which the members of said commission were originally appointed: Provided further, That if a vacancy should occur in said commission by resignation or otherwise of a member of the commission appointed from the House of Representatives before the Sixty-fourth Congress convenes, such vacancy shall be filled by appointment from the Members elect of said Sixty-fourth Congress by Hon. CHAMP CLARK, a Member elect of the Sixty-fourth Congress from the State of Missouri"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 23: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 23, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed in line 2 of the proposed amendment, insert: "$15,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 33: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 33, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the figures proposed and insert the following: "$127,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 41: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 41, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the sum proposed in said amendment and insert the following: "$45,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 42: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 42, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"For the purchase of lands for the homeless Indians in California, including improvements thereon, for the use and occupancy of said Indians, $20,000, said funds to be expended under such regulations and conditions as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 43: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 43, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out the amendment proposed and insert the following: "$108,125; for general repairs and improvements, $8,000; in all, $116,125"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 50: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 50, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert "6"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 52: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 52, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert "7"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 53: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 53, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert "$60,450; for general repairs and improvements, $5,000; for dairy barn, $5,000; in all, $70,450"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 54: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 54, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert "8"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 64: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 64, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 13 of the proposed amendment, after the word "thirteen," strike out the balance of the amendment; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 67: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 67, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert "9"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 68: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 68, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed insert the following: "$20,000, to be immediately available: Provided, That not to exceed $4,500 of the above amount may be expended for salaries;"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 70: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 70, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 2 of the proposed amendment strike out the word "hereafter" and insert in lieu thereof the following: "during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 72: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 72, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$100,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 74: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 74, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert the following:

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to announce, at such time as in his opinion seems proper, the charge for construction of irrigation systems on the Blackfeet, Flathead, and Fort Peck Indian Reservations in Montana, which shall be made against each acre of land irrigable by the systems on each of said reservations. Such charges shall be assessed against the land irrigable by the systems on each said reservation in the proportion of the total construction cost which each acre of such land bears to the whole area of irrigable land thereunder.

"On the 1st day of December after the announcement by the Secretary of the Interior of the construction charge, the allottee, entryman, purchaser, or owner of such irrigable land which might have been furnished water for irrigation during the whole of the preceding irrigation season, from ditches actually constructed, shall pay to the superintendent of the reservation where the land is located, for deposit to the credit of the United States as a reimbursement of the appropriations made or to be made for construction of said irrigation systems, 5 per cent of the construction charge fixed for his land, as an initial installment, and shall pay the balance of the charge in 15 annual installments, the first 5 of which shall each be 5 per cent of the construction charge and the remainder shall each be 7 per cent of the construction charge. The first of the annual installments shall become due and payable on December 1 of the fifth calendar year after the initial installment: Provided, That any allottee, entryman, purchaser, or owner may, if he so elects, pay the whole or any part of the construction charges within any shorter period: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, grant such extension of the time for payments herein required from Indian allottees or their heirs as he may determine proper and necessary, so long as such land remains in Indian title.

"That the tribal funds heretofore covered into the Treasury of the United States in partial reimbursement of appropriations made for constructing irrigation systems on said reservations shall be placed to the credit of the tribe and be available for such expenditure for the benefit of the tribe as may be made under existing law.

"The Secretary of the Treasury is hereby authorized and directed to credit on the books of the Treasury to the Indians of the Blackfeet Reservation $4,544.40; to the Indians of the Flathead Reservation, $440,217.78; and to the Indians of the Fort Peck Reservation, $80,425.75, the same being the amounts heretofore covered into the Treasury on account of moneys expended upon irrigation projects upon said reservations.

"The cost of constructing irrigation systems to irrigate the allotted lands of the Indians on these reservations shall be reimbursed to the United States as hereinbefore provided, and no further reimbursements from the tribal funds shall be made on account of said irrigation works, except that all charges against Indian allottees or their heirs herein authorized, unless otherwise paid, may be paid from the individual shares in the tribal funds, when the same is available for distribution, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior.

"For continuing construction of the irrigation systems on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation in Montana, $50,000, which shall be immediately available and remain available until expended: Provided, That the entryman upon the surplus unallotted lands to be irrigated by such systems shall, in addition to compliance with the homestead laws, before receiving patent for the lands covered by his entry, pay the charges apportioned against such tract as herein authorized, and a failure to make any two payments when due shall render the entry subject to cancellation, with the forfeiture to the United States of all rights acquired under the provisions of this act, as well as of any moneys paid on account thereof. The purchaser of any Indian allotment to be irrigated by such systems, purchased upon approval of the Secretary of the Interior, before the charges against said allotment herein authorized shall have been paid, shall pay all charges remaining unpaid at the time of such purchase, and in all patents or deeds for such purchased allotments, and also in all patents in fee to allottees of their heirs issued before payment of all such charges herein authorized to be made against their allotments, there shall be expressed that there is reserved upon the lands therein described a lien for such charges, and such lien may be enforced, or, upon payment of the delinquent charges, may be released by the Secretary of the Interior (acts Mar. 1, 1907, vol. 34, p. 1035; Apr. 4, 1910, vol. 36, p. 277; Mar. 3, 1911, vol. 36, p. 1066; Aug. 24, 1912, vol. 37, p. 526; June 30, 1913, vol. 38, p. 90; Aug. 1, 1914, vol. 38, p. 593).

"For continuing the construction of the irrigation systems on the Flathead Indian Reservation in Montana, $400,000, to remain available until expended, and the unexpended balance, amounting to $186,996.81, appropriated in the Indian appropriation act approved June 30, 1913, for continuing the construction of said irrigation systems on said reservations, be, and the same is hereby, reappropriated and made immediately available to be expended for continuing the construction of said irrigation systems: Provided, That the payments for the proportionate cost of the construction of said systems required of settlers on the surplus unallotted land by section 9, chapter 1495, Statutes of the United States of America, entitled 'An act for the survey and allotment of lands now embraced within the limits of the Flathead Indian Reservation in the State of Montana, and the sale and disposal of all surplus lands after allotment,' as amended by section 15 of the act of May 29, 1908 (35 Stat. L., 448), shall be made as herein provided: Provided further, That nothing contained in the act of May 29, 1908 (35 Stat. L., 444), shall be construed to exempt the purchaser of any Indian allotment purchased prior to the expiration of the trust period thereon from any charge for construction of the irrigation system incurred up to the time of such purchase, except such charges as shall have accrued and become due in accordance with the public notices herein provided for, or to relieve the owners of all land allotted to Indians in severalty from payment of the charges herein required to be made against said land on account of construction of the irrigation systems; and in carrying out the provisions of said section the exemption therein authorized from charges incurred against allotments purchased prior to the expiration of the trust period thereon shall be the amount of the charges or installments thereof due under public notice herein provided for up to the time of such purchase.

"For continuing construction of the irrigation systems on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation in Montana, $50,000, which shall be immediately available and remain available until expended: Provided, That the proportionate cost of the construction of said systems required of settlers and entrymen on the surplus unallotted irrigable land by section 2 of the act of May 30, 1908 (35 Stat. L., p. 558), shall be paid as herein provided: Provided further, That nothing contained in said act of May 30, 1908, shall be construed to exempt the purchaser of any Indian allotment purchased prior to the expiration of the trust period thereon from any charge for construction of the irrigation system incurred up to the time of such purchase, except such charges as shall have accrued and become due in accordance with the public notices herein provided for, and the purchaser of any Indian allotment to be irrigated by said systems purchased upon approval of the Secretary of the Interior before the charges against said allotment herein authorized shall have been paid shall pay all charges remaining unpaid at the time of such purchase, and in all patents or deeds for such purchased allotments, and also in all patents in fee to allottees or their heirs issued before payment shall have been made of all such charges herein authorized to be made against their allotments, there shall be expressed that there is reserved upon the lands therein described a lien for such charges, and such lien may be enforced, or upon payment of the delinquent charges may be released by the Secretary of the Interior.

"That in addition to the construction charges every allottee, entryman, purchaser or owner shall pay to the superintendent of the reservation a maintenance and operation charge based upon the total cost of maintenance and operation of the systems on the several reservations, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to fix such maintenance and operation charge upon such basis as shall be equitable to the owners of the irrigable land. Such charges when collected shall be available for expenditure in the maintenance and operation of the systems on the reservation where collected: Provided, That delivery of water to any tract of land may be refused on account of nonpayment of any charges herein authorized, and the same may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be collected by a suit for money owed: Provided further, That the rights of the United States, heretofore acquired, to water for Indian lands referred to in this amendment, namely, the Blackfeet, Fort Peck, and Flathead Reservation land, shall be continued in full force and effect until the Indian title to such land is extinguished.

"That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations and issue such notices as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act, and he is hereby authorized and directed to determine the area of land on each reservation which may be irrigated from constructed ditches and to determine what allowance, if any, shall be made for ditches constructed by individuals for the diversion and distribution of a partial or total water supply for allotted or surplus unallotted lands: Provided, That if water be available prior to the announcement of the charge herein authorized, the Secretary of the Interior may furnish water to land under the systems on the said reservations, making a reasonable charge therefor, and such charges when collected may be used for construction or maintenance of the systems through which such water shall have been furnished.

"The work to be done with the amounts herein appropriated for the completion of these projects may be done by the Reclamation Service, on plans and estimates furnished by that service and approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 76: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 76, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the amendment proposed insert "10"; and the Senate agree to the same.

"SEC. 25. Section 26 of the Indian appropriation act of June 30, 1913 (38 Stat. L., p. 103), is hereby repealed."

And the Senate agree to the same.

HENRY F. ASHURST,
H. L. MYERS,
Conferees on the part of the Senate.
C. D. CARTER,
CARL HAYDEN,
C. H. BURKE,
Conferees on the part of the House.

Mr. ASHURST. I ask that the question be put on agreeing to the report.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, there are Senators here who I know are very deeply interested in this report and will want to be here when the report is considered. Therefore I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following-named Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gronna	Martine, N. J.	Smith, Md.
Bankhead	Hardwick	Nelson	Smith, S. C.
Brady	Hollis	O'Gorman	Smoot
Brandegee	Hughes	Overman	Sterling
Bristow	James	Owen	Stone
Bryan	Jones	Penrose	Sutherland
Burton	Kern	Perkins	Thomas
Chamberlain	La Follette	Pittman	Thompson
Clapp	Lane	Pomerene	Townsend
Dillingham	Lea, Tenn.	Reed	Walsh
Fall	Lee, Md.	Robinson	Weeks
Gallinger	Lodge	Sheppard	Works
Gore	McLean	Smith, Ga.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Fifty-one Senators have answered to the roll call. A quorum is present. The pending question is on the motion of the Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] to agree to the conference report.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. ASHURST. Question!

Mr. PENROSE. May I make a suggestion, if the Senator will permit me, before he goes on?

Mr. GRONNA. If it does not take me from the floor.

Mr. PENROSE. It will not take the Senator off the floor. The Senator from New Jersey [Mr. MARTINE] has been waiting here since 6 o'clock last evening or longer. I know, as a matter of fact, that the conference report on the Indian bill and the Post Office bill, when they get here, will take pretty nearly the remainder of this session. It may be that now, or a little later on, we might get some kind of a unanimous-consent agreement, and I would ask the chairman of the committee whether he will not consent, without the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA] losing the floor, to let the Senator from New Jersey present his matter to the Senate? It will not take long.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. It will take only a few minutes.

Mr. OVERMAN. I am going to object to the measure the Senator from New Jersey desires to present. I have a report from the department saying that it proposes to provide a duplication of the work of two departments. We do not want two bureaus doing the same thing; and this measure provides for that. I should like to oblige my dear friend, but I can not agree to his request under the circumstances.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That seems to end it.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Indiana?

Mr. GRONNA. I yield for a question.

Mr. KERN. I was about to suggest a unanimous-consent agreement on the line suggested by the Senator from Pennsylvania, that until 9 o'clock this morning the Senate shall consider nothing save conference reports.

Mr. SMOOT. I am willing to agree to that.

Mr. OVERMAN. Would that include a joint resolution extending appropriations, in case some appropriation bill does not pass?

Mr. KERN. It would include that.

Mr. OVERMAN. If it includes that I shall not object.

Mr. SHEPPARD. I want the Senator to make one other exception. I want to present the report of the committee to investigate the excise board in the District. I will be able to make that report early in the morning.

Mr. KERN. Can you not make it after 9 o'clock?

Mr. SHEPPARD. Yes.

Mr. KERN. This will only extend to 9 o'clock, so that Senators here may go away for awhile.

Mr. FALL. I do not understand that if a conference report is under consideration at 9 o'clock it will be laid aside.

Mr. KERN. Oh, no; not at all; but that nothing except conference reports will be considered between now and 9 o'clock, and any joint resolution, of course, that would provide for an extension of appropriations.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Then the request for a unanimous-consent agreement, as the Chair understands it, is that until the hour of 9 o'clock a. m. shall have arrived nothing shall be considered by the Senate of the United States save and except conference reports or joint resolutions that may have to do with continuing appropriations.

Mr. KERN. For the extension of appropriations.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Before consent is given may I make a statement? I can not get my bill in, but I have two concurrent resolutions that I desire to present to the Senate, and I will have to ask unanimous consent for that. May I ask for it?

Mr. KERN. Can the Senator not present those after 9 o'clock in the morning—between then and 12 o'clock?

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I undoubtedly can do so between 9 and 12—three hours—but they will disappear as rapidly as the morning dew. I now desire to offer the first joint resolution.

Mr. FALL. I object.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Then I desire to offer the other resolution.

Mr. FALL. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. God knows I have fallen on evil times. [Laughter.]

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN]?

Mr. O'GORMAN. I desire to say a word. It is an important matter that the Senator from New Jersey desires to bring before the Senate. He has treated every one of his colleagues to-night, as always, with the greatest courtesy. I do not recall of his making a single objection to any request for unanimous consent, and I think he might be accorded the same treatment that he has extended so liberally to other Senators. What harm can come from allowing the Senator to introduce his resolutions? It will take but a moment.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. May I ask unanimous consent, then, Mr. President——

Mr. GRONNA. I have no right, of course, to agree to anything of that kind.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, there have been several conference reports before this body concerning which other Senators have been just as insistent and just as anxious to be heard upon and to have considered as those who are interested in the Indian appropriation bill are upon having the conference report upon that bill considered. They have been just as impatient at continuous interruptions interjected by other Senators. I object to the request of the Senator from New Jersey.

PAYMENT OF EMPLOYEES.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I desire to introduce a joint resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. FALL. I withdraw my objection, Mr. President.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 245) providing for the payment of salaries of officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives in full for the month of March, 1915, on the 4th day of March, 1915, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the Secretary of the Senate and the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and they hereby are, authorized and directed to pay to the officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives borne on the annual rolls, including clerks to Members and Delegates and Resident Commissioners of the House of Representatives, their salaries in full for the month of March, 1915, on the 4th day of March, 1915.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to be engrossed for a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PANAMA-PACIFIC EXPOSITION.

Mr. MARTINE of New Jersey. Now, I desire to offer a concurrent resolution.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the President of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives be, and they are hereby, authorized to appoint a committee of 10 Senators and 15 Representatives of the Sixty-third Congress to attend the Panama-Pacific International Exposition at San Francisco, Cal., and the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego, Cal., and that the expenses of said committee be paid out of the contingent funds of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of the Committee on Industrial Expositions of the Senate and the chairman of the Committee on Industrial Arts and Expositions of the House of Representatives.

Mr. FALL. I object to that.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made.

ORDER OF BUSINESS.

Mr. KERN. I renew my request for a unanimous-consent agreement as to what measures shall be considered between now and 9 o'clock.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request for unanimous consent?

Mr. MYERS. I wish to get some information. Does the request imply that if a conference report is being debated at 9 o'clock it must be laid aside?

The VICE PRESIDENT. No; it does not. It means that nothing else shall be considered until then. Is there objection?

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, will the Chair state the request for unanimous consent?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Indiana requests unanimous consent that until the hour of 9 o'clock on this, the 4th day of March, 1915, nothing shall be considered by the Senate of the United States except conference reports or joint resolutions proposing to extend appropriations of previous years in cases where pending appropriation bills may have failed to pass the two Houses.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. One question, Mr. President. The language of the request is that "nothing shall be considered." I should like to know whether, under the proposed agreement, committee reports would be barred?

The VICE PRESIDENT. They undoubtedly would be. Nothing could be received except conference reports or joint resolutions proposing to continue appropriations.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. That is all right.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I want to say that I understand the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN] will withdraw the objection which he made a while ago to Calendar No. 843, House bill 16029. If it can be done, I should like to have that matter disposed of.

Mr. PENROSE. I object to that bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is the unanimous-consent agreement to be entered into?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, a parliamentary inquiry.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator will state it.

Mr. GRONNA. I want to discuss the Indian appropriation bill, and I wish to inquire if that is not before the Senate?

The VICE PRESIDENT. It is before the Senate. Does the Senator object to the proposed unanimous-consent agreement?

Mr. GRONNA. I do not object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Very well. Then the Chair will again inquire if there is objection to the proposed agreement?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, there is a resolution from the House on the Secretary's desk now, and if I can get that disposed of I will not object.

Mr. PENROSE. What is it?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. A joint resolution that does not involve any expenditure on the part of the Government.

Mr. PENROSE. What is it about?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. It provides for the attendance of Senators and Representatives at the opening of a great public work on the Columbia River, without involving any expense to the Government. It has passed the House and is only a few lines long.

SEVERAL SENATORS. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from Oregon object to the request for unanimous consent?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I will object; yes, sir.

Mr. ASHURST. Regular order!

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota will proceed.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, if the Senator will allow me, I renew my request for unanimous consent that until 9 o'clock this morning no business be taken up by the Senate except conference reports and joint resolutions extending appropriations.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the agreement is entered into.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I think it would be well enough to state that if Senators leave the Chamber they should understand that if a quorum is called for they will be sent for.

Mr. PENROSE. As I understand, a quorum is never called for under a unanimous-consent agreement of this kind. It would be disloyalty to the unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. KERN. I think that is true.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I do not consent to that.

Mr. ASHURST. I call for the regular order.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I am very much opposed to the adoption of the conference report, and I think there may be a call for a quorum.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, I make the point of order that the unanimous-consent agreement has already been entered into.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is no doubt about the fact that it has already been entered into.

Mr. JAMES. If the Senator from Mississippi feels that under the agreement he has a right to make the point of no quorum, that is a matter for him to decide; but the agreement has already been entered into, and it is too late now to object to it.

Mr. VARDAMAN. There was nothing in the agreement that implied an obligation upon a Senator not to call for a quorum.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair is not construing what the agreement means.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20150) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, if I may have the attention of the Senate for a few minutes, no more important measure has been before the Congress than the Indian bill. The Indians are the wards of this Government. It is our duty to administer their affairs the same as we would our own. This bill, as I understand, as it has been reported to the Senate by the conferees, has been changed in many respects. It is impossible, of course, to know from the report that is read from the desk, indicating by numbers that certain paragraphs have either been changed or stricken out, just what the effect of the change is; but I have been informed that certain provisions in the bill which, in my judgment, are of the greatest importance to the Indians have been stricken out.

Every year we appropriate large sums of money for the support of the Indians of this country, for the maintenance of their schools. I am sorry to say that the affairs of the Indians have not been administered as economically and as wisely as they should have been administered. Large sums of money have been wasted, not by the Indian but by the white man. Vast sums of money are being appropriated every year, and a large portion of the appropriation is being used by the white man in the administration of Indian Affairs.

It has been said by men who have given the Indian question careful study that the Indian has received less than 10 per cent of the vast appropriations made by Congress during these many years. Is it any wonder that the Indian is dissatisfied? Can anyone blame the Indian for losing confidence in those who have taken it upon themselves to administer the affairs of the Indian as they would their own when we find that millions upon millions of dollars of the Indians' money have been spent and practically wasted by the white man?

I believe the time has come when the people of this country should know that the affairs of the Indian are not being administered as wisely and as economically as they could be and as they should be administered. There seems to be a feeling prevalent in some sections of the country that the question is, How much of the Indians' money can be expended every year?

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I am interested in the remarks of the Senator, and I should like to ask him a question.

Mr. GRONNA. I yield to the Senator from Missouri.

Mr. REED. What is there wrong about this bill? What is there about this bill that proposes to expend the Indians' money in an improper way?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, if the Senator will be patient and wait for a few minutes, at least, or perhaps an hour, I shall try my best to explain it.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, that leads me, if the Senator will indulge me, to this sort of a suggestion——

Mr. GRONNA. I can only yield for a question. I do not wish to be taken off the floor.

Mr. REED. I do not want to take the Senator off the floor.

Mr. GRONNA. I want to ask the Chair to protect my right to the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. LEA of Tennessee in the chair). The Chair will protect the Senator.

Mr. REED. I will put what I have to say in the form of an interrogatory.

Mr. GRONNA. The Senator from Missouri knows that I gladly yield to him if I do not lose the floor.

Mr. REED. We have been here all of one day and one night, now another night, and it is almost morning, at the risk of the health of some of the older Senators in this body and at the great inconvenience of everybody. I want to ask the Senator if he proposes at this hour, at this time of the session, to undertake to hold up this bill and talk it to death? If he does, I want to know about it, because I want to go home and go to bed. I think we ought to be frank.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I want to be perfectly frank. I do not know how much time I shall take. I have stated to some Senators that I may take one hour, I may take two or three hours, I may take more.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I do not think the Senator thinks there is an excuse for taking one hour or two hours to discuss this bill at this stage.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I want to say to the Senator from Missouri, with the utmost respect, that if I did not think so I should not attempt to discuss it. There were provisions in this bill that have been stricken out, as I understand, that should not have been stricken out.

Mr. REED. Of course, if the Senator intends to point out serious defects in the bill, and that is his purpose, I am willing to sit here and wait, and I am willing to listen. I know that the Senator is one of the fairest men in the Senate, and one of the fairest men I ever met. I say that to him frankly and without and attempt to flatter him.

Mr. GRONNA. I am obliged to the Senator for that.

Mr. REED. But I have some respect for my physical comfort and my physical health. I know that now any two men or any one man with reasonable vitality can kill any bill he wants to, and I am just begging the Senator to tell us whether he is really discussing this matter with the hope of converting some people and changing some views and changing opinions in regard to the bill or whether, as a matter of fact, he simply proposes to keep on and talk until the time runs out.

Mr. GRONNA. No, Mr. President; I want to say frankly that I am not. It is possible to have this bill changed. It is possible to make a few changes in it and make it a much better bill than it is.

Mr. REED. Oh, certainly. I suppose that is true of every bill.

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; and it is my purpose to point out some of the defects of this bill.

Mr. REED. I know; but the time for debate ended long ago, except, of course, that if the conferees have done something of an extreme and extraordinary and outrageous character it is proper to point it out. If that is pointed out, I am sure the Senate is in no frame of mind to permit radical and unusual changes to be made. I am not; but I do insist that there is a sort of human right in this matter. We ought not to be kept here from our beds, from our comfort; we ought not to be compelled to stay here at the risk of a vote being taken and no quorum disclosed, when, as a matter of fact, a vote is not going to be taken. I think the Senator ought to tell us what is the matter with this bill, and in a few words.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, if the Senator from Missouri will permit me, I shall try to proceed in my own way and inform the Senate as to what in my judgment is wrong with this bill. Of course it may not appeal to the Senator from Missouri. I hope I may be able in my feeble way to point out some of the defects and that the Senator from Missouri will join me even at this late hour in an effort to see that justice is done to these poor helpless people. The Senator from Missouri must know, and every Senator here must know, that I do not occupy the floor—I never have occupied the floor of this body for the purpose of filibustering.

Mr. REED. I think that is true.

Mr. GRONNA. And the Senator from Missouri can not put anything in the RECORD to make it show that that is my purpose.

Mr. REED. No; I have not tried to. I have tried to be just to the Senator, as I have always found that the Senator has tried to be just to everybody.

Mr. GRONNA. I believe that. The Senator from Missouri has always been kind to me.

Mr. REED. I am asking the question for this reason: If the Senator is going to discuss the conference report to show us where it has gone far astray, I can see the reason for that. If he is going to discuss this general bill, I do insist that in my judgment the time for that sort of debate, while legally it is here, has in fact really passed. We ought not to be doing it at 4 o'clock in the morning. That should have been done about four weeks ago.

I am talking with the sufferance and by the kindness of the Senator. I hope the Senator will point out to us the defects in the conference report. I do not care anything about what happened before that.

Mr. GRONNA. The Senator from Missouri is always a fair man. The Senator from Missouri knows that the bill has just been reported from the conference committee, and I have had no opportunity to examine or discuss it. This is the first time

I have had the opportunity to discuss the bill in its present form.

Mr. REED. Oh, yes; I understand that. The conferees have made some changes. The bill up to the point of those changes has been discussed ad nauseum, and it seems to me that we ought to confine ourselves to that. I hope the Senator will not keep us here to discuss the bill in general.

Mr. GRONNA. I want to say to the Senator from Missouri that the Committee on Indian Affairs held very extensive hearings on this bill. We have been sitting for weeks and for months taking testimony from people who are interested in Indian affairs. Those hearings are printed. Those hearings are the best testimony that can be produced in this or in any other body, and I propose, as I said a moment ago, in my own way to present this question to the Senate, in the hope that even at this late hour the Members of this body will join me in sending this report back to conference and making it a better bill than it now is.

Mr. REED. Let me ask the Senator one further question.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota further yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. REED. The question is on another matter.

Mr. GRONNA. I am afraid that I——

Mr. REED. No; it is on another matter. I am sure the Senator will yield for that purpose.

Mr. GRONNA. I am afraid I may be accused of conducting a filibuster.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. GRONNA. I yield for a question.

Mr. REED. Is the principal objection of the Senator based on the fact that the Choctaw Indians are not included? Is that the principal ground?

Mr. GRONNA. Oh, Mr. President, if the Senator will take the time that I have taken to investigate this bill, he will not ask me that question.

Mr. REED. Well, I might ask it anyway. I simply want to say this, if the Senator will permit me: I have on every occasion voted to include the Choctaw Indians. I do not know whether I was right in that or not; but if the friends of the Choctaw Indians propose now to filibuster this bill to death. I give them notice that the same tactics will be employed while I am in the Senate against the Choctaw Indians. My patience is exhausted with everything in the form of a filibuster.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. GRONNA. I yield for a question.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, I just want to say to my friend from Missouri [Mr. REED], who was kind enough to vote last evening for the amendment offered by me in the interest of the Mississippi Choctaws, that, of course, I would not have him or any other Senator vote contrary to his judgment about anything; but there is a principle involved in this matter which commands my attention. The right of the Mississippi Choctaw Indians is at issue; it is at stake; and as the immediate representative of those people I regard it as my duty to use every legitimate means within my power to prevent this rape of their rights. I am not going to do anything that I am not justified under the rules in doing—the rules governing debate in this body and the consideration of all questions before this body—but because Senators happen to be tired—and we are all sick and tired—because it is late and the hours are few and the time is short when the session must die is no reason in the world why we should not stay here and do whatever may be necessary to protect the rights of a certain class of people whose rights, I think, are being outraged and neglected in this bill as it comes back from the conference committee. Let us not follow the shadow and thereby lose the substance. It were better that Congress be held here in session indefinitely than that the rights of one of the humblest citizens of the Republic should be violated.

Mr. GRONNA. I believe that is true, Mr. President.

Now, Mr. President, I believe I may be permitted to say that I fully realize the position I am taking in taking up the time of the Senate at this particular time to discuss this question. I dislike very much to do it for various reasons. I know that the Senators from Oklahoma are deeply interested in this question and that they want the bill passed. That is one of the reasons why I dislike to oppose it. There are Senators here from other States where a great many Indians live. Those Senators are anxious that this bill should be passed. For that reason I want to say it is not a pleasure for me to take this position now and oppose certain provisions in the bill.

Mr. President, any man with ordinary intelligence, after listening to the testimony before the Committee on Indian Affairs from men who represent Indians, from lawyers—some of the most distinguished lawyers in the country—but above all from the Indians themselves, can not help but form some opinions and have some ideas of his own whether or not a measure that is being proposed is wise or unwise. It is very difficult for me, Mr. President, to intelligently discuss the measure, because I do not have before me the bill in its present form. I realize that it is impossible to get it in the form that it would be if it was enacted into law as it is being presented here. But when you propose to take millions of dollars of these poor people's money and distribute it, to the exclusion perhaps of hundreds of less fortunate members of the various nations or tribes, I believe, sir, that we should hesitate before we hastily enact legislation of this kind. I know something about the Indians and their life, of their trials and tribulations, because I come from a State where a great many of these people live. These Indians are as intellectual and as honest and as capable, if they are given equal opportunities, as any people on the face of the earth. Not only are they intelligent, but they are honest, and for a class of people who for centuries have been trained in a certain way, living a nomadic life, living by the pursuits of fishing and hunting, they have made greater progress than any other people I know of.

I am not going to address myself to any particular band of Indians. In a bill of this kind it is our duty to take care of all the Indians, no matter to which tribe they belong. We have in the State of North Dakota the Sioux Indians or tribes known as the Sissetons and the Wahpetons, the Chippewas, and two or three other tribes.

What has the white man done for these Indians? A couple of hundred years ago or less, when we first found them on the shores of New England, we began to push them to the West. The white man occupied the land which they had discovered. They were not trained in agricultural pursuits, they were not trained in business the same as we had been trained and the same as we have been trying to educate them.

But, Mr. President, they have made most wonderful progress. We have living examples of these men all over this country. I doubt if the white man for years has made as great progress as have these Indians.

Mr. President, here we have a bill which is supposed to take care of the Indians—to provide for them, to furnish them with schools, to educate them, not only with book education, but to teach them industry, to teach them agriculture.

This bill carries more than $11,000,000. I am not able to say how much of that is taken out of their own tribal funds, but very little is appropriated directly from the Treasury of the United States. It is being charged up to the funds of these Indians. This is money which belongs to them, and I believe it is our duty to exercise the utmost care and invest their money in such a way that it will reflect credit upon us and be of some substantial benefit to them.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. GRONNA. I yield for a question.

Mr. JONES. I agree with what the Senator says, but it has occurred to me that this is based largely upon the condition near my own town, where we have a reservation. If we fail to pass this bill, we will do very great injury. As a matter of fact, on the Yakima Indian Reservation by our failure to provide some money to irrigate their lands and also to start a system of drainage we are likely to do almost irreparable injury to them. I have no doubt the Senator will point out the particular instances in this bill where injustice is done the Indians, but I appreciate that we can not, of course, get everything just as it should be. I suppose the Senator has balanced the injury that is likely to result from a failure to pass this bill with the injury which will be done by the particular provisions in it he has in mind. I want to suggest that a failure to pass this bill will do very great injury to the Indians, some on reservations in my State, for instance, and we ought to be very careful in that way not to do great injury to them.

Mr. GRONNA. The Senator says we will do great injury to the Indians. Of course, we may delay certain irrigation projects, we may delay the construction of dams which are to be constructed for the purpose of carrying or storing water, but I want to say to the Senator from Washington it has been charged that on many of these projects the white man will benefit more, perhaps, than the Indian.

Mr. JONES. Of course that may have been charged, but, as I said, simply having in mind my own locality, it occurred to me that the Senator should point out the particular injurious provisions of the bill. I have no doubt that he will do it before he gets through.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I shall again state that I will, in my own way, point out the defects in this bill and make such comments on it as I think I should make in order to get the Senator from Washington and other Senators to join with me and make this a better bill.

We talk about helping the Indians. Whose money are we expending? We are expending the Indians' money. We are taking the Indians' money and constructing great irrigation projects. We are taking the Indians' money and constructing dams for the purpose of storing water. Are we doing it exclusively for the benefit of the Indian? No; I do not believe it can be truthfully said that a single project is being constructed wholly for the benefit of the Indian.

Mr. President, of what value is it to the Indians to construct great irrigation projects when they are living upon their allotments destitute, without horses, without cattle, without farm machinery, without seed, yes, without proper food and clothing?

Yes, Mr. President; it takes more than the construction of an irrigation project to make the white man prosperous.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield further to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. GRONNA. In a moment. We certainly should not expect any more from the Indians than we do from the white man. Neither the Senator from Washington nor any other Senator can show to me that we are benefiting the Indian when we take these large sums of money to construct irrigation projects, when they are without equipment; yes, when they are without food. I yield to the Senator for a question.

Mr. JONES. Of course, I agree with the Senator that they should have equipment and food, especially equipment so far as they will make use of it, but I think the Senator leaves an impression he does not intend to convey. The money that would be expended for the irrigation of land on the Yakima Indian Reservation, for instance, is expended entirely for the improvement of Indian lands. Of course, some of that land has been held already, has been sold already to the white man, but prospective irrigation has made the price higher, and by that means the Indian has realized more than he would without this project. So the primary purpose, of course, is to improve the Indian's property and the Indian's land itself.

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; it is the purpose to improve the Indian's property. I can not ask the Senator a question, because that would probably take me off the floor, but I will make this statement, and I do not believe it can be successfully contradicted. The Indians who are living on these irrigation projects—where millions of their own money have been expended, charged up against the Indian fund, reimbursable—we can show have not made any great progress, so far as agriculture, or so far as their being able to carry on farming and make a profit on their investment, is concerned. I do not believe there is a Senator on this floor who can show me where an Indian has made one single cent upon the investment made. All the great amount of money has been taken out of the Indian fund for the use of these irrigation projects, and I shall name some of the projects later on, Mr. President. In this very bill there is $700000 for one project alone. I should not object to that if you would leave provisions in the bill that would safeguard the Indian's property, but, in my opinion, this bill does not protect the Indian. I find no fault with Senators or with others who are anxious to enlarge the irrigation projects, but I will make the statement that it has not been shown to the Committee on Indian Affairs that there is any need of the enlargement or the extension of these irrigation projects. I can tell the Senator from Washington, if he will permit me, a better plan. If I had my way, I should not invest the Indians' money in these projects the way in which investments are being made.

The first thing I would do with the Indian would be to teach him how to manage his farm on a small scale. I would give the Indians a vocational education. Then, instead of expending millions of dollars of the Indian's funds, I would buy for him some cattle and horses. I would teach him how to take care of that stock. I would teach him how to market his own products after he had raised them.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Washington?

Mr. GRONNA. Not just now, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota declines to yield.

Mr. JONES. Right there should come in what I want to say.

Mr. GRONNA. I will yield for a question.

Mr. JONES. I merely want to suggest to the Senator that I do not combat the views of the Senator except as they may apply to a certain locality. I think the Senator's idea is right about teaching the Indians.

Mr. GRONNA. I am very glad to know that. I have hopes now. I have not really commenced my argument, and I am glad to know that so able a Senator as the Senator from Washington agrees with me that what I am advocating here is the right method.

Mr. JONES. I do.

Mr. GRONNA. I have hopes now of converting the Senator from Washington to join me in sending back this report to the committee of conference and making the bill what it should be.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I do not say that I need conversion. As the Senator points out the difficulties or the imperfections of our system I might heartily agree with him, but I want to suggest that on the Yakima Indian Reservation, for instance, the land is absolutely worthless, absolutely unproductive, without irrigation; so that the Senator could not exercise his plan there without first providing irrigation, because otherwise the land is an absolute desert. Of course in Montana, in the Dakotas, in some other States, and in most other places where they can raise crops without irrigation, the plan of the Senator can be started; and that is the plan that ought to be followed. I agree fully with the Senator as to that, but his plan could not be operated on reservations where the lands are an absolute desert and where there must first be irrigation, where it is absolutely essential.

Mr. GRONNA. I thank the Senator for what he has said, and I am very glad to know that he agrees with me in what I have said. The only purpose I have in discussing this bill is the same purpose which the Senator from Washington has and which every other Senator in this Chamber has. It is only a question of difference of opinion. I do not claim to be more honest in my opinion than is any other Senator, but I have attended these meetings for nearly two months. I have studied, at least to a limited extent, the Indian question for many years. I have lived among the Indians; I know a little something about some of these tribes. I believe that there are no people on the face of this globe who possess keener intellects than these very Indians that I am trying to assist. I know that the Indian becomes a valuable citizen if he is given the opportunity.

Mr. President, I have never favored the idea of appropriating large sums of money in connection with our Indian affairs; and when I say large sums of money I ought to add that it is the Indian's money; that it is to be taken from funds that belong to the tribe. The white man has not lost anything on the Indian; the Indian has lost because the white man has failed to do his duty. The Indian has not robbed the white man. That is more than we can say for the white man or of his conduct toward the Indian.

Mr. President, in this very bill, in my humble judgment, there are provisions which I believe, if enacted into law, would do at least a certain class of Indians an injustice.

The senior Senator from Mississippi [Mr. WILLIAMS] has eloquently described the Indians of his State, and I have heard him upon this floor and upon the floor of the other Chamber tell about the injustice that has been done him. We need not, however, go to the State of Mississippi to find a case where there is a possibility that we may do an injustice to some of the people of that nation by passing this bill. We have an abundance of testimony here, Mr. President, upon that very question.

No man can say that the Mississippi Choctaws do not have an equitable right; no man can truthfully say that these people should not be cared for. It has been contended, and perhaps justly so, that they do not have a legal right; but, Mr. President, they have an equitable right, and it is not too late to do justice to them now.

We are about to distribute four or five million dollars, not of the white man's money but of the Indian's money, and it is possible that if the money should be distributed according to the provisions of the bill as it has been reported by the committee of conference, a great injustice would be done to some of these people. Nobody knows better than the two Senators from Oklahoma the condition of these Indians. The Senators may say, "Leave those affairs to us," but they do not say that with regard to our Indians in North Dakota. They have the right to say how the Indians of North Dakota shall be treated, and not only a right, but it is their duty as Senators, as guardians of these people, to protect their property and to see that when any money is distributed it is distributed for the best possible use.

The white men, since the very first time they found the Indians in this country, have profited by taking possession of lands and of property that would have belonged to the Indians if they had been educated, if they had been trained the same as the white man. We have driven them from one State to another; we have driven them from the best agricultural lands of this country into rough, mountainous, and hilly countries, and whenever one of these irrigation projects is to be constructed or extended the white man is generally there and he gets a share. These projects are not being built with the white man's money; they are being built with the Indian's money, the expense being charged up to the Indian's funds. It is their money that you take; it is not the white man's money.

Mr. President, these poor people who have been helpless are gradually coming to the front and are making wonderful progress in every possible way. When the history of the Indians is fully written I do not believe that the white man will gain any credit from his dealings with them. I do not believe that the white man will look with satisfaction upon what he has done or consider that he has achieved anything to his honor.

I want to give a concrete illustration. A year or two ago a Wahpeton Indian came to me and said, "There is buried in the Congressional Cemetery an Indian chief, Scarlet Crow." He told me the story about this wonderfully courageous man who had protected the white man at the sacrifice of his own life, and all that he asked of me was to get an appropriation in the small amount of $100 to erect a tombstone over the grave of that noble Indian.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. GRONNA. I will yield when I have finished my sentence. Last year that small appropriation of $100 was refused by the committee of conference. This very Indian chief was for years a scout upon the plains on the western prairies; he faced dangers that perhaps no white man would face, and he was murdered by people of his own tribe because they said he showed too much loyalty to the white man; and yet, Mr. President, we refused to erect a small headstone over his grave costing the Government the small amount of $100! That is an illustration of the extent to which we go to deny the Indian his rights.

Mr. ASHURST. Will the Senator now yield to me for a moment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.

Mr. ASHURST. I may have been under a misapprehension, but I understood the distinguished Senator to say that the conference committee on this bill has stricken out amendment numbered 99 regarding the appropriation of $100 for a tombstone for the great Sioux Indian chief. I am very certain, if my memory serves me correctly, that that amendment was not stricken out.

Mr. GRONNA. The Senator misunderstood me. I did not say that it had been stricken out this year. I do not know as to that; but I say it was stricken out last year. I have no fault to find with the chairman of the committee. He did everything that could be done by anyone to retain the provision. I know that.

Mr. ASHURST. If the Senator will permit me, I happened to be on the conference committee last year, and I contested for a long time in behalf of that very appropriation; and I am very glad to say that we were successful this time in retaining that appropriation. It should have been done before.

Mr. GRONNA. I am very glad to know that. It was only done, as the chairman knows, after a very hard fight. If it had been $100,000, I should have found no fault; but it is different when the small amount of $100 is asked by the heirs and by the friends of one of those courageous men who have done such valiant service for the white man in our country. I know something about those fights in the early days in southern Minnesota. I know something about what Scarlet Crow had to do when they had the massacre at New Ulm, Minn. This very man took his life into his hands, and he did what he could to protect the white man.

Mr. President, I said a moment ago that when the history of the Indian, together with the history of the white man, and how the Indian had been treated by the white man, comes to be written, I do not believe it will be any credit to us. The time has come when we must realize that these people are our wards, and we should perform our duty in a way that should be a credit to us as guardians of these men's lives and property.

Mr. President, the Senate passed a bill a short time since permitting the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians to take to the Court of Claims a claim which they had against the Government of the United States for violation of the treaties of 1851 and 1852 and 1862, I believe. It passed this body. It went to the other House; and what was the excuse for not passing it over there? I am told that the claim was made that it should not have been referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs, but it should have been referred to the Committee on Claims. It met with technical opposition. It was claimed that the Committee on Indian Affairs had no jurisdiction to decide whether a case dealing with a treaty, which the Indians claim was violated, should be acted upon by the Committee on Indian Affairs, a committee which has the right to deal with all Indian questions.

If the Government of the United States has failed to pay these Indians for the land which they owned along the Minnesota River, it should pay them; and whether that bill had been referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs or the Committee on Claims, it should have been sent to the Court of Claims, and that is all they asked.

No, Mr. President, we can not say that we have given these men the consideration to which they are entitled. We can not go before any tribunal and say that it is proper to refuse to do justice to these men simply because of the pride of a House committee in claiming jurisdiction when that bill was referred to another committee.

Mr. President, I do not admit that that bill should have gone to the Committee on Claims. I do not admit, sir, that that bill had any business to go anywhere other than to the Committee on Indian Affairs, because that committee deals with every question pertaining to Indian affairs in all its phases.

The members of the committee of conference could possibly find no other fault with the proposition than to make a claim that the bill was referred to the wrong committee. Senators, is it doing justice to the Indians of this country to deny them their day in court? If my memory serves me right, that treaty provided that these Indians should have certain lands along the Minnesota River on either side of the river. They did not put in the number of miles, of course, but they gave it in their own language and in their own way. The treaty provided that they should be given lands on either side of the river the distance of a half day's journey with a swift horse. Now, they were given 15 miles, and you gentlemen who live in the Indian country and who know something about the Indians will know whether or not that is doing justice to the Indians.

If the Indian had had the same opportunity that we have had he would be perfectly capable of taking care of himself. There would be no Indian here asking Congress for protection. The Indian has demonstrated to my satisfaction that he is perfectly capable of taking care of himself whenever he is given an equal opportunity. But, sir, in that very bill, or in the provision which I introduced in the committee and which the committee incorporated in this very bill, all that I asked in that amendment was to permit these Indians to take their claim to the Court of Claims and there have it adjudicated; and yet men who do know something about Indian affairs, men whose hearts ought to throb with sympathy and an earnest desire to do justice to the Indian, turned down that proposition, and, as I understand it, if I am not misinformed, it is stricken out of this bill; and yet you ask me why I am opposed to this bill!

Sir, I have taken an oath to do my duty while I am a Member of this body, and I shall, regardless of consequences, perform that duty to the best of my ability. I feel in my heart that a gross injustice has been done to the Wahpetons and Sissetons when you refuse them permission to take an honest, legitimate claim to the courts of this country and there have it prosecuted. They would be satisfied with the findings of that court, but this committee of conference has seen fit to deny the poor Indian the right to have his day in court.

I find no fault because the Senator from Missouri asked me why I was going to take time at this late hour to discuss this bill. I wish the Senator from Missouri would stay here and listen, for I believe I could demonstrate to him before I close, the same as I believe I have already demonstrated to the Senator from Washington, that there is at least some merit in the opposition I am making against this bill.

Why, Mr. President, even an ordinary scrub farmer could talk for weeks and months upon this bill. It does not require a lawyer or a trained oratory to find fault with the provisions in this bill. No, Mr. President, I want the country to know that I am pleading for justice, and I shall not be satisfied until justice is done to these Indians, many of whom are living in my State and many of whom are living in adjoining States.

Is it any wonder, Mr. President, that during the early days of this country there were Indian uprisings? Is it any wonder that these men rebelled when they were driven from one place to another, from the fertile valleys of the East and from the great plains of the Middle West, and from there to the mountains? Anything was good enough for the Indian. Why, Mr. President, we have sent the Indian to places where we would be unwilling to go ourselves. We have sent these people who have not had the opportunity that we have had to places where no white man would want to go, and yet you find fault with me because I am criticizing this bill! Of course anyone has a perfect right to criticize any Senator, but I want the criticism to be just and honest, and based upon facts, and not merely upon a guess that because we are going to take some of the time of the Senate to discuss this measure we must necessarily trespass upon the time of the Senate and be termed filibusters.

We have in our State 600 Indian pupils who are being denied school facilities. I testified before the committee myself—and I believe my testimony stands unimpeached—that there are at least 600 of those Indians who are being denied the opportunity to get an education such as we are giving our own children; and yet you find fault because we take some time to criticize this bill!

Mr. President, there never was a more opportune time in the history of our country to begin to do the right thing for these men than there is now. I have heard much about Indians in various other States. I have heard much about the Indians in Oklahoma. I do not claim to know as much about the Indians in Oklahoma as some of those people who live in Oklahoma, but I do think that I am just as capable as anyone in Oklahoma of doing justice by those people. I do claim, sir, that I am just as capable as anyone who lives in Oklahoma, and that I am just as anxious as anyone who lives in Oklahoma, to do justice to those Indians.

The records show that more than 2,000 of these Indians who live in Oklahoma were not placed upon the rolls for reasons which I will disclose by reading these hearings. The Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] offered an amendment to the bill, and it was incorporated in the bill. That amendment, sir, would protect these two thousand three hundred and odd Indians if it were enacted into law.

I understand that that amendment has been stricken out. If this provision had been enacted into law, it would not have opened the rolls. It would simply give the Secretary of the Interior the authority and the right, and it would direct him to do justice to those who were entitled to be recognized. Yet we find men here, standing upon this floor, asking why we are opposing this bill. I say to you, sir, it would be infinitely better to defeat this bill than to do injustice to these Indians.

Mr. ASHURST. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.

Mr. ASHURST. My friend, the Senator from North Dakota—and I am proud to say it, for I esteem him as a friend—seemed to address his question to me.

Mr. GRONNA. I am just as proud in having the Senator from Arizona for my friend.

Mr. ASHURST. He seemed to address his question to me; and if the Senator asked me the question, I will say——

Mr. GRONNA. I did not address it to the Senator.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator has a right to speak against the bill. He has a right to defeat it, if he can. The Senator can, of course, defeat the bill if he wishes to.

Mr. GRONNA. I beg the Senator's pardon; I did not address that question to the Senator from Arizona. I do not believe the Senator from Arizona is guilty or had anything to do with striking out that provision. I do not believe he had.

Mr. ASHURST. Will the Senator yield to me further?

Mr. GRONNA. I yield.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator refers to the per capita payment amendment put on in the Senate.

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. ASHURST. I think I ought to say here—and it is one of the few sentences that I am going to utter on this day in the Senate Chamber—I voted for the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin.

Mr. GRONNA. That was the impression I had about the Senator.

Mr. ASHURST. I said on the floor of the Senate last night that I was in no sense hostile to that amendment. But, Mr. President, here is a bill with 171 amendments. Senators ought not to try to defeat a bill simply because they can not have their way on all the 171 amendments. Many amendments were stricken out of this bill in conference over my objection. Some amendments were stricken out that I think were salutary and valuable amendments.

Mr. GRONNA. Undoubtedly.

Mr. ASHURST. In a conference we can not have our way. This would be a delightful world if every man could have his own way. I could not have my way in the conference. It was either to strike out some of those amendments or defeat the bill.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, there is no difference of opinion as between my good friend from Arizona and myself. It is true, as the Senator from Arizona has said, that we can not get everything we want. That is absolutely true. I have not said that I intended to defeat this bill, but I did say that I believed we would be warranted in defeating this measure if by defeating it we could do justice to the Mississippi Choctaw Indians and to the Choctaws who claim that they were legally entitled to be enrolled. I believe I am within my right when I make that statement.

I know, Mr. President, that the people who are living in those States and in the Indian Territory are anxious that this money should be distributed, and I find no fault with that. Undoubtedly the men who are in business—the banks, and the stores, the merchants, the grocerymen, the butchers—have claims, and it is only right that they should be paid. I find no fault with that, but I do find fault with the unwillingness of Congress to begin right now and treat these men the same as we would want to treat our own children, or the same way that we would want our children treated by the Indians if they were in power.

Mr. President, this bill is full of mistakes. If I had the power, both physical and otherwise, I could talk on it for weeks and months. I have said that there is testimony in the record showing that at least 600 Indian pupils are denied school privileges in my own State. The white man would be unwilling, I say, to accept conditions of that sort, and when we are the guardians of these unfortunate people, who are being denied the privilege of attending school and getting an education, so that they would not have to come to Congress and ask for sympathy and for aid, they have a right to be treated in a way so that they will be capable of governing themselves. Sir, they have the intellect and they have the courage, they have the honesty and the manhood, to become splendid citizens if they are only given the opportunity.

Mr. President, if I had my way, I believe I could invest their money for a better purpose than the building of great irrigation projects. I believe, sir, that the first thing we should do with these men, instead of spending millions of their funds in these projects, where white men get profits more than the Indians, where in many instances the white man's profit is more than that of the Indians—I believe in my humble capacity I would be able to distribute it in a way that would be more far-reaching, in a way that would inure to greater benefit than to spend it upon great irrigation projects. I do not object to the expenditure of their money on projects that are laid out in the right way, where the money is wisely expended, where it will result in substantial benefit to the Indians. I find no fault with that; but you can not take the Indian's money and build great irrigation projects and say that you are helping the Indian. It requires more than irrigation ditches; it requires something more than irrigation ditches to make a community prosperous.

No white man in this country possesses the ability to take care of himself if placed in a country with nothing but these irrigation ditches. It takes something more to bring about prosperity and happiness even to the white man than to build for him with his own money great irrigation projects.

Mr. President, I do not believe that that is a good argument to use, that we are benefiting the Indian by wasting his money in great irrigation projects. In this very bill we have taken millions of dollars of the Indians' money to build irrigation projects where they do not have the equipment to farm the small area of 5 or 10 acres of ground. I believe I would be safe in saying that you could place some of the Senators here in that position, place them out in that country on those irrigation projects without money and without equipment, and they would make a failure. Yet we expect that these men, who are less fortunate than we are, would be capable of taking care of themselves after we had expended millions of dollars of their own money, where they do not possess the means of buying horses, cattle, hogs, and sheep, and equipment on a farm. They live in little houses; many of them live in their tepees; many of them are this very day, as I am told, living in destitution. It has been reported, as the chairman knows, that some of them are starving. Yet I am told that it would be very detrimental to them to stop these extravagant expenditures of millions of dollars to be invested in irrigation ditches and in dams, where we could store water, not for the Indians alone, and I find no particular fault with that if the white man will pay for it as well as the Indian.

But, to begin with, we take the Indian's money. The white man does not invest his money in these irrigation projects. I say that we will take a lease on his land and make him pay the same as the Indian. We could certainly promise the Indian nothing less than that.

Mr. President, the other night I began reading a book of Dr. Morehead which touched upon the right of the Indian, and he portrays it so vividly, so truthfully, that any man who has lived among the Indians will know that he has made no misrepresentations in the history that he has written about the Indians. I do not want to take up the time of the Senate and tell what this great man has written about the Indians, but I will simply say that I believe all his statements about the Indians are absolutely true.

Mr. President, how long would the white man be satisfied with the treatment he accords the Indian? How long would we be satisfied to see our children denied the privileges of attending public schools? Yet, as guardians of these very Indians, we are satisfied to see that this very great injustice is being done to them.

I believe, sir, that the greatest benefit that could be bestowed upon an Indian would be to give him an education—not only a literacy education, book education, but to teach him in the vocations and trades, to teach him business, show him methods, so that he will be able to conduct his own business affairs.

Mr. President, I have many times witnessed what I might truthfully call scandalous transactions. If the Indian raises wheat or raises other grain on his little farm and takes that grain to the elevator, as a rule the white man expects to buy that grain from the Indian cheaper than he buys it from the white man. Any sort of treatment is good enough for the poor Indian.

Mr. President, the time has come to call a halt on that sort of business. I am just as anxious as is anyone else to get appropriations for the Indians in my State; but, sir, I do not want to get appropriations unless they will inure to the benefit of the Indians. I shall never ask for a dollar of the Indian's money to be expended in my State unless I firmly believe that it will be for the best interests of the Indian, that it will make his life easier, that it will help to educate him, and that it will improve his condition.

Mr. President, I think I realize as much as anyone how anxious some of these men are that these appropriations shall be made; I certainly find no fault with anyone for wanting these appropriations made; but I believe we have the right, and I believe, sir, we should exercise the right, to discuss these questions and to satisfy ourselves as to whether or not the money is being wisely expended. I find no fault with you, sir, for asking for these appropriations. No man has a right to find fault with me because, according to my own convictions and according to my best opinion, I believe that if we enact this bill into law it will do a great injustice to hundreds, yes, to thousands, of Indians.

Mr. President, it is not a pleasant duty for me to disappoint Senators, and I am glad to say that every Senator here is my friend—or, at least, I am his friend. It is a very unpleasant task for me, I want to say, to delay the passage of this bill for one single moment, but we must act according to our own convictions.

I am thoroughly convinced that this bill should be changed; and I am thoroughly convinced that it should be changed, because I know that it is possible to change it. We would not take the risk with our own money that we are taking here with the Indians' money. No white man, whether he be a business man or a professional man, would risk his own funds in this way; he would let some one else spend the 90 per cent as against the 10 per cent. I am not sure that that is correct, but at least a large portion of the appropriations in the administration of Indian affairs, the most of this money, does not go to the Indians; the white man uses it up for salaries, railroad fares, sleeping cars, Pullman car fares, and so forth. The poor Indian does not ride in Pullman cars; he is mighty glad to have an opportunity of riding in a smoking car; but we take his money, and I say now, as I have said on many other occasions, that we are extravagantly expending the Indian money. I believe this bill carries over $11,000,000; and I have always believed that most of it was Indian money; it is not money that belongs to us. I notice that we are very careful in making everything reimbursable. We are just as careful in making it reimbursable until expended as we are in making it reimbursable.

Mr. ASHURST. Will the Senator yield to me?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. GRONNA. I do.

Mr. ASHURST. In the conference last evening over and over again the Senate conferees moved to strike out the words "to be immediately available"; and many times the motions were carried, thus striking out the very words against which the Senator inveighs, to wit, "to be immediately available" and "remain available until expended." I desire that the Senate conferees have at least some small meed or measure of justice.

Mr. GRONNA. Of course, I accept the statement of the Senator. I know that he would not state anything but what is a fact; I know him well and favorably. Of course, I do not know about all the changes that have been made in the bill.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield further?

Mr. GRONNA. I am only referring to this incidentally, but what I am talking about now is amendments which have been stricken out here, which are of great importance in the administration of the affairs of the Indian.

Mr. ASHURST. Would the Senator be willing to vote on this conference report, say, at 8 o'clock?

Mr. GRONNA. If the Senator will help me to change some of the provisions that I shall point out—I do not refer to any appropriations, but to change some of the legislation or some of the amendments that were inserted before it left this body—I should be glad to vote at any time for the bill.

Mr. ASHURST. I should be delighted to assist the Senator at any time in changing some of these provisions, and I trust I violate no propriety when I say that I voted, and so did some other Senate conferees, to change some of these provisions; but we could not overcome certain situations and we could not do impossible things. It is impossible to change the provisions now.

Mr. GRONNA. I was quite sure the Senator from Arizona would do that. I have served with him long enough in this body to know his purpose to do his duty as a Senator, and to do it honestly as well as ably; but, Mr. President, we have the right to call attention to the defects in this bill. That is the only right that I claim; but, more than that, it is not only a privilege but it is a solemn duty upon us as servants of the people and as guardians of the Indian to see that he is properly cared for and to see that no advantage is taken of him by the white man.

Mr. President, there are Senators who are unable to attend the sessions of the Senate who, I know, would oppose this bill if it were possible for them to be here, because I know how vigorously and how earnestly they have protested against some of the very provisions that have been inserted in this bill. I feel a certain amount of responsibility, because they are not able to be here on account of their physical condition, and so I feel it to be my duty, in my feeble way, to call attention to at least some of the defects of this bill; and, sir, I do not believe this bill would pass this body in its present form if some of those Senators were able to be here.

You tell me, sir, that we can not get everything we want. That is true; but why should we not have some feelings for our fellow Senators? It was well known to the committee of conference that very many of us were opposed to some of the provisions which you have incorporated in this bill and that a large majority favored provisions that have been stricken out of the bill. It is no secret, I say to that committee, that Senators who are here and Senators who are not able to be here would protest in a more eloquent and a more vigorous way than I am able to do; but I shall do what I can in my own feeble way, and then I shall feel that I have discharged my duty.

We have no right to disregard the wishes of the Indian; we have no right to say that anything is good enough for the Indian. We are not performing our duty when we do that.

Mr. President, any white man who takes any interest at all in the Indian and who has a sympathy for the human family can not say that the provisions in this bill are just to all the Indians with whom this bill deals. I am not complaining because the Indians in my State have not secured adequate appropriations. I do not believe in appropriating more money for any of the Indians than can be expended wisely, because it is the Indian's money that we are appropriating. If the money were to be taken out of the Treasury of the United States, if it were a gratuitous appropriation, then we might feel that we were doing something for him, because we would be taking the white man's money and giving it to the Indian, but that is not what we are doing. We are reducing the assets of the Indian gradually. Every year his lands are being appropriated, and year after year the white man is entering upon his domain and acquiring the most valuable lands the Indian owns. I do not recollect just now how many thousand Indians there are in the United States—it is in the record here—but there are many Indians in this country to-day, and their holdings are being reduced from year to year; their property is being squandered in many instances. No white man who possesses any ability as a business man would permit his money to be used in the way the Indian's money is being used. For that reason, if for no other, I have the right—and I feel that it is a solemn duty that I should call attention to these matters.

Mr. President, the Senator from Wisconsin can discuss his own amendment more ably than I can, and I shall not discuss it. I shall leave that for the able Senator from Wisconsin. But why should we not be willing to say in this bill that if there are any of these Indians who were entitled to be enrolled, the Secretary of the Interior should have that authority, when we do not in any way open the rolls generally?

Mr. President, I find in the report made by the able Senator from Arizona, the chairman of this committee, that we are appropriating this year in this bill $11,255,865.65. I believe even that amount has been increased somewhat. When the bill passed the House it carried $7,720,124.25. I find that the department's estimates are $9,533,463.20, an increase over the estimates of nearly $2,000,000 and an increase over the amount as passed by the House of nearly $4,000,000. I believe I am correct in stating that a large proportion of the amounts that have been increased is made up of these irrigation projects. I do not believe it is a wise thing to do, so far as the Indian is concerned.

Of course any Senator has a right to say to me: "What interest have you in the Indian any more than any other Senator?" I do not claim, sir, that my interest in the Indian is above that of any other Senator, but I do think I have given this bill some thought and that I understand at least some of the provisions in the bill.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. GRONNA. Yes.

Mr. ASHURST. I want to say, as chairman of the committee, that the committee has no more valuable, thoughtful, patient, and experienced member than the Senator who is now addressing the Senate.

Mr. GRONNA. It is very kind of the Senator to say that.

Mr. ASHURST. While, unfortunately, he and I do not agree on this occasion as to the wise course of procedure, it is proper for me to say that the committee has no more valuable member than the Senator from North Dakota; and I trust I shall not reach a position where, when I am unable to have my own way on 171 amendments, I will destroy the whole bill. I feel that when the distinguished Senator, who is a successful business man and who brings to the Senate a wealth of experience, reflects on how difficult it is for two men to agree wholly on any two propositions he will see how far beyond the domain of imagination it is to think that any conferees could bring in a bill containing 171 amendments, all of them to his satisfaction.

I do hope that by 7 o'clock, say, or 8 o'clock we may proceed to vote upon the question of adopting this conference report. We witnessed in this Chamber in February of this year and a part of January a proceeding which I will not say was a disgraceful proceeding, because that would be unparliamentary, however true—a proceeding commonly called a filibuster—which resulted in the defeat of one of the most, if not the most, beneficent measures proposed to Congress in many years. Are we now, in the closing days of this Congress, which is to be historic because of its arduous labors and vast accomplishments, to listen to talk and discussion merely for the purpose of consuming time? I do not say that the Senator from North Dakota has done so or will do so, but I hope we will not see discussion proceed merely for the purpose of consuming time.

I do appeal to Senators to let us have a vote on this conference report at 7 o'clock, and if, in the judgment of a majority of Senators, the conference report should be rejected, very well. The Senate is master of its own business. If it does not want to approve and accept this conference report, very well. If it wishes to accept and approve and pass the conference report, very well. But Senators do not occupy a position becoming to themselves, Senators will not occupy a position enviable in history, when, because they can not have their way on 171 amendments, they not only defeat this bill, but defeat other beneficent legislation behind this bill and which can not pass unless this conference report is disagreed to or agreed to.

Therefore, in the interest not only of this legislation, but of other beneficent legislation, that is to follow, that should follow but can not follow until this is disposed of, I appeal to my friend, may we not have a vote at 8 o'clock a. m. on this day? Will the Senator be willing to vote at that time?

I thank the Senator for permitting this interruption. I hope he will consent to a vote at 8 o'clock.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

Mr. ASHURST. I do not ask for a unanimous-consent agreement. I am asking the Senator from North Dakota if he would be willing to vote at that time.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I thought the Senator was going to ask for a unanimous-consent agreement.

Mr. ASHURST. Oh, no, no, no!

Mr. GRONNA. In just a moment I will yield to the Senator from Mississippi.

The Senator from Arizona has in his usual courteous, frank, and perfectly proper manner said just what I would expect him to say, but in answer to the Senator from Arizona I will say that I am not demanding that the one hundred and seventy-odd amendments shall be changed. I believe that if the Senator from Arizona and the members of the conference committee will join with me to change half a dozen of these amendments, those who believe as I do and who sympathize with me in this protest would be glad to vote at any time upon this bill, and if the Senator from Arizona would be willing to change, say, perhaps 6 of these 170 amendments I think it would be possible for us to get a vote.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator from Arizona would be glad to do so, but it is not within his power. He strove to the best of his limited capacity to do so.

Mr. GRONNA. I am sure of that. I am sure he did.

Mr. ASHURST. He failed to do so, and the Senator knows that in the closing hours of this Congress it is impossible now to do what the Senator suggests. You can not amend a conference report. It has to be either adopted or rejected in its entirety.

Mr. GRONNA. Oh, Mr. President, I stood on this floor for at least an hour or two upon the immigration bill a couple of years ago, and there were Senators who joined with me and who protested much more vigorously than I did, and we were able to send that conference report back, and I think in a few hours the bill was changed. I do not think it is impossible—that is, providing the conferees are willing to help us to change just a few of the provisions against which we are protesting.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. GRONNA. I gladly yield to the Senator.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I want to suggest, in answer to the criticism or animadversion made by the distinguished Senator from Arizona upon the conduct of the Senator from North Dakota, that the Senator from North Dakota is only insisting upon the amendments which the Senate has overwhelmingly approved. He is not standing alone in his advocacy of this measure. It is not the persistency of "general cussedness" that causes him to do this. He is simply standing for what the Senate stands for, what the Senate has declared for, and what I believe to be one of the vital principles and one of the fundamentally important provisions in the bill.

It is perfectly reasonable that the Senator should think that possibly the exchange of ideas and the illuminating discussion of this question which he has given to the Senate would be potential in their influence upon the conferees, and if they could just get the bill back to them again, it is hardly possible that the House conferees are going to persist in their position. They should be given an opportunity to correct their mistake. That is all the Senator from North Dakota is insisting upon. Let the matter go back, and let these conferees, who seem to be determined to do the wrong thing, have a chance to do right. That is a very reasonable proposition, it seems to me, for the Senator from North Dakota to assume.

Mr. ASHURST. If the Senator will pardon me for a very brief reply——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Arizona?

Mr. GRONNA. Yes.

Mr. ASHURST. I will state something that it may be unparliamentary for me to state, but I feel that the Senate ought to know it. I think there is a rule somewhere, and certainly it is the general rule of parliamentary procedure, that in a bicameral body you can not refer in one Chamber to what took place in another. But when the Senate conferees met with the House conferees we were advised at the outset that as to amendment numbered 120, the amendment proposed by the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and adopted by the Senate, the House conferees were instructed by a vote of the House of Representatives—a vote taken subsequently to the adoption of the Senate amendment—that they considered themselves bound in faith and honor, so far as faith and honor could bind men, to adhere to what was in effect an instruction given them by the House of Representatives.

That was one of the many difficulties which obtruded themselves in the way of these conferees. The amendment proposed by the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin was adopted by the Senate. It was obvious to all persons it had gone out—that the Senate had taken this action. In the face of that action another body of this Congress went so far as to take action which had the effect of instructing its conferees not to yield, but to adhere.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. GRONNA. I do.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, I shall consume but a moment. I just want to suggest to my friend the Senator from Arizona that the last act on the part of the House was no more binding upon the conferees on the part of the House than the passage of the La Follette amendment was upon the conferees on the part of the Senate. Just in this connection you know—

While the light holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may get right.

After this matter has been discussed, as it is being discussed, if the conferees on the part of the House were given a chance, I do not see, unless they are very persistent in their adherence to error, how they could refuse to yield to the demands of the Senate conferees, especially when we consider the fact that the Senate amendment, the La Follette amendment, is incontrovertibly correct in all its provisions.

Mr. GRONNA. I believe the Senator from Mississippi is correct in that statement. If my memory serves me right, I believe that amendment, upon a roll call here in the Senate, was adopted by a vote of 33 to 13. Mr. President, is not that an instruction from this body? I may be mistaken as to the vote, but it is my recollection that 33 Members of the Senate voted for Senator LA FOLLETTE's amendment and 13 opposed it. I believe I have the right to say from the RECORD that not even a majority of the votes for and against was cast when the vote was taken in the House.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Less than a quarter of the entire membership voted on both sides.

Mr. GRONNA. The Senator from Wisconsin, of course, knows absolutely the true status of what happened, and he says that less than a quarter of the votes of the House were cast. Yet you tell me that the Senate must recede when more than two to one was the vote of the Members of this body, by which they said we want the La Follette amendment, and when a bare majority of one-fourth of the Members of the other body voted upon it. Mr. President, that is not a good argument.

Mr. ASHURST. I did not advance it so much as an argument as to indicate to the Senator the difficulty, at least one of the difficulties, that the conferees were obliged to contend with. I did not lay any special stress upon it.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, the Senate can not do business without the sanction of the House; neither could the House be allowed to do business without the sanction of the Senate.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Will the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator from North Dakota has mentioned one amendment, that being the amendment of the Senator from Wisconsin, which is the source of difficulty of the conferees. I was led to wonder if the Senator from North Dakota would suggest the other amendments, five in number. He says there were six altogether, which if the conferees will agree upon he would support the bill.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I said that I believed, if out of the one hundred and seventy-odd amendments this bill carries, the conferees would be willing to allow those who sympathize with me in my protest against the bill in its present form half a dozen of them, say, probably we would be satisfied. I had no authority from anyone to say that; but I simply stated that I believe they would be willing.

Mr. STERLING. I thought, Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield further to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.

Mr. STERLING. I simply thought, while of course no agreement was required as to that, the Senator's views might be suggestive to the conferees if the bill went back to conference.

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; I think that is right. I want to suggest now to the Senator from Arizona that, in justice to those who feel they can not support the bill without at least a vigorous protest, an attempt should be made to reach an agreement which would satisfy those who are protesting, and who I believe have a right to protest, against some of the provisions of the bill.

Mr. ASHURST. We have agreed.

Mr. GRONNA. The Senate has the right to send the conference report back to conference. I say the Senate has that right just as much as the House has the right.

Mr. STERLING. I should like to be informed. I do not recall——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield further?

Mr. GRONNA. I yield for a question.

Mr. STERLING. I should like to be informed; with one hundred and seventy-odd amendments as the number of amendments reported, how many about which there can be no agreement. How many are there?

Mr. ASHURST. If the Senator will pardon me, I think he is under a misapprehension. The conferees agreed on all. There is no disagreement reported.

Mr. STERLING. That is not it. How many of these rejected amendments would the Senator suppose, now, could be agreed upon if this was to go back to conference?

Mr. GRONNA. I fully realize that the Senator from Arizona can not have his own way any more than the rest of us can have our own way. It would not be fair to ask that all these provisions should be changed in accordance with our views. I am not saying that it is unfair for those who are demanding that this bill shall pass in its present form. I do not charge them with unfairness. But it is just as reasonable for us to ask that these provisions shall be changed as it is for them to say that they will oppose any change from its present form.

Mr. President, I have only touched upon the question of the Choctaws and the Chickasaws. I have not attempted to discuss the Mississippi Choctaws. That is a question which must be settled some day.

I am only a layman, Mr. President, but I believe that if we pass this bill in its present form the Indians who have been refused admission to the rolls will some day come to the Congress of the United States and demand, rightfully demand, just and fair treatment, and we can not possibly escape the result of having to pay to them large sums of money out of the Treasury.

These men must have some right. If they do not get their share out of these tribal funds, if the Government of the United States, the guardian of these people, wrongfully distributes their money, I do not see how we could possibly escape the possibility of having to pay them such claims as may be equitable and as may be fair and proper. I do not know to whom this fund is being distributed. But that is not the question, Mr. President. The question is whether or not these men who have not been placed upon the rolls are entitled to share in these funds. I know it has been argued——

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield further to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.

Mr. STERLING. Does the Senator from North Dakota know how many of the Choctaw Indians there are whom it is claimed should be put upon the rolls?

Mr GRONNA. Of course, that is a very long story.

Mr. STERLING. I do not care to have the Senator——

Mr. GRONNA. If the Senator will let me finish my statement, there are those who claim that none of these Choctaws are entitled to enrollment. There are also those who claim there are some 2,300 who are legally entitled to be placed upon the rolls not Mississippi Choctaws. I am not speaking now of the Mississippi Choctaws; but if I am not mistaken, I believe there has been testimony introduced to the effect that there are some 2,300 Choctaw Indians who are legally entitled to enrollment.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President——

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield further?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.

Mr. STERLING. The Senator agreed with me, that it is a very much mooted question whether the Choctaw Indians are entitled to enrollment or not. You will recall some of the discussion a year ago as to whether especially the Mississippi Choctaws should be put on the rolls. Would the Senator from North Dakota be willing to say he would vote against the report of the conference because an amendment providing for the enrollment of the Mississippi Choctaws had not been agreed upon?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, that is not the question here. The Senator from Wisconsin offered an amendment which does not in any way, I understand, propose to open these rolls. It simply clothes the Secretary of the Interior with the authority of taking care of those whom he believes are legally entitled to enrollment. I say, Mr. President, what harm can there be in that amendment? There certainly can be no injustice in that amendment. That does not even stop the per capita payment which is provided for in this very bill.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. GRONNA. Certainly.

Mr. WALSH. The Senator from North Dakota may recall that I voted for the amendment when the bill was under consideration. The Senator believes that these men ought to be placed upon the roll. He had much more abundant opportunity to inform himself about the matter than I have had, but I gather he feels there is no doubt about the justice of this amendment; that is to say, clothing the Secretary with the power and authority to determine the right of these men to be upon the roll, as the records in his office disclosed. Have I stated the position of the Senator correctly?

Mr. GRONNA. That is the way I understand it.

Mr. WALSH. Why, then, is the Senator afraid to trust to the sense of fairness and justice of the Congress of the United States without endeavoring to coerce those who disagree with him by any dread that may be imposed that this bill may fail as a whole, in other words?

Mr. GRONNA. No, Mr. President; this is not the first time that that question has been discussed in this body. There has not been a willingness shown to give anyone the authority to place these men legally or illegally upon the rolls.

Mr. WALSH. Let me put the question more directly. Would the Senator feel that an independent measure at the next session, embracing exactly this amendment, would fail; and if he thinks it would fail, why does he think so?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, if I were a lawyer, I would perhaps say that is a leading question. I believe that now is the time. I believe that the time during the next session is no more opportune than now to do justice to these men.

Mr. WALSH. If the Senator will pardon me, I am afraid the attitude he takes would make those who follow him feel that he was of the impression that the measure would not appeal very strongly to the sense of justice of the Congress if it were presented as an independent proposition.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I can not say, of course, what Congress would do. All I know is what Congress has done. All I know is what has just transpired in this body. I know what the vote was. The Senator says he voted for it. Of course, I do not recollect who voted for it; but only a day or two ago the Senate voted, by an overwhelming majority, for the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin, and I feel that I ought to be permitted to say that when the Senate, by a vote of 33 to 13, voted that that amendment should be placed in this bill, I have a perfect right to take the time of the Senate and make objections to the provisions that, in my judgment, I believe are not wise and will not be beneficial either to the Indian tribes or to the country.

Mr. President, I have stated over and over again in reply to the statement of my friend from Arizona, the chairman of the committee, that I am not asking, I am not hoping, that this bill should be changed altogether according to my views. I have said that if a few of these amendments were changed I should be perfectly willing to vote for the bill.

I believe that those who sympathize with me would be willing to do likewise. How are we to convince people, Mr. President, how can we convince Members of the Senate that this bill shall be changed when we have to speak at a time when it is impossible for some of the Senators to be here? I believe, sir, that this measure is of sufficient importance to this body and to the country, and I am sure that it is of sufficient importance to the Indians that the members of the Senate should hear what I have to say. I therefore suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota suggests the absence of a quorum. The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Johnson	Pittman	Thompson
Bristow	Jones	Sheppard	Vardaman
Chamberlain	La Follette	Smith, Ga.	Walsh
Fall	Lane	Smith, S. C.	Weeks
Fletcher	Lea, Tenn.	Smoot
Gronna	Martine, N. J.	Sterling
Hardwick	Owen	Swanson

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty-five Senators have answered to their names. A quorum of the Senate is not present. The Secretary will call the roll of absentees.

The Secretary called the names of the absent Senators, and Mr. OVERMAN answered to his name when called.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twenty-six Senators have answered to their names. There is not a quorum of the Senate present.

Mr. KERN and Mr. BRYAN entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

At 6 o'clock and 45 minutes a. m. Mr. SIMMONS entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 6 o'clock and 50 minutes a. m. Mr. RANSDELL entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 7 o'clock and 20 minutes a. m. Mr. CLAPP entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 7 o'clock and 25 minutes a. m. Mr. STONE entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 7 o'clock and 30 minutes a. m. Mr. BANKHEAD entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 10 minutes a. m. Mr. BURTON entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 35 minutes a. m. Mr. NELSON entered the Chamber and answered to his name.

At 8 o'clock and 45 minutes a. m. Mr. OLIVER and Mr. BRADY entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that at 9 o'clock a recess be taken for 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. We have not a quorum and are not able to transact any business.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. President, only night before last the Senate set the precedent of taking a recess by unanimous consent. I think the Senate Chamber ought to be ventilated, and my suggestion is that at 9 o'clock we take a recess of 15 minutes for the purpose of allowing the Chamber to be ventilated.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair must say that he is impressed with the fact that it would be utterly without right or parliamentary law.

Mr. OLIVER. What I mean is this: A few days ago the Senate, with less than a quorum present, by unanimous consent took a recess instead of an adjournment. My suggestion is—and I trust that in view of the circumstances the Chair will not declare it out of order, because there is no reason, I think, why it should not be done—that in view of the people who are coming in here the Chamber ought to be ventilated. I suggest that a recess be taken for 15 minutes. I understand that we are working under a unanimous-consent agreement until 9 o'clock. My suggestion is that at 9 o'clock a recess be taken for 15 minutes, to enable all the doors and windows to be opened.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It is with regret that the Chair feels constrained to rule against the Senator.

At 8 o'clock and 55 minutes a. m. Mr. HOLLIS, Mr. ROBINSON, and Mr. BRANDEGEE entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

At 9 o'clock a. m. Mr. POMERENE, Mr. PERKINS, Mr. JAMES, Mr. HUGHES, Mr. PITTMAN, Mr. CLAPP, Mr. REED, Mr. PENROSE, Mr. SUTHERLAND, Mr. O'GORMAN, and Mr. DILLINGHAM entered the Chamber and answered to their names.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Forty-nine Senators have answered to the roll call. There is a quorum present.

Mr. ASHURST and Mr. GRONNA addressed the Chair.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, resuming the proceedings of the Senate, which proceedings were interrupted by the point of no quorum made by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA] about four hours ago, and a quorum now being present, I hope that the Senate is ready for a vote on this conference report. The Committee on Indian Affairs having charge and jurisdiction over this bill held hearings consuming 41 days, covering a record consisting of nearly 1,200 pages of printed matter. I have not consumed more than a few moments in discussing the report, and I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to vote upon the report at the hour of 9.30 a. m. this day.

Mr. FALL. Will the Senator withhold his request for one moment?

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President——

Mr. ASHURST. I yield to the Senator from New Mexico.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. FALL. I ask leave to have printed in the RECORD without reading the report of Inspector James McLaughlin as to attorneys' contracts with the Mississippi and other Choctaws, contained in the hearings before the subcommittee of the Committee on Indian Affairs, page 831, with the exhibits thereto, down to and including page 861. I think this should be printed in the RECORD as a part of these proceedings.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

REPORT OF INSPECTOR JAMES MCLAUGHLIN IN RE ATTORNEYS' CONTRACTS WITH MISSISSIPPI CHOCTAWS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 29, 1911.

THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

SIR: Under departmental instructions of the 13th ultimo, I have the honor to report my investigation concerning the representations made and methods adopted by certain solicitors in securing contracts from individual Indians who claim the right to enrollment as members of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Tribe of Indians, and respectfully submit the following conclusions relative to same:

In my tour of investigation I visited Columbus, Ohio; St. Louis, Mo.; Muskogee, Poteau, Wilburton, and McAlester, Okla.; San Antonio and Houston, Tex.; Lake Charles, Baton Rouge, and New Orleans, La.; and Gulfport, Miss., inquiring into the matter and interrogated numerous persons who had knowledge of the representations made and methods adopted by the soliciting agents in obtaining contracts from the class of claimants referred to.

From my investigation I ascertained that during the past four years several persons have been engaged in soliciting contracts from Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians and freedmen of those tribes, and that one Alexander P. Powell, who claims to be a Choctaw Indian and a lineal descendant of one of the parties to the Dancing Rabbit Creek treaty of September 27, 1830, has been actively engaged in canvassing a large extent of country, chiefly in the States of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas, in procuring the names of unenrolled persons who claim to possess Choctaw or Chickasaw Indian blood, and obtaining contracts from them to prosecute, on a contingent fee, their right to share in the distribution of the funds and property of the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma; and while, as above stated, there were several persons engaged in procuring contracts of similar character from unenrolled Indians of these tribes, it appears from the record that said A. P. Powell obtained more contracts from the class of claimants referred to than all of the other solicitors combined, notwithstanding the fact that he did not solicit contracts from any of the freedmen.

I failed to meet this man Powell during my tour of the localities in which he has been operating very extensively the past four years, and therefore can not speak of him from personal knowledge, but have been told by many who know him that he shows a decided strain of Negro blood, is large of stature, prepossessing in appearance, shrewd and plausible, which, with his posing in the communities he visits in soliciting contracts as a very important person, has succeeded in arousing great enthusiasm among the people of the localities canvassed by h'm, and has thus procured contracts with little or no difficulty from all persons who believed they possessed, or were led by Powell to believe they possessed, any Choctaw or Chickasaw Indian blood.

From what I was told by reputable persons at Lake Charles and Baton Rouge, La., and Gulfport, Miss., it would appear that said Powell was interested chiefly in procuring a large number of contracts, regardless of the ancestry of the applicants, as Mr. Luke W. Conerly, of Gulfport, Miss., told me that to his person knowledge Powell obtained contracts from several families the ancestry of whom, as supplied by Powell, was absurdly erroneous. It is also alleged that Powell took contracts from any persons claiming to have Indian blood and from many who had never claimed to possess Indian blood until told by Powell that they were descendants of Indians who were parties to the Dancing Rabbit Creek treaty of 1830, and therefore entitled to certain benefits under that treaty.

Mr. C. R. Cline, an attorney of Lake Charles, La., and Hon. Isaac C. Boyd, of Leesville, La., also an attorney, a member of the present Louisiana Assembly, and who claims to possess Choctaw Indian blood, both informed me that there are about 300 persons living in the neighborhood of Kinder, Allen Parish, La., who are of mixed descent, being of French, Spanish, Portuguese, and negro blood, with a very few of them possibly possessing some Indian blood, and the name "Red Bone" was given those of them who were supposed to have any Indian blood; that prior to Powell's visit to Kinder, soliciting contracts with Indians, it was regarded a great insult to be called a "Red Bone," thus classing them as of Indian blood, but a number of them were advised by Powell that they were of Choctaw descent, as shown by a book which he possessed, and by which he traced their ancestry as eligible to enrollment, and it is alleged that he thus obtained contracts from all of them, and since Powell thus recognized those people the name "Red Bone" is no longer objectionable, but, on the contrary, all are desirous of being thus classed, and to be now called a "Red Bone" is exceedingly pleasing to each and all of them, as they believe that the cognomen fixes their status as of Indian blood and entitles them to share in the property of the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma.

Hon. Isaac C. Boyd, of Leesville, Vernon Parish, La., above referred to, stated to me that in 1911 he was induced by one Mrs. Ella Taylor, of Leesville, La., to enter into contract for Mississippi-Choctaw rights, said Mrs. Taylor, representing herself an authorized agent of A. P. Powell and Luke W. Conerly, whose headquarters were then at Gulfport, Miss., engaged in obtaining contracts from Choctaw claimants for the prosecution of their right to participate in the funds and property of the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma, said Mrs. Taylor, stating to him that each beneficiary would be entitled to receive 320 acres of land, or double the value of it in money, also anywhere from $5,000 to $10,000 in cash from the Choctaw funds, but that in order to participate in this distribution claimants must enter into contracts without delay, as the time limit would soon expire, therefore promptness in executing contracts for same was absolutely necessary.

Mr. Boyd, who is of Choctaw blood, a lawyer by profession with quite a lucrative practice, and who is also a member of the State Assembly of Louisiana, feels chagrined in having fallen to the flattering presentation of the matter by Mrs. Taylor, resulting in his entering into a contract for himself and his sister and for which he paid Mrs. Taylor $7.50 for executing each of said contracts.

Mr. Boyd stated that Mrs. Taylor procured a great many similar contracts at Leesville, La., and surrounding country, and that he has little doubt but that she thus realized in the neighborhood of $3,000 from her charge of $7.50 to applicants for each contract obtained. Mr. Boyd further stated that after realizing he had been victimized in the sum of $15, through the enthusiasm aroused by a plausible talk, he, in order to have the solicitors prosecuted, if possible, made diligent inquiry of persons who had entered into similar contracts to ascertain if any of them had represented themselves as Government officials, and was unable to find any person to whom they represented themselves as being in any way connected with the Government or an official of the Choctaw Nation, but that the impression prevailed among the claimants that A. P. Powell and his assistants were fully empowered to procure the contracts they were engaged in soliciting from Choctaw claimants.

Mr. Boyd still further stated that having talked a great deal against these solicitors, denouncing them as frauds and fakers, that Powell never visited Leesville, La., to solicit contracts, but established himself for a short time at De Ridder, 21 miles distant, and sent notices to Leesville applicants to proceed to De Ridder for that purpose.

I made particular inquiry as to whether or not Powell or any of the other solicitors had been ever heard to represent themselves as Government officials or officials of the Choctaw Nation, but did not meet any person who stated that they had ever heard any of those solicitors make such a statement. On the contrary, many of the persons whom I interrogated with reference thereto stated that they had frequently heard Powell say that he was fighting the Government to have the rightful claims of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians allowed; but notwithstanding the fact that Powell when questioned regarding the matter invariably denied that he had any connection with the Government in the work he was engaged in, the impression prevailed, as expressed by Attorneys Cline and Boyd and Mr. Luke W. Conerly, especially among the more ignorant persons, that Powell represented some high authority in the premises, he being engaged in executing contracts with claimants, using printed blank forms therefor, and this impression prevailed as to the several other solicitors engaged in obtaining similar contracts.

When assigned to this investigation, the Indian Office furnished me, for my information, a voluminous file of correspondence with reference to this matter, which file embraced report of Special United States Indian Agent W. W. McConihe, dated May 2, 1911, with accompanying exhibits, from which record, together with what I ascertained in my investigation, the facts appear to be as follows:

1. The citizenship rolls of the Choctaw Nation, embracing those Indians entitled to share in the property of the tribe, was closed March 4, 1907. (Act of Apr. 26, 1906; Stat. L., 137, sec. 2.)

2. That there were possibly some persons omitted from the citizenship rolls who, because of the limitations imposed by the law as to time, were unable to produce the proof of their right to participate in the funds of the Choctaw Nation under article 14 of the treaty of September 27, 1830.

3. The possibility that there were some Mississippi Choctaw Indians whose right to enrollment had not been recognized induced a firm of attorneys—Messrs. Crews & Cantwell, of St. Louis, Mo.—to undertake the securing of legislation that would permit the reopenings of the rolls for the purpose of establishing the rights of those who had previously failed to establish their right or had failed to take advantage of the opportunity to do so.

4. Messrs. Crews & Cantwell employed Alexander P. Powell, who asserts that he is a Choctaw Indian, to procure the names of unenrolled Mississippi Choctaw Indians and produce evidence by tracing the ancestry to establish their right to enrollment, and to obtain contracts from them for the prosecution of their claims.

5. Associated with Messrs. Crews & Cantwell was one S. L. Hurlbut, a banker residing at El Campo, Tex., who financed the project in the beginning by paying Powell $150 per month salary and his expenses.

6. Powell, while employed by Crews & Cantwell, procured the names of about 4,200 persons who claimed, or were led to believe by Powell, that they were entitled to participate in the funds of the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma, and from each of whom he obtained a contract authorizing Crews & Cantwell to act as their attorneys in all legal proceedings in presenting to the Interior Department or any court such evidence as he or she might be able to produce in establishing a right to participate in the distribution of the fund and property of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Indians of Oklahoma, which contracts provided that Crews & Cantwell were to receive 30 per cent of all sums of money, lands, and property that might be received by reasons of the right claimed. Powell did not make any charge to the claimants while operating under the above-stated salary until a short time previous to severing his connection with Crews & Cantwell, when he commenced charging the claimants $1.25 for each contract executed, and while engaged in this work in the employ of Crews & Cantwell it appears from the record that Powell received $2,971.02 from them, $960 of which was for salary and remainder for expenses incurred by him as shown by letter from Mr. S. L. Hurlbut's office, dated March 8, 1911, copy herewith, Exhibit A.

7. Powell's connection with Crews & Cantwell appears to have terminated in March, 1911, and he then commenced soliciting contracts for William B. Matthews, an attorney of Washington, D. C., with office in the Evans Building, and the contracts procured by Powell in the name of Mr. Matthews are similar in every respect to those he obtained for Crews & Cantwell, except as to name of the attorney.

The Crews & Cantwell contracts contain the stipulation that their appointment as attorneys is joint, and that in the event of the death of either, the survivor shall succeed to all rights and benefits, and perform all the duties imposed by the contract upon the attorneys. This same stipulation is contained in the printed form of contract taken in the name of William B. Matthews [copy herewith], and the fact that it does so appear would indicate that Mr. Matthews had nothing to do with the drafting of the form, but that the wording of the Crews & Cantwell contract was probably adapted by A. P. Powell, simply substituting the name of William B. Matthews, as attorney, for that of Crews & Cantwell, and Powell thus continued procuring contracts from any and all persons whom he met, who believed, or were led to believe, that they possessed Choctaw or Chickasaw Indian blood, and from each of whom he collected $2.50 for his services in executing the papers.

9. After Powell discontinued securing contracts for Crews & Cantwell and started soliciting for Attorney William B. Matthews and charging applicants $2.50 for each set of papers executed, it is alleged he procured contracts from a number of persons residing in and around Kinder, Allen Parish, La., who did not claim to be of Choctaw descent, but were advised by Powell that he possessed a book which enabled him to trace the ancestry of every living person who possessed any Choctaw blood, and that he had traced those people entitled to enrollment as descendants of certain persons appearing as beneficiaries under the Choctaw treaty of 1830. As to the book referred to as possessed by Powell, which is said to have been produced in evidence by him very frequently, I was informed by Mr. Luke W. Comerly, of Gulfport, Miss., who was for some months associated with Powell, that he carried with him for reference in tracing the ancestry of applicants for enrollment a copy of volume 7, "American State Papers," which contains the names of 19,554 Choctaw Indians who were parties to the Dancing Rabbit Creek treaty of 1830, as per roll made by F. W. Armstrong, special agent, under date of September, 1831, which volume was published in 1860.

10. Crews & Cantwell, as attorneys for a number of these claimants, with evidence as to some of the unenrolled Mississippi Choctaws to an equitable right to share in the funds of the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma, have sought legislation to reopen the rolls to permit them to prosecute the claims of these persons with whom they have contract.

11. The financing of the project to secure reimbursement of Crews & Cantwell and S. L. Hurlbut for previous expenditures was effected by incorporating the "Texas-Oklahoma Investment Co.," chartered under the laws of the Territory of Arizona, November 14, 1911. The articles of incorporation provide for a capital stock of $100,000, or 1,000 shares of the par value of $100 each, the directors of the company as incorporated being S. L. Hurlbut, of El Campo, Tex.; H. Masterson and W. A. Smith, of Houston, Tex.; and T. B. Crews and H. J. Cantwell, of St. Louis, Mo.; and the principal stockholders are T. B. Crews and H. J. Cantwell, of St. Louis, Mo.; Clifford Greve and S. L. Hurlbut, of El Campo, Tex.; H. Masterson, L. Bryan & Co., J. J. Sweeney, and W. H. Gill, of Houston, Tex.; and J. H. Kempner, of Galveston, Tex.

Two hundred and fifty shares of the 1,000 shares of the stock of this company were sold at par value of $100 per share, thus realizing $25,000 in cash, with which Crews & Cantwell and S. L. Hurlbut were reimbursed for previous expenditures and a contingent fund created to meet future expenses as incurred.

12. Crews & Cantwell turned over to the Texas-Oklahoma Investment Co. the contracts procured for them by Alexander P. Powell, numbering about 4,200, and received in cash from the fund realized from the 250 shares of the stock sold, reimbursement for their previous expenditures in connection with their Mississippi Choctaw contracts, and leaving the 750 unsold shares in the treasury as common property of the company.

In promoting the organization of the Texas-Oklahoma Investment Co. flattering figures of prospective returns to investors therein appear to have been sent out to prominent persons throughout the country, as evidenced by letter of Mr. C. B. Moling, of Houston, Tex., under date of June 12, 1911, to Hon. W. L. Dechant, of Middletown, Ohio, which reads as follows:

"HOUSTON, TEX., June 12, 1911.

"Hon. W. L. DECHANT,
"Middletown, Ohio.

"DEAR SIR: In 1820 the United States Government made a treaty with the Choctaw Indians, then living in Mississippi, whereby the Government bought 5,000,000 acres of the Indians, and in return gave to the Indians all the lands lying in the Indian Territory north of Red River up to the Canadian and east of the ninety-eighth meridian, and paid for moving as many of the Indians out to this land as desired to go.

"The Choctaws still had 10,000,000 acres left back in Mississippi, and in 1830 the Government made another treaty with them whereby the Government purchased the remaining lands for $8,000,000. In this treaty it was agreed that the remaining Indians were to be protected in the community property or the original lands in Indian Territory granted them by the treaty of 1820.

"The Government still holds approximately 3,450,000 acres of these original Territory lands, as well as several millions in cash, in trust for the Choctaws who have not as yet been allotted their share.

"A reputable and responsible firm of attorneys, with offices in St. Louis and Washington, D. C., have secured contracts with 4,200 Choctaw Indians to secure them their allotment of lands and money upon a percentage basis. The contracts provide that the attorneys are to receive 30 per cent of all lands and money received. These 4,200 contracts are each signed by the Indian and two witnesses to his signature and acknowledged before a notary public.

"These contracts, providing for this contingent fee, have been recognized by the Government, and Congress passed a resolution making all such contracts a first lien upon the property of the Indian. This insures direct payment to us of our fee.

"For financing the project, such as hunting up the Indians and securing the proof of each individual Indian to his right of participation and the attorneys for working the bill through Congress, one-half of the profits to go to the attorneys and the other half to those who financed it.

"It is estimated that each Indian's share of the estate is worth $8,000. The attorneys' contract calls for 30 per cent of this, or $2,400, of which we are to get one-half, or $1,200.

"We are organizing a syndicate to take over 1,000 of these contracts at $25 per contract. We will not accept subscription for less than 20 contracts, or $500. The estimated value of 20 contracts, if we win, will be approximately $24,000, or a profit of $23,500 upon each $500 investment.

"The proofs of these claims for these 4,200 Indians has all been secured and has been presented to the congressional Committee on Indian Affairs and reported favorably. This committee consists of 19 Members of Congress.

"At the next session of Congress the bill will be introduced and voted upon, and as there are several precedents identical to this proposition wherein the other Choctaws secured their rights we have every reason to believe that the bill will pass.

"Senator OWEN has but 1,500 of these contracts with another batch of Choctaw Indians, yet he secured a fee of $6,000,000. He had a contract for one-half of what he secured, while ours is but 30 per cent. Other similar contracts have been made, and all of them have been passed by Congress, and as the Government is holding the lands and money belonging to this tribe and have no interest in it either way we see no just reason why they should not act upon these claims favorably at the next session.

"We are unable to go into all of the details of this proposition in this letter to you, but I have spent several days investigating it and conclude that the chances for defeat are no greater than in the ordinary course of business. I believe the estimated results herein will be obtained, or substantially so.

"I expect to give the matter my attention and to look after the interest of those who come into the deal at my request, and to take a proper assignment of the contracts and place them in the hands of some local trust company or bank with authority to make the collection and disburse the receipts to the subscribers in the amounts to which each subscriber would be entitled to same. It will be safer for the subscribers.

"My charges will be about 20 per cent of whatever profits you may make on the deal. If none are made, you owe me nothing. I would like to have you take a flier in this, say, for $500 or $1,000, and to notify me of your intentions promptly. Should you happen to lose, I think you will agree with me that it was at least a good bet, as the prospective returns justify taking the chance.

"Awaiting your prompt reply, either by letter or wire, I am,

"Yours, very truly,

"C. B. MOLING."

To the foregoing communication of Mr. Moling, Mr. Dechant replied as follows:

"MIDDLETOWN, OHIO, July 24, 1911.

"C. B. MOLING,
"432 Mason Building, Houston, Tex.

"MY DEAR MR. MOLING: Your letter of June 12 was received in my absence, hence delay in answering.

"I have gone over the same carefully and note what you say, and it would seem to me if Congress has taken the steps enumerated by you the proposition is a good one, and on further investigation I might be induced to come in, everything appearing in good shape.

"Who is the firm of attorneys representing you and located at St. Louis and Washington, and what is the name of the member of the firms looking specially after the matter?

"Can you refer me to the reports wherein the Government has recognized the contracts referred to providing for a contingent fee, etc., in these specific cases; also, can you further refer me to congressional reports where the Congress recognized such contracts and made them a valid first lien on the Indians' property?

"What Congress passed this resolution, legalizing these contracts as liens, and is it the present Committee of Congress on Indian Affairs to whom the proofs of the 4,200 claims you refer to were presented and reported favorably?

"What is the name of the attorney who represented the matter to the Indian Affairs Committee of Congress and secured the passage of the favorable resolution?

"On receipt of a letter from you in reply to the above, I will take the matter up more fully and advise you at once what I will do. Thanking you for bringing this matter to my attention,

"I am, as ever, yours,

W. L. DECHANT."

To the inquiries contained in the foregoing letter of Judge Dechant, Mr. Moling replied as follows:

"HOUSTON, TEX., July 28, 1911.

"Hon. W. L. DECHANT,
"Middletown, Ohio.

"MY DEAR JUDGE: I have your letter of the 24th, in regard to further information regarding the Choctaw Indian contracts, etc.

"I sent for Mr. S. L. Hurlbut, who owns the contracts, and gave him your letter and asked him to give me the information desired; and I herewith hand you his dictated letter, as also the brief he refers to, with the clippings attached.

"In regard to the brief and the clippings, he requests that you take care of them, as they are all he has here in Houston.

"It might be a good idea for you to write to Mr. Cantwell in Washington, as he is thoroughly familiar with all the details, and then the information would come to you first handed.

"I am not personally acquainted with Mr. Cantwell or his partner, Mr. Crews, in St. Louis, but from what I learned they are very capable men in their line of business and have worked other similar contracts through Congress, but I know Mr. Hurlbut for several years; he is all right, and I consider him straight and reliable. My dealings with him has all been in the real estate line and all very satisfactory; he stands well in this community.

"It might also be a good idea to get in touch with the chairman of the present Committee on Indian Affairs; he ought to know all about it.

"As stated in my letter of June 12, I think it's a good bet, for the reason I believe the Government will carry out the terms of its treaty made with them in 1820 and 1830; if they do, then these contracts will be good.

"Awaiting your further advices, I am,

"Very truly, yours,

C. M. MOLING."

The presentation of the matter as above set forth by Mr. Moling to Judge Dechant for financing the project was so flattering as to justify the average speculator in taking a chance, and it would appear, from the sale of one-fourth of the stock of the Texas-Oklahoma Investment Co. at its par value, that no great difficulty was experienced in promoting and consummating this financing of the project.

About a year subsequent to the organization of the Texas-Oklahoma Investment Co. for financing the project of handling Mississippi-Choctaw Indian contracts taken in the name of Crews & Cantwell, Mr. Albert J. Lee, of Ardmore, Okla., a member of the law firm of Ballinger & Lee, claiming to represent a large number of persons who claim a right in the tribal property of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians in Oklahoma, on a contingent fee of from 12½ to 40 per cent, and which do not conflict with the claims handled and represented by the Texas-Oklahoma Investment Co., but are in a line with them, desired, as shown by certain correspondence relative thereto, to raise a fund of $16,000 to meet indebtedness incurred in the prosecution of their Indian claims and with which to continue the fight for their clients, and, to show that persons engaged in handling the claims of nonenrolled Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians have succeeded in interesting many prominent persons in such claims, I submit copy of tabulated statement of said Albert J. Lee, dated October 17, 1912, setting forth the prospective profits that he calculates upon deriving from his handling of said claims, together with an indorsement of same by Mr. Harris Masterson, an attorney of Houston, Tex., who is a prominent financier and pro-motor of projects of this character, which statement of Attorney Lee and indorsement of Mr. Masterson reads as follows:

OCTOBER 17, 1912.

Mr. HARRIS MASTERSON,
Houston, Tex.

DEAR SIR: Mr. Webster Ballinger and I represent some 13,000 persons who claim a right in the tribal property of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians in Oklahoma. Of the above number of persons represented by us, there are some 3,738 who are conclusively, as shown by the Government records, entitled to share in the distribution of the tribal property. An individual share is estimated at $3,000 cash. We represent these people under contracts providing for a contingent fee of from 12½ to 40 per cent of the value of each share. I am attaching a statement showing the value of our fees. The statement also shows the amount of said fees we have already contracted for.

You will observe that my individual share of said fee will amount to $850,911, based upon the cases I consider certain; and that if we succeed in one-third of the cases that are uncertain, or rather if we succeed in enrolling 3,000 out of the 10,000 doubtful cases, my individual share of the fee would be $2,065,911.

I am in urgent need of funds with which to meet indebtedness incurred in the prosecution of these claims, and with which I may be enabled to continue the fight for our clients, and I want to raise $16,000, which I will agree to return with interest, and will assign the people furnishing the money 40 per cent of my individual share of the fee. Estimated upon the cases considered certain, this would return about $22 for every dollar subscribed, and upon the basis of one-third of the uncertain cases going through in addition to those that I consider certain, the estimated return would be about $120 for every dollar advanced.

The following pages will give you some idea of the nature and basis of the claims.

CHOCTAW AND CHICKASAW LANDS, AND OTHER PROPERTY.

In southeastern Oklahoma, in what was formerly the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations, are nearly 3,000,000 acres of land, which the Federal Government will offer for sale from day to day from November 12 to December 23, this year. These lands are classed as follows: Nine hundred thousand acres agricultural, 445,000 acres agricultural surface, with deposits of coal and asphalt, 1,500,000 acres pine and hardwood timber.

In addition to the above lands, the coal and asphalt deposits are shortly to be sold. The United States mine inspector has estimated that the coal is worth in royalties to the Choctaw and Chickasaw people at least $70,000,000. There is now on deposit to the credit of these two tribes something like $1,000,000, derived from the sale of town sites.

VALUE OF PROPERTY.

It is reasonable to assume that the Federal Government will be able to get for the coal deposits at least one-half of the amount that said deposits are estimated to be worth in royalties, which would be, in round numbers, $35,000,000.

Should the 3,000,000 acres of land bring an average price of $10 per acre, which is a very reasonable estimate considering the fact that there is standing timber on 1,500,000 acres thereof, $30,000,000 will be derived from this source.

There is no accurate estimate of the value of the asphalt deposits, but they are worth several hundred thousand dollars. Eliminating the value of the asphalt deposits, we have the following values:

On deposit	$10,000,000
Value of the coal	35,000,000
Value of the surface and timber	30,000,000
Total value of the property	66,000,000

OWNERS OF THE PROPERTY.

The above property belongs to the citizens of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations of Indians under a grant made by the Federal Government under the terms of the treaty of September 27, 1830. The grant conveyed to said Indians all the lands lying between the Canadian and Red Rivers, the Arkansas line, and the one hundredth parallel west. All of said land, however, with the exception of the 3,000,000 acres above referred to, has been parceled out to the individual Indians in allotments of 320 acres of average-value land.

As the property belong to the citizens of the tribes of whom the Federal Government was the guardian, it became the duty of the Federal Government, upon the dissolution of the tribal governments, to ascertain who were the citizens entitled to share in the distribution of the property. This the Federal Government undertook to do. The tribal governments agreed to such action upon condition that each citizen be allotted 320 acres of average-value land and should then share in the proceeds derived from the sale of any lands remaining undisposed of after all allotments had been made. It was also agreed that certain town sites, coal deposits, asphalt deposits, and timberlands should be withheld from the allotment scheme.

Congress passed seven different acts under which the citizenship of the two tribes should be determined and the distribution made. The acts were: Act of June 10, 1896; act of June 7, 1897; act of June 28, 1898; act of May 31, 1900; act of July 1, 1902; act of March 3, 1905; and the act of April 26, 1906. The latter act provided that the question of citizenship should be finally closed up on March 4, 1907, and since that date no person has been added to the rolls of those Indians entitled to share in the property. Assistant Attorney General J. W. Howell stated to the House Committee on Indian Affairs that the above-mentioned acts were "inherently defective," and "administered so as to prevent a full realization of their purpose." (Hearing on H. R. 19279, 61st Cong., 2d sess., p. 265.)

WHY THE CLAIMANTS WHOM WE REPRESENT WERE OMITTED FROM THE ROLLS.

1. Sufficient time was not given to do the work. The Department of the Interior was forced to act pro forma upon the claims of more than 2,000 persons during the week preceding March 4, 1907.

2. The commission created by act of Congress was incompetent and composed of laymen who conceived the idea that it was their duty to oppose the applicants and restrict the number of persons entitled to share to the fewest possible. This commission suppressed records and failed to transmit the full case of applicants to the Secretary of the Interior, who had a supervisory authority and right of review. Upon charges filed against officers of this commission, two of them were forced to resign. (Ses. Doc. 357, 59th Cong., 2d sess.)

3. The tribal officials who had control of tribal funds sought at all times to restrict the number of persons enrolled in order that the share of each would be greater.

4. The attorneys, Mansfield, McMurray & Cornish, employed under Government sanction to represent the tribes, for an extra consideration of $750,000 paid out of tribal funds, and which latter employment was unknown to the Government officials, succeeded in defeating the claims of nearly 4,000 persons who had been enrolled by judgments of the United States courts, rendered in cases appealed from the action of the commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, under the provisions of the act of June 10, 1896. This action was investigated by the committee of Congress, and, with respect to the persons enrolled by judgments of the United States courts, this committee said: "There was no way by which persons so enrolled—locally known as court citizens—could be eliminated lawfully from participation in the tribal estate."

These tribal attorneys succeeded, however, in eliminating from the citizenship roll the persons placed thereon by judgment of the United States courts by lobbying through a provision of law which became part of the agreement entered into by the Government and the tribes contained in the act of July 1, 1902, with reference to the distribution of the property, by having created a special court to review the judgments of the United States courts, and a committee of Congress has reported upon the manner in which this court was created, as follows:

After the agreement had been duly signed by the representatives of the two nations and by the representatives of the Government, and after it was transmitted to Congress for ratification and approval, sections 31, 32, and 33 were inserted at the request of McMurray, which sections are predicated on the assumption that the United States courts in the Indian Territory, acting under the act of June 10, 1896, had admitted persons to citizenship in the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations without notice to both of said nations. It was contended by the nations that in such proceedings notice to each of said nations was indispensable, and they claimed and insisted that the proceedings in the United States courts in the Indian Territory, under the act of June 10, 1896, should have been confined to a review of the action of the commission to the Five Civilized Tribes upon the record in each case and should not have extended to a trial de novo of the question of citizenship. These sections authorized the two nations jointly, or either of said nations acting separately and making the other a party defendant, by a bill in equity filed in the citizenship court, to bring a suit for the purpose of testing the validity of all such decisions of the United States courts. It further provided that 10 persons admitted to citizenship or enrollment by the United States courts, with notice to but one of said nations, should be made defendants to a suit as representatives of the entire class of persons similarly situated. In other words, it authorized the bringing of a test suit, and provided that in the event said citizenship judgments or decisions were annulled or vacated, any party thereto, within 90 days thereafter, by a written application, might have his case transferred to the citizenship court by the court where the judgment was entered and that the citizenship court should have jurisdiction therein as if no judgment or decision had been rendered by the United States court. It was provided that the judgment of the citizenship court should be final.

This act provided that it should not be effective until submitted to and ratified by a vote of the two nations, but exception was made as to sections 31, 32, and 33, creating the citizenship court, but which became effective upon the passage and approval of the act.

Immediately following the passage of the act ratifying the agreement of 1902 the judges authorized to be appointed to constitute the citizenship court were appointed, as follows: Spencer Adams, of North Carolina; Henry S. Foote, of California; and Walter L. Weaver, of Ohio. Judge Foote appears to have been appointed upon the recommendation of Senator Stewart, who was then chairman of the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, and Judge Adams on the recommendation of Senator Pritchard, of North Carolina. Judge Foote was the brother-in-law of Senator Stewart. The law creating this court is without legislative parallel; the manner of its enactment was extraordinary, and the authority which it conferred upon the court it created is without precedent in American jurisprudence.

As soon as this court was created and organized the firm of Mansfield, McMurray & Cornish proceeded to bring before it a very large number of claims of "court citizens," and they succeeded in eliminating from the rolls between 3,500 and 4,000 persons. They then claimed a fee of 9 per cent on a basis of $4,800 per person, as provided in the contingent-fee contract made in 1901, before referred to, which had not been approved in accordance with law. (H. Rept. No. 2273, 61st Cong., 2d sess.)

It was reported, and commonly accepted as a fact, that Judges Foote and Adams received a part of the fee paid Mansfield, McMurray & Cornish, and in the case of Adams v. Butler, in which case Adams sued ex-United States Senator Butler, of North Carolina, for libel, it was shown that Adams received $50,000 of the fee. While the committee was considering the evidence upon which the above report was made Judge Adams cut his throat with a razor. Judge Foote died shortly after the fee was paid. Foote was a confirmed drunkard.

5. There are many other reasons impossible of explanation in this short statement.

CONGRESS NOW CONSIDERING CLAIMS.

Since the closing of the rolls those whose names appear thereon and the Representatives in Congress from Oklahoma have constantly pressed for legislation directing the Secretary of the Interior to finally wind up the affairs of the tribes and to distribute the funds to those enrolled. This Congress has refused to do and at each session has considered the enactment of legislation that would place upon the rolls all meritorious cases. The hearings upon such proposed legislation has progressed to the point where it now seems certain that action will be taken at the coming session of Congress. The Secretary of the Interior, on February 12, 1910, recommended that Congress give him authority to add to the rolls two classes of persons who had been omitted. (App. Hearing on H. R. 19279, 61st Cong., 2d sess.) And during the last session of Congress the Secretary advised Congress that there were several different classes of cases which should be reheard before the estates were finally wound up, and suggested that Congress give him authority to hear the cases and to add the names to the rolls of those persons found entitled to be placed thereon.

It is our purpose to continue the fight for our clients until definite action is taken by Congress. We have been strong enough at all times to prevent a final settlement and distribution of the property. The opposition now realizes that in order to get their own shares of the property they must consent to legislation giving our clients their rights. I have spent a great deal of money and have given all of my time since

March 4, 1907, in the work of securing justice for our clients, and I shall continue to do so until some final action is taken by Congress.

ESTIMATED VALUE OF EACH CLAIMANT'S SHARE OF PROPERTY.

As the lands have all either been allotted or ordered to be sold, the persons added to the rolls will have to take their share of the estate in cash, and it has been tentatively agreed that each person so enrolled is to receive $3,000 in cash.

Yours, very truly,

ALBERT J. LEE.

CLAIMS IN CHOCTAW AND CHICKASAW ESTATE.

Below is the list of the number of persons claiming a share of the Choctaw and Chickasaw tribal estates, represented by Ballinger & Lee, attorneys, and the basis of their employment.

The value of an individual share in the estate is estimated at $3,000 in cash.

Number of individual claimants, 3,738, more or less.

Of the above number 2,051 persons, more or less, are represented under written contracts and powers of attorney, for a contingent fee of 40 per cent of claims recovered; 487 are represented by agreement with other attorneys who hold contracts for 25 per cent of recovery, the share of Ballinger & Lee being 12½ per cent of the amount recovered. One thousand two hundred persons, more or less, are represented by Ballinger & Lee under 50 per cent contract, of which Ballinger & Lee's share will estimate $500 per person.

Lee's proposed sale of 40 per cent of his individual shares, or fee, is figured as follows:

2,051 persons.
$3,000 Value of individual share.

$6,153,000 Total value of shares of 2,051 persons.
40 per cent basis of fee.

$2,461,200 Estimated fee.

487 persons.
$3,000 Value of share.

$1,461,000 Total value of shares of 487 persons.
12½ per cent basis of fee of Ballinger & Lee.

$183,023 Total estimated fee of Ballinger & Lee for 487 persons.

1,200 persons.
$500 Ballinger & Lee's fee per person.

$2,461,200
$183,023
$600,000

$3,244,223 Total of Ballinger & Lee's fee.
Less $150,000 Estimated expense of collection.

45 per cent with which assistance was contracted.

$1,392,400 Estimated cost of assistance.

$3,094,223 Net fee.
Less $1,392,400 Cost of assistance.

2) $1,701,823 Net fee to Ballinger & Lee.

$850,911 Net fee to Lee.
40 per cent proposed assignment.

$340,364 Fee which will go to owners of the 40 per cent to be sold.

In addition to the above cases we represent about 10,000 people whose records do not conclusively show that they are entitled to share in the distribution of the property, but if Congress permits proof to be made in these cases, I estimate that at least 3,000 of them will be good. Our fee in these cases is 40 per cent, and in the event of success in the 3,000 cases indicated my individual fee would approximate $2,065,911. My proposed assignment includes all of these cases.

ALBERT J. LEE.

MASTERSON & MASTERSON, ATTORNEYS AT LAW,
Houston, Tex., October 17, 1912. (Received Apr. 20, 1914.)

To whom it may concern:

I have carefully read the statement of Albert J. Lee, of the law firm of Ballinger & Lee, in his letters of the 17th instant, relating to the claims of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians, represented by his firm, and from my own knowledge of the facts, the manner in which the estate of these Indians was administered by officers of the Federal Government, and the steps that are now being taken to protect the interests of the claimants I know that Mr. Lee's statement is substantially correct. The claims represented by Mr. Lee are meritorious; however, he does not by half set forth the merits of the claims, nor does his statement fully cover the injustice that has been perpetrated upon the class of Indians whom he represents. It would be impossible for him to fully deal with the merits of these claims in a brief letter.

The records in these cases are so plain and so clearly disclose fraud and incompetent administration that I am firmly convinced that Congress will restore the claimants to their rights. I therefore believe that money advanced to Mr. Lee in aid of his cases will return a big profit within the next two years, and that such profits will not be less than a return of $20 for every dollar advanced him.

On the 7th day of this month I furnished $2,000 to Mr. Lee in order to afford him temporary relief in connection with the Indian claims represented by him, and in addition thereto I am subscribing $2,000 to the fund of $16,000 which he is now endeavoring to raise, notwithstanding the fact that I am largely interested in similar claims of the Choctaw Indian descendants.

Of my own knowledge, for I have investigated many of the claims of the clients of Mr. Lee before deciding to invest $4,000 in the enterprise, I know that the claims of the Indians so investigated, whom Messrs. Ballinger & Lee represent, are full of merit. I therefore consider the $2,000 already invested and subscription of $2,000 to be in the nature of a fine speculative investment. It is hoped, and I think reasonably certain, that the Choctaw claimants will be given relief during the coming session of Congress.

These claims do not conflict with the claims handled and represented by the Texas-Oklahoma Investment Co., but are in line with them.

Yours, very truly,

H. MASTERSON.

I visited Muskogee, Okla., where I conferred with Commissioner Wright and Supt. Kelsey with reference to persons soliciting contracts from the Indians of Oklahoma, and then proceeded to Poteau, Okla., where I met T. V. Sprinkel, an attorney of that town, whom I learned had been obtaining contracts from certain Indians, and upon interrogating him relative thereto he stated with apparent frankness that he has been engaged at intervals the past three years in procuring contracts from Choctaw Indians who are interested in what is known as the Glenn-Tucker claim, and that he has not solicited contracts in any other Indian claim; that there are about 700 Choctaw families interested in said claim; and that he has procured contracts from 75 of the leading families interested, and only from those of them with whom he has been acquainted for many years past.

He stated that to meet the expenses incurred by him in executing the contracts and preparing the case he charges each family $10 who employ him, this being the total charge he makes to each family regardless of the number in the family, and that his contracts provide for payment to him of a 25 per cent contingent fee of whatever he may recover for them. He further stated that he has been engaged in this work since 1911, during which time he has made two trips to Washington, D. C., in the interests of his clients, and that up to the present time the total received by him from the 75 families with whom he has contracts amounts to only $129.

He also stated that Webster Ballinger, Walter S. Field, and W. W. Wright, attorneys of Washington, D. C., have a large number of similar contracts with Choctaw Indians.

While at Poteau I learned that a colored man named Robert L. Fortune, of Wilburton, Okla., had been soliciting contracts for Crews & Cantwell from Choctaw freedmen residing in the vicinity of Poteau, and I obtained from Mr. Felix Bird, a notary public of Poteau, one of the contracts, which said Fortune had left with the notary for acknowledgment when the freedman represented therein appeared to execute it, and after concluding my business at Poteau I proceeded to Wilburton, where I met said Robert L. Fortune and interrogated him with reference to the matter.

Said Robert L. Fortune resides in the town of Wilburton, Okla., and bears a good reputation in the community. He stated to me that he is 48 years of age, and was for 16 years, terminating in 1906, a deputy United States marshal for the eastern district of Indian Territory, now a part of Oklahoma, and that about three years ago he was employed by a negro lawyer, named J. Milton Turner, to canvass certain localities in eastern Oklahoma and procure contracts from Choctaw freedmen for Crews & Cantwell, of St. Louis, Mo.; that said Turner employed two other colored men as subagents in this work, whose names were J. E. Eubanks and H. A. Guess, respectively, and that Turner, in directing the work, maintained an office first at McAlester, Okla., and subsequently at Fort Smith, Ark.; that he (Fortune) procured about 700 contracts for Crews & Cantwell from Choctaw freedmen, including minors, but took no contracts from minors except when executed by legal guardians; that he delivered all of the contracts thus procured by him to J. Milton Turner, who paid him $1.25 for each duly executed contract delivered, and that the contract provided for a 35 per cent contingent fee to Crews & Cantwell.

Said Robert L. Fortune stated that in no instance while engaged in this work did he represent himself as a Government official, but invariably as a subagent of J. Milton Turner, in procuring contracts for Crews & Cantwell, of St. Louis, Mo.; that H. A. Guess, another of Turner's subagents, who was a negro attorney, then residing at McAlester, Okla., was given a much larger and better territory to operate in than that assigned to him by Turner, in consequence of which, as stated by Fortune, Subagent Guess procured about double the number of contracts that he (Fortune) obtained, and which, with the contracts procured by J. E. Eubanks, another of Turner's subagents, a colored man, and said to be a lawyer, whose field of operation was in the southeastern part of Oklahoma and adjoining territory in Arkansas, and Fortune stated, as an estimate, that about 2,300 contracts were obtained for Crews & Cantwell from Choctaw freedmen by himself and the two other subagents operating under the direction of said J. Milton Turner.

On the 23d ultimo I called upon Mr. Harris Masterson, attorney at law, at his office in the Chronicle Building, Houston, Tex., and had a very pleasant interview with him relative to his connection with certain attorneys engaged in prosecuting Mississippi Choctaw Indian claims, and he was exceedingly courteous throughout our conference.

Mr. Masterson is a very affable gentleman and stated quite freely his interest in the claims handled by Crews & Cantwell, in which he said he became interested by having the case presented and explained to him by Mr. S. L. Hurlbut, of El Campo, Tex., and that after investigating the matter he concluded to go in on it as a speculative investment, and that he took an active part in promoting the organization of the Texas-Oklahoma Investment Co. to finance the project.

The organization of said company and financing of the project is set forth on pages 12 and 13 of this report, based upon the statements of Mr. Masterson to me with reference thereto.

Mr. Masterson further stated that he also promoted the raising of a fund for Attorney Albert J. Lee, of Ardmore, Okla., to enable him to continue the prosecution of certain Choctaw-Chickasaw Indian claims that are being handled by Ballinger & Lee, which do not conflict with those handled by Crews & Cantwell.

Luke W. Conerly, of Gulfport, Miss., being frequently referred to in the communications contained in the file of papers furnished me by the Indian Office for use in my investigation, and his name appearing in the correspondence as an active solicitor in obtaining contracts from Mississippi Choctaws, therefore I proceeded to Gulfport, Miss., to meet him.

I reached Gulfport the afternoon of the 27th ultimo, and learning that Mr. Conerly lived out in the country about 3 miles from Gulfport, I got into telephone communication with him and he immediately came in to meet me at the Great Southern Hotel, where we were over three hours in conference, and he returned about 9 o'clock the following morning, accompanied by Henry Wilson and Carl Wilson, two prominent members of the Mississippi Choctaws, and remained until near noon discussing Choctaw matters generally and A. P. Powell particularly.

The said Luke W. Conerly is 73 years of age and a lawyer by profession, but has not practiced in the courts for several years past. He is quite intelligent, bears a good name in the community, and is well spoken of by those who know him. He claims to be a lineal descendant of one of the leading Choctaw families who participated in the Dancing Rabbit Creek treaty of 1830, and stated that he is now regarded by all the Choctaws living outside of Oklahoma as their captain and recognized leader; also that it was he who first interested Congressman HARRISON, of Mississippi, in Choctaw matters and got him to introduce the bill for reopening the Choctaw rolls; that he had interested United States Senators WILLIAMS and VARDAMAN, of Mississipi, in the Choctaw claim; also Congressman MORGAN, of Louisiana, in whose district many Choctaws reside.

I had a very pleasant interview with Harry Wilson, president chief council, Society of Mississippi Choctaws, together with his son, Pearl L. Wilson, secretary of said council, both of whom reside in Gulfport, Miss., and they corroborated substantially the statements of Luke W. Conerly regarding Mississippi Choctaw matters.

Mr. Conerly stated that he assisted A. P. Powell in writing up contracts with Mississippi Choctaws in 1910, when Powell was working on a salary for Crews & Cantwell, and that again in March, 1911, he commenced assisting Powell in writing up contracts for W. B. Matthews, an attorney of Washington, D. C., and for whom Powell procured 2,258 contracts and had charged the claimants $2.50 each for executing. He further stated that he was in Washington, D. C., in February, 1912, and suggested to Mr. Cantwell, who was also in Washington, the advisability of Crews & Cantwell purchasing the Matthews contracts, as Mr. Matthews had never done anything toward furthering the Choctaw case before the committees of Congress or elsewhere, and that Mr. Cantwell was so favorably impressed with the proposition that he authorized him (Conerly) to call upon Attorney Matthews and endeavor to bring about a transfer of his contracts to Crews & Cantwell, which he (Conerly) proceeded to carry out, resulting in Mr. Matthews transferring the 2,258 contracts that were procured in his name to Crews & Cantwell for a cash consideration of $1,300, together with Mr. Matthews retaining a certain per cent interest in the contingent fee provided in the contracts, and that he (Conerly) supervise the legal transfer of said contracts from Matthews to Crews & Cantwell and carried them from Mr. Matthews's office in the Bond Building to Crews & Cantwell's office, then in the Munsey Building.

Mr. Conerly further stated that A. P. Powell in his deal with W. B. Matthews was to receive a certain per cent of the contingent fee provided in the contracts, and in order to eliminate Powell, and that he would have no further interest in these 2,258 contracts, Mr. Cantwell paid Powell $300 in cash; this payment to Powell, as stated by Mr. Conerly, was that he might thus be gotten rid of in a friendly way and with the understanding that he (Powell) was not to return to Mississippi to engage in soliciting contracts with Choctaw or Chickasaw claimants.

Mr. Conerly stated that he was then engaged by Crews & Cantwell to procure contracts for them, and that arrangements were subsequently made by which Powell assisted him for a time, and that during 1912 and early part of 1913 he (assisted by Powell) procured about 1,300 contracts for Crews & Cantwell and turned the same in to them; that Powell then commenced taking contracts in his own name, and his present whereabouts are unknown to Conerly.

Mr. Conerly still further stated that since March, 1913, he has been in the employ of Mr. T. B. Crews, of the firm of Crews & Cantwell, in procuring Choctaw contracts, and had on the 28th ultimo about 1,800 executed contracts all indexed and ready to turn in, thus approximating about 9,558 of this class of contracts controlled by Crews & Cantwell, apart from any they may have obtained through parties whom he (Conerly) has no knowledge. To the above-stated total may be added the 2,300 freedmen contracts as estimated by Robert L. Fortune, of Wilburton, Okla., who was one of the solicitors obtaining contracts from freedmen for Crews & Cantwell.

Mr. Conerly stated to me that he had obtained contracts from Mississippi Choctaws residing in 15 different States, and that there are now so many influential persons interested in this claim that he has great hope of the early enactment of legislation directing the reopening of the Choctaw and Chickasaw rolls.

With reference to the representations made and methods adopted by A. P. Powell in obtaining contracts from Mississippi Choctaw applicants, Mr. Conerly stated that he had been associated with Powell, at intervals from 1910 to the early part of 1913, in writing up contracts for Choctaw claimants, and that during all that period he had never heard Powell represent himself as a Government official; on the contrary, had often heard him tell applicants that he was in no way connected with the Government, but that the impression prevailed among the people in general that Powell represented some high authority in canvassing for and executing the contracts he was obtaining; that he never heard Powell state that he was a lawyer, but knows that the impression prevailed in general that he was an attorney.

Mr. Conerly stated that he has not met Powell during the past year, and did not know where he is at the present time, but had heard that he is still engaged in soliciting contracts from Choctaw claimants, taking the contracts in his own name on a 20 per cent contingent fee and charging each applicant $2.50 for executing their papers, and he (Conerly) expressed the belief that Powell has realized several thousand dollars through the $2.50 fee invariably received by him from each of the many claimants from whom he obtained contracts since severing his connection with Crews & Cantwell in 1911.

Mr. Conerly remarked, with reference to A. P. Powell, that he regarded him as a shrewd individual who made a good impression upon persons meeting him casually, but that from having acquired a very thorough knowledge of Powell's characteristics he (Conerly) would not wish to be associated with him in any business transaction.

As pertinent in the premises, I transmit herewith as "Exhibit B" copy of statement of said Luke W. Conerly, made under oath to Special Indian Agent W. W. McConihe at Jackson, Miss., on April 26, 1911, the original of which I submitted to Mr. Conerly at Gulfport, Miss., on the 28th ultimo, and which he verified as true and a correct statement of matters therein referred to up to the time the said statement was made and sworn to by him.

There is also transmitted herewith as "Exhibit C" letter of Luke W. Conerly, of Gulfport, Miss., addressed to me under date of 17th instant, to which is attached a printed circular of Crews & Cantwell, date February 16, 1912, accompanied by printed copy of an affidavit of A. P. Powell, dated November 6, 1911, which has reference to the discontinuance of A. P. Powell by Crews & Cantwell, and the employment by them of said Mr. Conerly to continue the work of procuring contracts from Choctaw claimants who desired to be represented by Crews & Cantwell.

I also transmit, as "Exhibit D" copy of affidavit of said A. P. Powell, acknowledged at Jackson, Miss., by W. W. McConihe, special United States Indian agent, on April 27, 1911, wherein Powell states that he took about 4,000 applications and made no charge for them, after which he charged applicants $1.25 each; that he made this charge because the money that had been advanced by Crews, Cantwell & Hurlbut was exhausted; that he sent all these claims he was making a charge for to Crews & Cantwell; that he took about 100 applications at Monticello, Miss., for Crews & Cantwell and charged $2.50 each there; that he took a few names at Biloxi, Miss., and charged $1.25 for each applicant there, and that these claims were for Crews & Cantwell; that he also visited Meridian, Miss., and took about 88 applications there for Crews & Cantwell, but for which no charge was made; and that he had taken no applications for Crews & Cantwell after his association with Matthews (meaning Attorney W. B. Matthews, of Washington, D. C.).

From the foregoing statements of Powell in his said affidavit he doubtless took contracts for Crews & Cantwell from approximately 4,200 claimants, as stated on page 13 of this report, and also as shown on page 14 hereof, by copy of Mr. C. B. Moling's letter of June 12, 1911, to Hon. W. L. Dechant, of Middletown, Ohio, which, with the 2,258 contracts taken by Powell for W. B. Matthews and subsequently transferred to Crews & Cantwell, and, as stated by Luke W. Conerly (assisted by Powell), 1,300 turned in to Crews & Cantwell during 1912 and early part of 1913 (see p. 37 of this report), together with about 1,800 additional contracts which Mr. Conerly has recently procured and ready to turn in to Mr. Crews (see also p. 37 of this report), approximates 9,558 of this class of contracts on a 20 per cent contingent fee, controlled by Crews & Cantwell and their associates of the Texas-Oklahoma Investment Co., and which, with about 2,300 contracts obtained for Crews & Cantwell from freedmen on a 35 per cent contingent fee, as stated by Robert L. Fortune (see pp. 30-32 of this report), brings the number of claimants represented by them up to 11,858, approximately.

I transmit herewith five forms of blanks used in executing these contracts, "Exhibit E" being the form used by A. P. Powell in procuring contracts for Crews & Cantwell while working on a salary for them. "Exhibit F" was the form used by said Powell while procuring contracts for W. B. Matthews. "Exhibit G" is the form now being used by A. P. Powell in taking contracts in his own name. "Exhibit H" is the form used by Luke W. Conerly in writing up contracts for T. B. Crews. "Exhibit I" was the form used by the three subagents of J. Milton Turner in procuring contracts from Choctaw and Chickasaw freedmen for Crews & Cantwell, and "Exhibit J" contains copies of five notices circulated by A. P. Powell in soliciting contracts; also specially prepared press dispatches for distribution, with the evident object of thus arousing enthusiasm in the Mississippi Choctaw matter.

In conclusion I desire to state that from a careful perusal of the numerous letters of claimants from whom A. P. Powell had obtained contracts, seeking information with reference thereto, as contained in the file of papers furnished me by the Indian Office for reference in this investigation, together with my having interrogated numerous persons as to the representations made to claimants by Powell and other solicitors, it appears that Powell did not represent himself as an official of the Government nor of the Choctaw Nation, and thus therefore avoided violating the statutes in that respect, notwithstanding which, as stated by many persons, the impression undoubtedly prevailed, especially among the more ignorant, that he was a lawyer and represented the Government in some manner in soliciting contracts from Choctaw claimants.

Many persons whom I interrogated regarding the matter asserted that Powell had invariably denied being in any way connected with the Government and was only endeavoring to get the rolls reopened that the unenrolled Choctaws might receive their rightful shares, which, as stated by him, would be 320 acres of land and about $2,500 in cash to each claimant, less 30 per cent contingent fee to the attorneys.

I return herewith the file of papers furnished me by the Indian Office for reference in this investigation.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES MCLAUGHLIN, Inspector.

GULF COAST LAND & INVESTMENT CO.,
STATE BANK BUILDING,
El Campo, Tex., March 8, 1911.

A. P. POWELL,
Bay St. Louis, Miss.

DEAR SIR: Your letter addressed to Mr. Hurlbut, under date of March 6, has just reached us, and as Mr. Hurlbut is away from the office at this time, and as you seem to have a wrong idea of the amount that has been spent for contracts, or rather for the actual expense of taking contracts up to the present time, we think it advisable to supply you with the figures as shown on our books for the money already paid out for field work, for the actual expense of taking the contracts, not to say anything of that used by Crews & Cantwell in getting ready for proving up.

Powell has received, to cover expenses, to date	$2,606.02
Powell has received salary for taking contracts	900.00
Nickols has received for helping in taking Oklahoma contracts	125.00
Turner has received for helping in taking Oklahoma contracts	165.00
Hurlbut has been to an expense in going to Oklahoma and taking contracts there	327.00
Or there has been a total spent on taking contracts of	3,523.02

So you will see that, instead of as you say, when you make the statement that you have used only $1,800 yourself you have really used $2,906.02, and this does not include the $65 given you by Cantwell while you were in Washington the last time. And you will see by this that Mr. Hurlbut was exactly right when he stated that about $7,000 has already been spent.

Mr. Hurlbut will no doubt answer the part of your letter where you refer to his paying you $122 when he returns to the office, and I think this matter will be fixed up between you and him in a satisfactory manner, as he wishes to do exactly what is right by you.

Yours, very truly,

L. S. HURLBUT,
Per L. H. BEAL.

STATEMENT OF MR. LUKE WARD CONERLY.

Mr. Luke Ward Conerly, of Gulfport, Miss., station "A," made the following statement to Special Agent McConihe at Jackson, Miss., April 26, 1911, under oath:

I know A. P. Powell. He is engaged in writing up Choctaw claims in Mississippi. I am working with Mr. Powell now. Have been with him at Tylertown, Pike County, Bay St. Louis, and I am now engaged at McComb City, Pike County. I was not with him all the time at Bay St. Louis. I have been present when large numbers of persons appeared before Mr. Powell, and I never heard him say he was a Government official or agent, or make any statement that could lead others to think so.

I met Powell about July and asked him what he was doing, and he said he was getting up claims for Mississippi Choctaws under the treaty of 1830. I understood that he had been before Congress with the claims. He said that Crews & Cantwell were getting up the claims to present to Congress, the courts, or the department. Powell said he was getting the claims for that firm. I do not know what he gets out of it. I have never heard Powell say that he was representing the Government, nor have I ever heard anyone say that they heard or was told by Powell that he was a United States official, or was representing the Government. At Bay St. Louis he was making no charges at first for his work. Powell required every applicant to show up his ancestry.

At Bay St. Louis he ran out of blanks and had some more printed, and afterwards charged them $1.25, including notary fee. Powell sent me to Tylertown to work there getting up claims, and I made a charge $2.50 for each application written up and paid him $1 for blanks. I wrote up about 150 applications. The charge was to cover expenses. I represented to the people that they were entitled to put in claims against the Government under the provisions of the treaty of 1830, subject to such legislation by Congress as might be determined, and that they would have to enter into a contract if they wanted to put in a claim on a 30 per cent contingent fee, as shown by the contract with Crews & Cantwell, who were the lawyers having charge of the matter, who would present the claims to Congress. I have been at McComb City working up claims since March 21, and making a charge of $2.50 for each application. I pay Powell $1 for a set of blanks of two, and keep $1.25 and pay the notary 25 cents. I am taking all these aplications in the name of William B. Mathews, of Washington, D. C. Last December 19 I closed at Tylertown and went to Bay St. Louis and brought him all the applications I had left. These were the last I wrote up for Crews & Cantwell. I wrote no more after that until about March 13, when I met him at Columbia, where he was writing up claims for W. B. Mathews. He gave me to understand that he no longer represented Crews & Cantwell, but gave me no reason for the change. He gave me 100 sets of blanks to take to McComb and open an office there. Our agreement was that I should write 25 claims and send them to him with the $25. I have sent him 50 contracts and $50. I was not at Jackson with Mr. Powell. I made $1.25 on each application at McComb. I tell the people this is for my expenses.

I certify that the above statement was made to me under oath.

W. W. MCCONIHE,
Special Indian Agent.

EXHIBIT C.

GULFPORT, MISS., June 17, 1914.

Maj. JAMES MCLAUGHLIN,
Inspector, Indian Office, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: While you were in Gulfport I promised you I would send you a circular sent out by Crews & Cantwell from Washington in reference to A. P. Powell and also my employment by them in February, 1912. You will note that during the engagement of myself by Crews & Cantwell in which Mr. Masterson was concerned I was forbidden to charge even a notary fee against those who appeared before me.

Mr. Masterson refusing, after the 1st of February, 1913, to furnish any more money to cover my expenses, I took contracts during that month for that firm at my own expense. After February, 1913, say, 1st of March, 1913, I entered into an agreement with Thomas B. Crews to take contracts in his name, he to cover my expenses, except I reserved the right under the Mississippi laws to charge my notary fee of 50 cents each against those able to pay, and I have made it a rule not to charge a widow or a woman dependent on her own resources for a support, nor a cripple, nor anyone else not able to pay the 50 cents notary fee.

Not being allowed any traveling money in 1912 by Crews & Cantwell and Mr. Masterson, in some instances, in order to save the expense of coming to Gulfport, where there were groups of claimants, they volunteered to cover my expenses to their neighborhoods and return. In no instance whatever have I made a charge against persons putting in claims through me; neither have I appointed any subagent, nor allowed anyone, if I could help it, to charge for making out proof and contracts for others where I furnished the blanks, but I can not say this was not done in some instances without my knowledge.

I have always been careful to explain the situation of our case before the Committee on Indian Affairs, as I was present at the opening of the case before the subcommittee, February, 1912, and understood the situation, and have tried to impress upon the minds of all that the rolls could not be opened; nor could the Secretary of the Interior do anything without the enactment of a law to authorize it; and especially have I urged people not to annoy the Interior Department, nor our lawyers and Congressmen, with letters—to be patient and wait.

So anxious have our people been to get their claims in and to secure their rights that they would willingly have paid me a cash fee for the work of getting up their ancestral records and proof and preparing their papers for their attorneys, and I could have reaped thousands of dollars in the last two years; but, instead, I have expended a thousand dollars of my own earnings going to them to do the work for them free of charge, besides money furnished me by my associates and employers, Crews & Cantwell. Knowing the hard contest before us in Congress on account of powerful opposition, I was opposed to the charge of a petty fee against the claimants when their attorneys were doing their work for a contingent fee subject to modification and approval of the Secretary. By a special arrangement with Mr. Cantwell and also with Thomas B. Crews, I own a number of contracts in my own right, taken in the name of Crews & Cantwell, and I am trying, and have been all the time, to conform to my instructions from them as outlined in the circular inclosed sent out by them in February, 1912.

Yours, sincerely and truly,

LUKE W. CONERLY.

OFFICE OF CREWS & CANTWELL, 420 MUNSEY BUILDING,
Washington, D. C., February 16, 1912.

To the Mississippi Choctaws:

We inclose herewith a copy of an affidavit made by A. P. Powell, which explains itself. The occasion for sending this affidavit to you and for the statement which follows arises by reason of the fact that all relations between A. P. Powell and the firm of Crews & Cantwell are now severed.

A short history of our relations with him may not be improper. In the month of May, 1910, Mr. Cantwell had some business before the Committee on Indian Affairs with relation to citizenship claims in the Choctaw-Chickasaw Tribe, and made an argument before the committee on that day. At the conclusion of his argument Powell made to the committee a statement of his claim as a Mississippi Choctaw. (A copy of the statement of Mr. Powell made at that time is herewith inclosed for your information.) Mr. Cantwell had had no occasion to investigate the claims of the Mississippi Choctaws prior to that time, but upon a casual examination of the matter he became impressed with the idea that there was much more foundation for the claim of rights of the Mississippi Choctaws than had been stated by Mr. Powell before the committee, and upon a full investigation he became convinced that the claim of rights of the Mississippi Choctaws was well founded, and thereupon our firm employed Powell upon a salary to go to Mississippi and secure contracts for us and in our name as attorneys to represent the claimants. Powell gave us to understand at that time that the number of claimants would be about 2,000, and the money was provided for all the expense of taking that number of contracts. There were many more claimants than we were led to believe existed, and after nearly 3,000 contracts had been taken the money provided for that purpose became exhausted. Mr. Cantwell requested Powell, who was then in Washington, to return to Mississippi, and stop the work of taking contracts until arrangements could be provided for funds to pay the expenses of taking more contracts, and Powell was paid his expenses to return to Mississippi. Powell at that time suggested to Mr. Cantwell that the claimants would pay the expenses themselves, but as no bill had been introduced for the relief of the Mississippi Choctaws and as it was uncertain at that time whether any legislation would be enacted, Mr. Cantwell felt that to charge claimants for making out the papers, or to permit them to pay the cost of doing so, might cause the enemies of the Mississippi Choctaws to designate the efforts to get them together as a scheme of graft for these fees, and our firm was not willing to have the cause injured by permitting any occasion for such charges. Powell then went to Mr. W. B. Matthews, a lawyer of Washington, D. C., and represented to Mr. Matthews that there were a large number of claimants in Mississippi who were willing to pay for writing up their contracts, provided they could get a lawyer to represent them. Mr. Matthews consented to represent them in the event that Powell could secure the contracts, and quite a number of contracts were taken by Powell in the name of W. B. Matthews under this arrangement, the claimants paying a fee for writing the contracts. The firm of Crews & Cantwell had absolutely no connection with this whatever, and during all this period Powell was not in our employ and not in anywise connected with us. During all this time, however—that is, while Powell was taking contracts for Mr. Matthews—no contracts were taken for us or in our name, although we were doing all the work of preparing the law governing the case of the Mississippi Choctaws. Powell had up to this time still retained a contingent interest in the fee which might be eventually recovered by us, and desiring to eliminate him from all connection with our contracts, he was paid the sum of $2,400 in cash and he then relinquished all interest, contingent or otherwise, in the contracts which he had secured for us. This payment was in addition to the sum of $150 per month and his expenses, which had been fully paid him during the time he was taking contracts for us. Later, that is, with the last two months, Mr. Matthews, having then investigated the matter, became convinced that we were in a better position to present the case of the Mississippi Choctaws and to handle their interests than anyone else, transferred all the contracts which had been secured in his name to us and substituted our names as attorneys in accordance with the power given him by each individual contract.

From the beginning of this work we have been entirely willing to give Powell all the credit to which he may be entitled by reason of the fact that, without knowing upon what legal ground the rights of the Mississippi Choctaws depended, he remained in Washington almost friendless and alone (up to the time that he met Mr. Cantwell), insisting that he, as a Mississippi Choctaw, had some rights which had been disregarded. We have always regarded Powell as the instrument of Providence in keeping alive the claim of at least one Mississippi Choctaw after the closing of the rolls in 1907 up to the time when the work was commenced at our expense in Mississippi. For his energy after his return to Mississippi in keeping up the interest of the people there in their rights (although he was paid therefor a much higher salary than he had ever earned before in his life), we have always been willing to concede him full credit and honor. Unfortunately, however, Powell now seems to have the impression that he is a lawyer, that he should direct this campaign, and he has been particularly restless and sensitive about the few mild criticisms which we have indulged in regarding certain misrepresentations which he had ignorantly made to the people in Mississippi.

Some two weeks ago we engaged Powell upon a salary to go back to Mississippi to assist Mr. Luke W. Conerly, of Gulfport, Miss., in taking such contracts as might still be obtainable from claimants, with the express provision that Powell and Conerly should be paid a salary and that no charge should be made the claimants. While we do not regard it as anything improper for the claimants to pay the expenses necessarily incident to making contracts for the protection of their rights, yet, having defrayed all the expenses of taking contracts for us before and desiring to prevent any reflection upon the agitation for those rights as being a means by which a petty profit might be made, we have steadily opposed the idea of taking any contracts except at our own expense.

A telegram has just been received from Powell in Mississippi saying that "Our deal is off." Owing to his peculiar impulsive disposition, we are led to fear that he may be indulging in some misrepresentation as to what is now being done in Washington and that he contemplates some arrangement by which he may continue to charge claimants for taking their contracts as he had heretofore done with the Matthews contracts.

We desire to say to the claimants that a bill for their full and adequate relief has been introduced in the lower House by Mr. HARRISON, of Mississippi; that all the Members of the Mississippi delegation and Mr. Wickliffe, of Louisiana, are enthusiastically supporting the bill; and that Congressman HARRISON and Mr. Cantwell are now engaged in making arguments before the Subcommittee on Indian Affairs in Congress, making a full presentation of the case, and that everything is being done that can be done for the relief of these claimants.

Mr. Luke W. Conerly, of Gulfport, Miss., who is himself a Mississippi Choctaw claimant, will return to Mississippi from Washington in a few days, and any of your friends or relatives who are not now represented by us who desire attorneys to represent them may procure blank contracts and blank memoranda of evidence from Mr. Conerly. All those who apply to him at Gulfport, Miss., will have the memorandum of their evidence filled and the contracts prepared and acknowledged without charge, and upon giving him the preliminary information by mail, the papers will be prepared by him and returned to you at your home in the event that you can not get to Gulfport. In case the papers are acknowledged at your home, however, the claimant would be expected to pay the notary fee, which in any event would not be more than 50 cents.

We repeat we have never had any desire to take away from Powell the credit for whatever work he has done. He is in the habit of looking upon himself as the "father" of the Mississippi Choctaws. We have been reliably informed that Powell has heretofore represented throughout Mississippi that he was the attorney who presented this matter before Congress. In order to gratify his vanity we had inserted in the first contracts a recognition of Powell's services, but the copy of the statement and the only statement which Powell has ever made before any committee of Congress is herewith inclosed, from which each claimant can easily determine for himself that if the rights of the Mississippi Choctaws had depended upon Powell's efforts alone, they would not have gotten very far toward being recognized. The statement itself shows that Powell did nothing except call attention to his own claim, and a comparison of his statement with the voluminous brief of Mr. Cantwell shows how imperfectly even his own rights were stated. Whatever Mr. Powell may do can not affect the rights of the claimants. Their rights will be fully protected in any event, and this letter is sent you only for the purpose of thoroughly acquainting you with the situation in order to prevent the possibility of any wrong impression being created in regard to your claim.

CREWS & CANTWELL.

STATE OF MISSOURI,
City of St. Louis, ss:

A. P. Powell, upon his oath, deposes and says:

That in the month of May, 1910, at the city of Washington, D. C., he was employed by the firm of Crews & Cantwell to secure contracts for them for their employment as attorneys by persons claiming rights as Mississippi Choctaws under the treaty of 1830; that his instructions from Mr. Cantwell were to write the contract of no person who was not a bona fide claimant under said treaty, and to write contracts with no person except those who had record or evidence by tradition of their pedigree as a descendant of a person entitled to lands under the treaty of 1830; that he was paid a salary of $150 per month and all of his expenses, and had a contract for contingent interest in the fees that might be recovered by Crews & Cantwell; that all of the expenses of securing about 3,800 contracts, including the acknowledgments, were paid by the firm of Crews & Cantwell, and that no charges were made by him against any of the claimants for any of his services in writing contracts for Crews & Cantwell; that after Crews & Cantwell stopped taking contracts, the affiant was besieged by other persons who had had no opportunity, up to that time, to have their contracts written, and that affiant, upon his own responsibility, took contracts with about 300 persons, in the name of Crews & Cantwell, charging the applicants a fee of $1.50 for each contract; that after communicating to the firm of Crews & Cantwell the fact that these last 300 had been taken for which this charge had been made, Mr. Cantwell first declared that as they had made no charges for the other contracts, they did not want these contracts at all, but realizing that this would put the claimants in a bad position and that their rights might be neglected, the contracts were finally accepted by Crews & Cantwell; that Mr. Cantwell instructed this affiant to return the $1.50 charge made by this affiant, and that Crews & Cantwell then paid this affiant his expenses while taking these last-mentioned contracts.

That over 3,800 contracts had been taken prior to that time, for which no charges had been made; that under no circumstances and at no time did Crews & Cantwell, or any one of them, authorize or request that any contracts be taken for which a charge should be made, and that the only contracts taken in their name for which charges were made were as above detailed and under the above circumstances, which was after Crews & Cantwell had notified this affiant that they did not wish to go further on taking contracts.

That at no time and under no circumstances did Crews & Cantwell, or any one of them, ever instruct this affiant to take the contract of any person who did not claim to be a lineal descendant of an Indian entitled to lands under the treaty of 1830.

Affiant further states that he has taken no contracts with full-blood negroes; that until within the last six weeks neither Crews nor Cantwell had any knowledge of the large number of persons with negro blood in Mississippi claiming such rights, although Mr. Cantwell had stated to this affiant that he did not regard the presence of negro blood as a sufficient bar to destroy the legal right of one who had undoubted Indian blood and is an undoubted descendant of an Indian claiming rights under the treaty of 1830, although Mr. Cantwell had stated to this affiant on several occasions that the fact that one had negro blood would make it very difficult to establish the heirship. This affiant states that out of over 4,000 contracts taken, there are not more than 20 per cent who have any negro blood whatever.

Affiant further states that in consideration of the sum of $2,400 paid him in cash he has relinquished and conveyed to Crews & Cantwell all his contingent right in the fees in the contracts above referred to, and hereby cancels said contract; and that this affiant has no further financial interest in the fees or the contracts made in the name of Crews & Cantwell.

Affiant further states that he has not heretofore assigned his right to a contingent interest in the fees aforesaid to anyone.

JACKSON, MISS., April 27, 1911.

Alex. P. Powell, being first duly sworn by Special United States Indian Agent W. W. McConihe, deposes and says as follows:

I reside at Homer, Okla. My present occupation is getting up claims among the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians and their descendants who remained in Mississippi after the Dancing Rabbit Creek treaty of 1830. I was first employed by Crews & Cantwell, of St. Louis, Mo. I went before the Committee of Indian Affairs in Congress at Washington, April 2, 1910, and they gave me a hearing on the claims of these Indians. Mr. Harry J. Cantwell was present at the hearing, and after I got through my talk with the committee Cantwell came to me and asked me how much money I wanted to take the claims in Mississippi. I said it would take at least $5,000. Cantwell wired S. L. Hulbert, of El Campon, Tex., to come to Washington at once. Hulbert came to Washington and arranged with Cantwell, and Hulbert guaranteed to put up $5,000 for getting the work of the applications.

I first opened an office at 315 Farish Street, Jackson, Miss., and began to take applications. I put an advertisement in the paper at Jackson inviting all persons who were descendants of the Choctaw-Chickasaws under the treaty of 1830 to appear before me and make proof of their rights and descent. I took about 700 applications at Jackson and made no charges to the applicants therefor. I next went to Bay St. Louis and opened an office there near the railroad depot and put an advertisement in the Sea Coast Echo of that city, being the same as I put in the papers at other places. I took about 4,000 applications and made no charge for them. After the 4,000 were registered more applications came in and I charged them $1.25 each. I made this charge because the money that had been advanced by Crews, Cantwell, & Hulbert was exhausted, and they refused to put up any more money for taking applications. This charge by me was to cover expenses of continuing the work of getting applications. I sent all these claims that I was making a charge for to Crews & Cantwell. I went from Bay St. Louis to Washington to see Mr. Cantwell and tried to get Hulbert to put up more money, and Hulbert notified me at Jackson, Miss., that he had put up $7,000, and that we had to take proof of the same, and he was willing to put up the $7,000 for that purpose. He has not put it up yet.

We went to Columbia, Miss., and took about 100 applications there. The contracts that we wrote there were made in the name of William D. Matthews, of Washington, D. C. I have associated myself with Matthews for the reason that Crews & Cantwell said that they had enough claims, and that Hulbert would not put up any more money for claims. My agreement was made with Matthews that he was to appear before the committee of Congress with me, and our contract with the applicants was for 20 per cent of all amounts recovered, and not for 30 per cent as was printed in the contract, which is an error and which has been corrected in the written applications. I went to Monticello and took applications for Crews & Cantwell and charged $2.50 each there. I took about 100 names there. I took a few names at Biloxi and charged $1.25 for each applicant there. These claims were for Crews & Cantwell. I also visited Meridian and took about 88 applications there for Crews & Cantwell, but for which no charge was made. I have taken no applications for Crews & Cantwell since my association with Matthews.

I am working at Philadelphia, Miss., now and have taken about 160 applications for Matthews and am charging $2.50, and the applicants are very willing to pay the amount. I am making this charge because Matthews has put up no money for me and my expenses, and I have to use the money to pay for my clerk hire, office rent, and other expenses in connection with the work of taking applications.

Mr. Luke Conerly is employed by me at McComb City, Miss., to get applications. He charges each applicant $2.50. I get a dollar out of this $2.50 for my expenses and the printing of blanks which I furnish him. I have paid expenses of Conerly out of this money when he was traveling, board bill, telegraphing, and other incidental expenses he has incurred.

No one is working for me in Oklahoma or Arkansas. I do not know J. Eubanks, and he is not associated with me in any way in the work I am doing.

I have never at any time, or to any person, said that I was a Government official in any respect. I have only represented that I am acting and representing my people before Congress, and I am getting up these claims for that purpose.

When at Jackson in June, 1910, I had a circular sent out and meant to say that I was a representative of my tribe and obtaining applicants for their rights as Choctaws and Chickasaws, but by an error my clerk said that I was a practicing attorney before the committees of Congress. That was not my intention to have it so stated, and I am not responsible for the error.

The contract forms used by me were worded and made up by Crews & Cantwell, and I am not responsible for anything in such wording.

I, Alec P. Powell, do solemnly swear that the foregoing statement was made voluntarily by me, and that it is true in every respect, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

ALEXANDER P. POWELL.

MISSISSIPPI CHOCTAW CONTRACT.

This agreement, made this 5th day of September, 1910, by and between Louis Joseph Ryan, now residing at the town of Biloxi, in the county of Harrison, State of Mississippi, party of the first part, and Thomas B. Crews and Harry J. Cantwell, jointly, parties of the second part, witnesseth:

That whereas the party of the first part is entitled as a Mississippi Choctaw or as a descendant of a Mississippi Choctaw under the laws of the United States to certain rights in the distribution of the tribal property of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Indian Tribe in Oklahoma; and

Whereas the party of the first part has been heretofore denied enrollment or has had no opportunity to make application for proper enrollment in said rolls as a Mississippi Choctaw; and

Whereas it is necessary that the party of the first part shall secure the lawful professional services of attorneys for the purpose of presenting such evidence as the party of the first part may have of his status and right as a Mississippi Choctaw or a descendant of a Mississippi Choctaw so entitled to the rights aforesaid and for other necessary legal services in establishing and securing his rights in the premises; and

Whereas the party of the first part is without any means or funds to compensate such attorneys and counsel;

Now, therefore, the premises considered, the parties of the second part jointly agree—

First. To represent the party of the first part as attorneys and counsel in presenting to the Interior Department such lawful evidence as the party of the first part may collect to establish the facts of his pedigree and status and such other facts as may be necessary to establish the right claimed.

Second. To represent as attorneys the party of the first part in all legal proceedings before any court, commission, or department of the Government of the United States or the State of Oklahoma wherever and whenever such right may be properly and legally tried.

Third. To present before the committees of Congress proper legal argument in support of the right so claimed or in support of any measure tending to provide a remedy for the right so claimed.

Fourth. To furnish party of the first part necessary information for the purpose of enabling him to select to the best advantage any lands that he may be entitled to by reason of said right.

Fifth. To collect all sums of money, lands, and property that may properly be collected, selected, and received hereafter by reason of said right, and to faithfully pay over and account to said party of the first part for all such sums of money and property after deducting the compensation hereinafter provided for.

In consideration of the premises and the agreement of the parties of the second part as aforesaid, and of services heretofore rendered by them, the party of the first part contracts and agrees to pay and assign, transfer, and convey to the parties of the second part 30 per cent of all sums of money, lands, and property that may be received by reason of the right claimed, and hereby irrevocably appoints the parties of the second part his true and lawful attorneys in fact, to do any and all acts in his name, place, and stead as fully and completely as he might do in person in and about the subject matter of this agreement, and to execute such receipts, discharges, and releases as the party of the first part might lawfully do, hereby ratifying and confirming all that his said attorneys in fact and in law may do in the premises.

The party of the first part hereby revokes all powers of attorney, if any, heretofore made by him to any person or persons whomsoever, touching said rights or interests, and requests that the Interior Department of the United States recognize the parties of the second part as his exclusive agents and attorneys in the premises.

And it is hereby specifically agreed that the appointment herein of Thomas B. Crews and Harry J. Cantwell is joint, and that in the event of the death of either the survivor shall succeed to all rights and benefits of this agreement, and shall perform all of the duties hereunder.

It is further agreed that by reason of the legal services rendered prior to and at the signing of this agreement, in advising the party of the first part as to his legal rights, and in consideration of the services heretofore rendered by A. P. Powell before the committees of Congress in presenting the claims of the class of persons to which the party of the first part belongs, said parties of the second part having compensated said A. P. Powell therefor, and in further consideration of the absolute agreemnt herein of the parties of the second part to perform the services herein, that the powers herein granted are powers coupled with an interest; and it is agreed that the parties of the second part may jointly designate, substitute, and appoint, in writing, any competent attorney or attorneys at law to assist in the performance of the duties of the parties of the second part hereunder, and to clothe said person or persons with all the powers herein granted to the parties of the second part, the parties of the second part hereby guaranteeing the efficiency and integrity of any and all persons who may be thus appointed, it being distinctly understood that the compensation of such persons for such assistance shall not be paid by the party of the first part.

It is further understood and agreed that, in the event it becomes necessary under any law now existing or hereafter enacted, that this contract shall be approved by the Secretary of the Interior; then, in that event, the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, modify the terms of this contract as to the compensation to be paid the parties of the second part, without invalidating this contract, and said contract as modified by said Secretary of the Interior shall be binding upon the parties hereto, provided always that the compensation fixed by the Secretary of the Interior shall in no event exceed the percentage above stated.

Executed in duplicate.

EXHIBIT J.

To whom it may concern:

This is to certify that I, Alexander P. Powell, a representative of the Choctaw Tribe of Indians now engaged in soliciting contracts with Mississippi Choctaws for services to be rendered in prosecuting their claim before the different branches of the Government, in order to secure for them a reopening of the rolls of those entitled to share in the tribal property belonging to the Choctaw Tribe in the State of Oklahoma, am acting in my individual capacity and for the benefit of myself and those associated with me in this effort to secure the right of said Indians in said property.

I further certify that I am in no manner employed or engaged by the United States Government to solicit any contract with said Indians or perform any duty in connection therein.

Respectfully,

ALEXANDER P. POWELL.

NOTICE TO INDIANS.

This is your last chance in connection with William B. Mathews, attorney at law, Evans Building, Washington, D. C. I am engaged in writing up claims of all Mississippi Choctaws and their descendants who remain in Mississippi after Dancing Rabbit Creek treaty with the United States Government in 1830.

I will remain here for a few days only; I will be glad to write up all beneficiaries; we intend to submit all claims to the Sixty-second Congress, which convenes in Washington, D. C., April 4, 1911. I am Indian and Spaniard, and my grandfather was a signer of the great treaty concluded September 27, 1830.

ALEXANDER P. POWELL.

PHILADELPHIA, MISS.

NOTICE TO INDIANS AND THEIR DESCENDANTS—IN CONNECTION WITH HON. HARRY PEYTON, ROOM 420 BOND BUILDING, WASHINGTON, D. C.

This is your last chance to secure benefits under the bill introduced by Hon. PAT HARRISON, of the sixth district of Mississippi, now pending before the Sixty-second Congress, for the relief of Mississippi Choctaws and their descendants who remained in Mississippi after the treaty of 1830.

I am an Indian and a Spaniard and my grandfather was a signer of the treaty of 1830.

I will be glad to write up all beneficiaries, and I have in my possession a record that will enable you to trace your ancestors back to 1780.

Those with negro blood need not apply.

I will be at _____, Miss., on the _____ day of _____, 1912.

ALEXANDER P. POWELL,
No. 106 Fourth Avenue, Laurel, Miss.
Office: Room 420, Bond Building, Washington, D. C.

(This paper was sent to Indian Office by Mrs. Viola Strickland, of Meridian, Miss., No. 1400 Tenth Ave., under date of Sept. 16, 1912.)

THIS IS YOUR LAST CHANCE—NOTICE TO THE ONCE MIGHTY TRIBE OF RED MEN WHO ONCE OWNED THIS COUNTRY AND TO THEIR DESCENDANTS.

In connection with Hon. Harry Peyton, room 408, and Hon. Oliver A. Phelps, room 619 Bond Building, Washington, D. C., I am still engaged in writing up all Mississippi Choctaws and their descendants who remained in Mississippi after the Dancing Rabbit Creek treaty with the United States Government, concluded September 27, 1830.

The treaty of 1830, known as the treaty of "Perpetual friendship," provides that the Indian Territory shall go to the red man and his descendants "as long as water runs and grass grows"; the treaty furthermore provided that our descendants that did not see fit to go to the Territory then, at any time that they may take a notion to come on and join the tribe in the Territory, they shall share in this distribution as long "as water runs and grass grows." If your ancestors were born east of the Mississippi River, call on me; it is possible that some of them may have been at the treaty mentioned above.

I am an Indian and a Spaniard, and my grandfather, Nita, was a signer of the treaty of 1830.

I have in my possession a record of the old aboriginal that will permit you to trace your Indian ancestry back as far as 1780.

All Mississippi Choctaw cases are now pending before Committee on Indian Affairs, Sixty-third Congress, first session, waiting for report and decision. I will be glad to write up all beneficiaries.

Those with negro blood need not apply.

I will be at W. J. Nelson's, 802 Second Street, Lake Charles, La., on September 5.

ALEXANDER P. POWELL.

NOTICE TO MISSISSIPPI CHOCTAWS.

In connection with Harry J. Cantwell, Thos. L. Crews, and William B. Matthews, attorneys of Washington, D. C., I am still engaged in writing up claims for the Choctaw-Chickasaw Indians and their descendants who remained in Mississippi after the Dancing Rabbit Creek treaty with the United States Government. I am a member of the Choctaw Tribe of Indians and my grandfather was a signer of the great treaty made September 27, 1830. I will be glad to communicate with any beneficiary at my office in Bay St. Louis, Miss.

"INDIANS" LIVING IN OLD MISSISSIPPI.

"All Mississippi Choctaw Indians and their descendants are asked to meet at the county courthouse next Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The object of the meeting is to further the rights contained in the treaty of 1830 between the United States and Choctaws. (Biloxi Herald.)"

To which is answered: Such a meeting as is scheduled as per the above would be "nuts" for some moving-picture company, provided such meeting is attended by all the people who have filed claims as descendants of the tribe of red men known as Choctaws. They are of all shades and color, running from the real Indian to the coal-black, thick-lipped, flat-nosed, kinky-headed negro, with a good sprinkling of whites, in whose veins no one but themselves ever suspected that a drop of Indian blood flowed. But anything goes in this day and generation when the thought of "easy money" presents itself. Uncle Sam's coffers will scarcely be opened for the motley crew, however just may be the claims of some of the pure-bred Choctaws. (Gulf Coast Progress.)

HOUSTON INVESTORS MAY GET MILLIONS FROM INDIAN CLAIM.

A Houston organization, in which more than $2,500,000 is at stake and the hereditary rights of the Choctaw Tribe of Mississippi is the merchandise, has received quite a boost in a telegram received by Judge Harris Masterson. Many Houstonians are interested in the enterprise. The telegram reads as follows:

"Subcommittee report of Friday last was unanimous and recommends admission of all full bloods, also all others who can prove descent from one who either received or should have received patent under fourteenth article, treaty of 1830. Meetings are executive and no arguments being heard."

To those who are not interested in the venture the telegram needs interpretation. It comes from Washington and has to do with a bill introduced by Mr. HARRISON, of Mississippi, in behalf of the admission to enrollment of the Mississippi Choctaw Indians and their descendants to participation in the money and lands belonging to the Choctaw Tribe.

Some time ago Judge Masterson was instrumental in forming an organization to urge the claim of the Choctaw Tribe in a participation of certain lands in the Territories and moneys in the United States Treasury. Many of these Indians were his clients. Going rather deeply into the matter, he banded over 4,000 of these claimants together and became their representative and legal adviser.

Money was needed to carry the enterprise through, and a company was formed. Between 50 and 60 men came into the company, and many of these are prominent Houstonians.

Judge Masterson says that the venture is one which promises tremendous returns for the amount invested by the stockholders, and that he is confident Congress will give assent to the recommendation of the subcommittee.

WOULD RESTORE CHOCTAW INDIAN PENSION BILLS.

[Associated Press.]

WASHINGTON, December 13.

The bill introduced in the House last session by Representative Harrison providing reopening of rolls of the Chickasaw-Choctaw Indian Tribes, came up for consideration in the House yesterday. A vote was not reached. In his speech in favor of the bill Mr. Harrison said, in part:

"The Mississippi Choctaws have been woefully neglected and unmercifully treated. They acquire rights under the fourteenth article of the treaty of 1830 that the United States Government has never fairly and justly recognized. Every act of Congress passed with respect to the Mississippi Choctaws has violated the spirit and the letter of that article of the treaty.

"The Oklahoma Choctaws were permitted by act of Congress in 1881 to sue the United States Government, in which suit they recovered from the Government $8,000,000 for damages done to the Mississippi Choctaws in Mississippi. Scheming attorneys, representing the tribe, dictate agreements, suggest, lobby for, and have passed laws that not only make it impossible for the Mississippi Choctaws to be enrolled upon tribal rolls, but through their influence they have actually created courts to prevent or exclude the Mississippi Choctaws from being enrolled. One of the blackest spots in the history of the administration of the Choctaw Nation is the escapades practiced in the citizenship court.

"The Mississippi Choctaw is a part of that great Indian nation which never raised a tomahawk against an American citizen. Thousands of her warriers displayed their heroism under Jackson at New Orleans."

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD the bill, the report of the committee, and the conference report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection it is so ordered. The matter referred to is as follows:

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL AS IT PASSED THE SENATE WITH AMENDMENTS.

Be it enacted, etc., That the following sums be, and they are hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the purpose of paying the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and in full compensation for all offices the salaries for which are provided for herein for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, namely:

For the survey, resurvey, classification, and allotment of lands in severalty under the provisions of the act of February 8, 1887 (24 Stat. L., 388), entitled "An act to provide for the allotment of lands in severalty to Indians," and under any other act or acts providing for the survey or allotment of Indian lands, $125,000, to be repaid proportionately out of any Indian moneys held in trust or otherwise by the United States and available by law for such reimbursable purposes and to remain available until expended: Provided, That no part of said sum shall be used for the survey, resurvey, classification, or allotment of any land in severalty on the public domain to any Indian, whether of the Navajo or other tribes, within the State of New Mexico and the State of Arizona, who was not residing upon the public domain prior to June 30, 1914.

For the construction, repair, and maintenance of ditches, reservoirs, and dams, purchase and use of irrigation tools and appliances, water rights, ditches, lands necessary for canals, pipe lines, and reservoirs for Indian reservations and allotments, and for drainage and protection of irrigable lands from damage by floods, or loss of water rights, including expenses of necessary surveys and investigations to determine the feasibility and estimated cost of new projects and power and reservoir sites on Indian reservations in accordance with the provisions of section 13 of the act of June 25, 1910, $250,000, reimbursable as provided in the act of August 1, 1914, and to remain available until expended: Provided, That no part of this appropriation shall be expended on any irrigation system or reclamation project for which specific appropriation is made in this act or for which public funds are or may be available under any other act of Congress; for pay of one chief inspector of irrigation, who shall be a skilled irrigation engineer, $4,000; one assistant inspector of irrigation, who shall be a skilled irrigation engineer, $2,500; for traveling and incidental expenses of two inspectors of irrigation, including sleeping-car fare and a per diem of $3 in lieu of subsistence when actually employed on duty in the field and away from designated headquarters, $3,200; in all, $259,700; Provided also, That not to exceed seven superintendents of irrigation, six of whom shall be skilled irrigation engineers and one competent to pass upon water rights, and one field-cost accountant, may be employed: Provided further, That hereafter the proceeds of sales of material utilized for temporary irrigation work and structures shall be covered into the appropriation made therefor and be available for the purpose of the appropriation.

For the suppression of the traffic in intoxicating liquors among Indians, $135,000, of which sum $25,000 shall be immediately available, and section 8 of the act of March 1, 1895, is hereby reenacted as to that part of Oklahoma known as Indian Territory immediately prior to statehood, and section 2140 of the United States Revised Statutes are made applicable to that part of Oklahoma.

To relieve distress among Indians and to provide for their care and for the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, trachoma, smallpox, and other contagious and infectious diseases, including the purchase of vaccine and expense of vaccination, $300,000: Provided, That not to exceed $90,000 of the amount herein appropriated may be expended in the erection and equipment of new hospitals for the use of Indians; and no hospital shall be constructed at a cost to exceed $15,000, including equipment: Provided further, That hereafter the Secretary of the Interior shall submit to Congress annually a detailed report as to all moneys expended in the erection and maintenance of hospitals and sanatoriums as provided for herein.

That so much of section 4 of the act of May 11, 1880 (Stat. L., p. 132), as prohibits granting permission in writing or otherwise to any Indian or Indians on any Indian reservation to go into the State of Texas, under any pretext whatever, be, and the same is hereby, repealed.

That section 2 of the act approved March 2, 1907 (34 Stat. L., p. 1221), entitled "An act providing for the allotment and distribution of Indian tribal funds," be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"That the pro rata share of any Indian who is mentally or physically incapable of managing his or her own affairs may be withdrawn from the Treasury in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior and expended for the benefit of such Indian under such rules, regulations, and conditions as the said Secretary may prescribe: Provided, That said funds of any Indian shall not be withdrawn from the Treasury until needed by the Indian and upon his application and when approved by the Secretary of the Interior."

That section 5 of the act approved June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. L., p. 857), be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read:

"That it shall be unlawful for any person to induce any Indian to execute any contract, deed, mortgage, lease, or other instrument touching land held under a trust or other patent containing restrictions on alienation, or to procure the execution by any Indian of any such instrument, or to be a party with any Indian to any such contract, deed, mortgage, lease, or other instrument, or to offer any such contract, deed, mortgage, lease, or other instrument as aforesaid for record; and any person violating this provision shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 for the first offense, and if convicted for a second offense may be punished by a fine not exceeding $560, or imprisoned not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment, in the discretion of the court: Provided, That this section shall not apply to any contract, deed, mortgage, lease, or other instrument authorized by law to be made. Any Indian or his heirs in the possession of any live stock, their increase, or any other personal property issued by the United States or purchased with trust funds and held in trust by the United States, may lawfully sell, transfer, mortgage, or otherwise dispose of such property only with the consent in writing of the United States Indian agent or superintendent having jurisdiction over such property, and not otherwise. Any person who shall induce any Indian to sell, transfer, mortgage, or otherwise dispose of, or shall procure the sale, transfer, mortgage, or other disposal by any Indian, or shall be a party with any Indian to the sale, transfer, mortgage, or other disposal of any such personal property in violation of the foregoing provision, or who shall knowingly offer for record any instrument evidencing any prohibited or unlawful sale, transfer, mortgage, or other disposal of any such personal property, or who shall knowingly take or receive possession of any such personal property in pursuance to any such prohibited or unlawful sale, transfer, mortgage, or other transaction, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment. Any sale, transfer, mortgage, or other disposal in violation of this provision of any property so issued and held shall be absolutely void, and title to the property involved in such void transaction shall revert to the United States, and the property may be taken possession of by the United States Indian agent or superintendent having jurisdiction over the property. Any Indian or other person having tribal rights who shall induce any person to enter into any such contract, deed, mortgage, lease, sale, transfer, or other agreement or transaction prohibited and declared to be unlawful by the above provisions shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall upon conviction be punished by a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment: Provided further, That any United States Indian agent, superintendent, or employee that shall in any manner connive or conspire to secure, or assist in securing, the making of such prohibited contract shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or shall be imprisoned not exceeding one year, or by both such fine and imprisonment."

That the Commissioner of Indian Affairs is hereby authorized to investigate claims and negotiate agreements with any tribe or bands of Indians for the final adjudication and settlement of all claims and demands or such tribes or bands against the United States arising under any law, treaty, or agreement, and which have not heretofore been adjudicated; and the Secretary of the Interior shall report the result of such negotiations to Congress for its approval at the earliest practicable date, and there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $10,000 for all expenses in connection with this work, including pay of necessary additional employees.

That so much of the Indian appropriation act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stat. L., p. 326), as authorizes the President to extend the restrictive period against alienation in any trust or other patent issued to any Indian allottee be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read: "That prior to the expiration of the trust or other restrictive period against alienation on the lands allotted under any law or treaty to any Indian, the President may continue such trust or other restrictions against alienation for such further period as he may deem best: Provided, however, That this shall not apply to any lands of the Five Civilized Tribes or the Osage Nation, Oklahoma."

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States, at his discretion, the sum of $185,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the principal sum on deposit to the credit of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota, arising under section 7 of the act of January 14, 1889, entitled "An act for the relief and civilization of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota," and to use the same for the purpose of promoting civilization and self-support among the said Indians in manner and for purposes provided for in said act.

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to advance to the executive committee of the White Earth Band of Chippewa Indians in Minnesota the sum of $1,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended in the annual celebration of said band to be held June 14, 1915, out of the funds belonging to said band.

That the unexpended balance of the appropriation for "Enrollment of Chippewa allottees, White Earth Reservation, Minn.," contained in the act approved June 30, 1913 (38 Stat. L., p. 89), making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Indian Service for the fiscal year 1914, is hereby reappropriated and made immediately available for payment of salaries and expenses incurred after June 30, 1914, in making required enrollment. That the seventh paragraph of section 9 of the act approved June 30, 1913 (38 Stat. L., p. 88), be, and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:

"That the roll herein provided for shall be made in triplicate and shall show the allotment number or numbers, together with the description of the property allotted, and the name, age, sex, and whether the allottee is of full Indian blood or a mixed blood. The roll shall also state whether the person named is living or dead, and if dead, the approximate date of death shall be stated, when it can be ascertained, together with the age of such person at death as near as practicable. No allotment nor the allottee thereof shall be enrolled where there is a suit now pending, or hereafter commence prior to the completion of such roll, to cancel any conveyance of such allotment until such suit has been finally determined."

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States, at his discretion, the sum of $25,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the principal sum on deposit to the credit of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota, arising under section 7 of the act of January 14, 1889, entitled "An act for the relief and civilization of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota," and to use the same for the purpose of constructing, equipping, and maintaining a hospital, to be located on the Leech Lake Reservation, the site to be selected by the Secretary of the Interior, for the use and benefit of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota. Section 8 of the act approved August 1, 1914, is hereby amended in so far as to permit of the purchase of a site in the city of Cloquet, Minn., and the construction thereon of a hospital instead of on the Fond du Lac Reservation.

That the sum of $4,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the tribal funds of the Chippewa Indians of the State of Minnesota, is hereby appropriated to pay the expenses of the general council of said tribe to be held at Bemidji, Minn., beginning July 13, 1915, pursuant to the constitution of the general council of said Chippewa Indians of Minnesota, organized in May, 1913, and to pay the actual and necessary expenses of the members of the executive committee of said council when attending to the business of the tribe, and to pay the expenses to Washington, in January and February, 1915, of the delegation of Chippewa Indians of the State of Minnesota, appointed by the president of said general council pursuant to the resolution of said general council of date August 14, 1914, to present the affairs of said Chippewa Indians of the State of Minnesota to the officials of the United States, said $4,000 to be immediately available, and the expenses of said delegation to be paid by the Secretary of the Interior upon itemized accounts approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the expenses of said general council to be paid by the Secretary of the Interior upon itemized accounts approved by the president of the executive committee of said council and certified to by its secretary. The Secretary of the Interior may authorize an inspector or special agent to attend future sessions of said general council and conventions to which delegates therefor are elected.

That the Secretary of the Interior, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, is hereby authorized to use for or advance to any individual Chippewa Indian in the State of Minnesota entitled to participate in the permanent fund of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota who is blind, crippled, decrepit, or helpless from old age, disease, or accident, and such other Indians as the Secretary of the Interior may deem proper, in the aggregate not to exceed one-fourth of the amount which would now be coming to said Indian under a pro rata distribution of said permanent fund: Provided, That any money received hereunder by any member of said tribe or used for his or her benefit shall be deducted from the share of said member in the permanent fund of the said Chippewa Indians in Minnesota to which he or she would be entitled.

Hereafter on ceded lands in the State of Minnesota embraced within the provisions of the law entitled "An act for the relief and civilization of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota," approved January 14, 1889, the minerals in and mineral rights pertaining to any of the lands the cession of which was provided for in said act and for which the United States has not conveyed title shall be and remain in and are reserved for the use and benefit of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota.

That the following described lands within the Red Lake Indian Reservation, Minn., be, and the same hereby are, created into a forest reserve, to be known as the Red Lake Indian Forest: Townships 150 and 151 north, ranges 32, 33, 34, 35, and 36 west, and townships 152 and 153 north, ranges 32, 33, and 34 west of the fifth principal meridian, except the lands in townships 151 north, range 36 west, which lie north of the north line of sections 26 to 30, inclusive, and except all lands within sections 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, and 18, in township 153 north, range 34 west. The provisions of this section shall not apply to any lands which have heretofore been reserved for school, agency, church, or town-site purposes, or granted to private parties or corporations, within the area described: Provided, That when any of said lands are no longer needed for the purpose for which they were reserved, the Secretary of the Interior may declare such lands to be a part of the Red Lake Indian Forest.

That the forest shall be administered, by the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with the principles of scientific forestry, with a view to the production of successive timber crops thereon. The said Secretary is hereby authorized to sell dead, down, and matured pine timber and other marketable products, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, and to establish such sawmills and accessories as may be necessary to manufacture the dead, down, and matured timber into various products, and he may purchase such equipment and employ such persons as shall be necessary to carry out the purposes of this act. Before any expenditures are made or contracts entered into hereunder, the Secretary of the Interior shall submit an estimate, and annually thereafter, of such proposed expenditures, to be approved by Congress. The Indians, without charge, shall be allowed for fuel, under rules and regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, dead timber, standing or fallen, which is not of a merchantable grade or suited for timber.

That it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior to maintain at all times a forest cover on all parts of the forest which are not better adapted to agricultural uses than to the production of forest crops, and he may establish nurseries or purchase seedlings or transplants when needed for reforestation purposes.

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to issue a permit to any head of a family or adult unmarried member of the Red Lake Band of Indians entitling him or her to the exclusive use for a term of 10 years of any tract of land, not exceeding 20 acres in area, fronting on either Upper Red Lake or Lower Red Lake, having a shore line of not more than 50 rods. Similar permits may be issued by the said Secretary for legal subdivision, which do not border upon either of the said lakes with the same restrictions as to area. In the granting of these permits preference shall be given to Red Lake Indians who have occupied such land for a period of not less than three years prior to the passage of this act and each permit shall be renewed so long as the person or any member of his or her immediate family shall continue to reside thereon, unless in the opinion of the Secretary the best interests of the Red Lake Band of Indians demand that such permit be not renewed; and when a renewal is refused the Secretary shall cause an appraisal to be made of any permanent improvements placed upon such land by the permittee, or his immediate family, and shall pay to him, from the proceeds of the Red Lake Indian Forest, the amount of such appraisement. If any Indian permittee or his immediate family shall fail to reside upon the shore line or interior tract covered by his permit for a period of at least three months in any year, the permit shall be subject to cancellation by the Secretary of the Interior, and when a permit is thus canceled the Secretary may pay the permittee the value of his permanent improvements from the proceeds of the Indian Forest, if, in his judgment, the improvements are of any value to the Red Lake Indians. If lands covered by a lapsed or a canceled permit are assigned to another applicant, such new permittee shall be required to pay into the Red Lake Indian Forest fund the value which the improvements thereon have at the time of the issuance of such permit.

That every permit or lease issued under authority of this act to Indians or to other persons or corporations shall reserve to the Secretary of the Interior the right to cross the land covered thereby with logging roads or railroads, to use the shore line, or to erect thereon and use such structures as shall be necessary to the proper and economical management of the Indian Forest created by this act.

That whenever the board of county commissioners of any county in the State of Minnesota establish a State rural highway in accordance with the laws of said State, which highway directly benefits allotments of Indians not subject to taxation or special assessments, but which allotments would be assessed for such benefits under the laws of the said State were they not exempt by treaty, act of Congress, or other law, the said board of county commissioners may make a schedule of assessments against such benefited allottees, the amount of said assessments in each case being that prescribed by the laws of the said State for lands situated and benefited similar to the allotments of such allottees, and when so made file the same with the Secretary of the Interior. If in the judgment of the Secretary of the Interior the projected State rural highway is one that will be for the best interests of the Indian allotments affected, then he shall ascertain whether the assessments proposed against the said allottees are fair and just as compared with assessments against other lands similarly situated and benefited. If he shall find that said assessments are fair and just in the manner and to the extent aforesaid, he shall make an order that the said assessments are and shall be charged against the several allottees benefited and provide for notice thereof being served upon any allottee affected thereby. But the amount of any assessment or levy made or charged during the time said allotments are held in trust by the United States shall not be nor at any time become a lien on said allotments. The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and empowered to pay to the county treasurer of such county said assessments and parts thereof as they become due out of any funds belonging to the Indians owning said benefited allotments, and which funds are under the control of the United States or Secretary of the Interior, or out of any tribal funds under the control of the United States or Secretary of the Interior which are subject to be prorated among the members of the tribe to which the Indians owning such benefited allotments belong. Such sums as may be paid from tribal funds shall be charged against the Indians whose respective assessments have been paid: Provided, That every Indian who has been assessed in the manner aforesaid shall have the right to appeal within 30 days after being notified of such assessment to the Secretary of the Interior for a reexamination and readjudication of whether or not he has been assessed greater than his proportionate share, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to reduce the amount of such assessment if in his judgment justice requires it.

For the payment of high-school teachers of the White Earth Indian school, Minnesota, for instruction of children of the Chippewa Indians in the State of Minnesota, $4,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be used under rules to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That not to exceed $1,000 of this sum may be used to continue the education of boys appointed under the provisions of the act of Congress entitled, "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914," approved June 30, 1913: And provided further, That the unexpended balance of $555.43 remaining from the appropriation of $4,000 for the higher education of Chippewa boys appointed under the provisions of the said act, is hereby reappropriated, made immediately available, and will remain available until expended, under the same provisions as those contained in the original act.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to convey to independent school district No. 10, Mahnomen County, Minn., for the purpose of a demonstration farm in connection with the agricultural department of the public schools of said place, that certain tract of land which has been heretofore reserved for an Indian day school, but which day school has been discontinued and abandoned, which tract of land is described as follows, to wit: West half of the southwest quarter of section 11, township 144, range 42 west of the fifth principal meridian, in Minnesota: Provided, That such conveyance shall not operate to interfere with any existing right of allotment of said land and after such conveyance shall be made, if the grantee shall for more than three years cease to use the said lands and premises for the purposes herein specified, the same shall revert to the United States for the use of the White Earth Indians.

MISSISSIPPI INDIANS.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to investigate the condition of the Indians living in Mississippi and report to Congress on the first Monday of next December as to their need for additional land and school facilities, $1,000, to be immediately available.

MONTANA.

SEC. 11. For support and civilization of the Indians at Fort Belknap Agency, Mont., including pay of employees, $20,000.

For support and civilization of Indians at Flathead Agency, Mont., including pay of employees, $20,000, of which amount not exceeding $4,500 may be expended for salaries, the remainder to be immediately available for subsistence.

For support and civilization of Indians at Fort Peck Agency, Mont., including pay of employees, $30,000.

For support and civilization of Indians at Blackfeet Agency, Mont., including pay of employees, $25,000, of which amount not exceeding $8,000 may be expended for salaries and the remainder to be immediately available for subsistence.

For maintenance and operation including repairs of the Milk River irrigation system on the Fort Belknap Reservation, in Montana, $20,000, reimbursable in accordance with the provisions of the act of April 4, 1910.

For fulfilling treaties with Crows, Montana: For pay of physician, $1,200; and for pay of carpenter, miller, engineer, farmer, and blacksmith (art. 10, treaty of May 7, 1868), $3,000; for pay of second blacksmith (art. 8, same treaty), $1,200; in all, $6,000: Provided, That hereafter no tribal grazing lease or permit on the Crow Reservation shall be approved by the Secretary of the Interior without first procuring the consent of a majority of the members of a council regularly called by said Indians: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed, upon the application of any Indian allottee or allottees on said Crow Reservation, to build a fence in full compliance with the laws of Montana, sufficient to hold or turn all stock, inclosing the allotment or allotments of Indian allottee or allottees, the same to be reimbursed out of any distributive tribal funds to which said Indian may be entitled; and such Indian allottee shall be permitted to lease his allotted lands other than his homestead when so fenced for a term not exceeding five years beyond the date of the execution of the lease to any person or persons desiring to lease the same without interference on the part of any Government official: And be it further provided, That any lessee of allotted Indian lands on said Indian reservation shall be required to maintain said fence in good repair on the allotted lands so leased; and the Secretary of the Interior shall have the power, in case of inadequate compensation provided in said lease or of unfair terms or conditions contained therein or of any unfair treatment of the lessor by the lessee as a tenant, to cancel or revise said lease, such lease shall be made upon forms furnished by the Interior Department. Natural guardians having the care and custody of minors or incompetent persons may make application, execute the lease above provided for, collect the rents, and do and perform all acts on behalf of such minors or incompetent persons which are herein provided to be done or performed by said Indian allottee, and there is hereby appropriated sufficient money, out of any tribal funds which are now or may hereafter be available, to carry out the provisions herein, said tribal funds to be reimbursed under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

For subsistence and civilization of the Northern Cheyennes and Arapahoes (agreement with the Sioux Indians, approved Feb. 28, 1877), including Northern Cheyennes removed from Pine Ridge Agency to Tongue River, Mont., and for pay of physician, two teachers, two carpenters, one miller, two farmers, a blacksmith, and engineer (art. 7, treaty of May 10, 1868), $85,000.

For the employment of "line riders" along the southern and eastern boundaries of the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation in the State of Montana, $1,500.

For the support and civilization of Rocky Boy's Band of Chippewas, and other indigent and homeless Indians in the State of Montana, including pay of employees, $10,000, to be immediately available.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States not to exceed the sum of $150,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, of the principal sum on deposit to the credit of the Indians on the Blackfeet Reservation, in Montana, for the purpose of purchasing and caring for cattle for the use of said Indians, seeds, and necessary farming equipment, to enable them to become self-supporting, under such rules, regulations, and conditions as said Secretary of the Interior may prescribe.

That any moneys which may be due from the Indians of the Fort Belknap Reservation, State of Montana, and unpaid on June 1, 1915, for property purchased under the provisions of the sections of the Indian appropriation acts approved April 30, 1908 (35 Stats. L., pp. 70–83), appropriating the sum of $25,000 for the purchase of implements and other equipment for said Indians, under such conditions as the Secretary of the Interior might prescribe for the repayment by the Indians to the United States of the sum so expended, and March 3, 1909 (35 Stats. L., pp. 781–795), authorizing the use of the repayments made by the Indians until June 1, 1915, shall be collected as soon thereafter as is practicable. That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to announce, at such time as in his opinion seems proper, the charge for construction of irrigation systems on the Blackfeet, Flathead, and Port Peck Indian Reservations in Montana, which shall be made against each acre of land irrigable by the systems on each of said reservations. Such charges shall be assessed against the land irrigable by the systems on each said reservation in the proportion of the total construction cost which each acre of such land bears to the whole area of irrigable land thereunder.

On the 1st day of December after the announcement by the Secretary of the Interior of the construction charge, the allottee, entryman, purchaser, or owner of such irrigable land which might have been furnished water for irrigation during the whole of the preceding irrigation season, from ditches actually constructed, shall pay to the superintendent of the reservation where the land is located, for deposit to the credit of the United States as a reimbursement of the appropriations made or to be made for construction of said irrigation systems, 5 per cent of the construction charge fixed for his land, as an initial installment, and shall pay the balance of the charge in 15 annual installments, the first 5 of which shall each be 5 per cent of the construction charge and the remainder shall each be 7 per cent of the construction charge. The first of the annual installments shall become due and payable on December 1 of the fifth calendar year after the initial installment: Provided, That any allottee, entryman, purchaser, or owner may, if he so elects, pay the whole or any part of the construction charges within any shorter period: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, grant such extension of the time for payments herein required from Indian allottees or their heirs as he may determine proper and necessary, so long as such land remains in Indian title.

That the tribal funds heretofore covered into the Treasury of the United States in partial reimbursement of appropriations made for constructing irrigation systems on said reservations shall be placed to the credit of the tribe and be available for such expenditure for the benefit of the tribe as may be made under existing law.

And there is hereby appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $525,187.93 for this purpose, $4,544.40 thereof to be credited to the Indians of the Blackfeet Reservation, $440,217.78 thereof to be credited to the Indians of the Flathead Reservation, and the balance, $80,425.75, to be credited to the Indians of the Fort Peck Reservation, the same being the amounts heretofore covered into the Treasury on this account. The cost of constructing irrigation systems to irrigate the allotted lands of the Indians on these reservations shall be reimbursed to the United States as hereinbefore provided, and no further reimbursements from the tribal funds shall be made on account of said irrigation works, except that all charges against Indian allottees or their heirs herein authorized, unless otherwise paid, may be paid from the individual shares in the tribal funds, when the same is available for distribution, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior.

That the sum of $50,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated out of any money not otherwise appropriated for continuing construction of the irrigation systems on the Blackfeet Indian Reservation in Montana, which shall be immediately available and remain available until expended: Provided, That the entryman upon the surplus unallotted lands to be irrigated by such systems shall, in addition to compliance with the homestead laws, before receiving patent for the lands covered by his entry, pay the charges apportioned against such tract as herein authorized, and a failure to make any two payments when due shall render the entry subject to cancellation, with the forfeiture to the United States of all rights acquired under the provisions of this act, as well as of any moneys paid on account thereof. The purchaser of any Indian allotment to be irrigated by such systems, purchased upon approval of the Secretary of the Interior, before the charges against said allotment herein authorized shall have been paid, shall pay all charges remaining unpaid at the time of such purchase, and in all patents or deeds for such purchased allotments, and also in all patents in fee to allottees or their heirs issued before payment of all such charges herein authorized to be made against their allotments, there shall be expressed that there is reserved upon the lands therein described a lien for such charges, and such lien may be enforced, or, upon payment of the delinquent charges, may be released by the Secretary of the Interior (acts Mar. 1, 1907, vol. 34, p. 1035; Apr. 4, 1910, vol. 36, p. 277; Mar. 3, 1911, vol. 36, p. 1066; Aug. 24, 1912, vol. 37, p. 526; June 30, 1913, vol. 38, p. 90; Aug. 1, 1914, vol. 38, p. 593).

That the sum of $686,996.81 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for continuing construction of the irrigation systems on the Flathead Indian Reservation in Montana, which shall be immediately available and remain available until expended: Provided, That the payments for the proportionate cost of the construction of said systems required of settlers on the surplus unallotted land by section 9, chapter 1495, Statutes of the United States of America, entitled "An act for the survey and allotment of lands now embraced within the limits of the Flathead Indian Reservation in the State of Montana, and the sale and disposal of all surplus lands after allotment," as amended by section 15 of the act of May 29, 1908 (35 Stat. L., p. 448), shall be made as herein provided: Provided further, That nothing contained in the act of May 29, 1908 (35 Stat. L., p. 444), shall be construed to exempt the purchaser of any Indian allotment purchased prior to the expiration of the trust period thereon from any charge for construction of the irrigation system incurred up to the time of such purchase, except such charges as shall have accrued and become due in accordance with the public notices herein provided for, or to relieve the owners of all land allotted to Indians in severalty from payment of the charges herein required to be made against said land on account of construction of the irrigation systems; and in carrying out the provisions of said section the exemption therein authorized from charges incurred against allotments purchased prior to the expiration of the trust period thereon shall be the amount of the charges or installments thereof due under public notice herein provided for up to the time of such purchase (acts Apr. 23, 1904, vol. 33, p. 305; Apr. 30, 1908, vol. 35, p. 83; May 29, 1908, vol. 35, p. 450; Mar. 3, 1909, vol. 35, p. 795; Apr. 4, 1910, vol. 36, p. 277; Mar. 3, 1911, vol. 36, p. 1066; Aug. 24, 1912, vol. 37, p. 526; June 30, 1913, vol. 38, p. 90; Aug. 1, 1914, vol. 38, p. 593).

That the sum of $100,000 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for continuing construction of the irrigation systems on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation in Montana, which shall be immediately available and remain available until expended: Provided, That the proportionate cost of the construction of said systems required of settlers and entrymen on the surplus unallotted irrigable land by section 2 of the act of May 30, 1908 (35 Stat. L., p. 558), shall be paid as herein provided: Provided further, That nothing contained in said act of May 30, 1908, shall be construed to exempt the purchaser of any Indian allotment purchased prior to the expiration of the trust period thereon from any charge for construction of the irrigation system incurred up to the time of such purchase, except such charges as shall have accrued and become due in accordance with the public notices herein provided for, and the purchaser of any Indian allotment to be irrigated by said systems purchased upon approval of the Secretary of the Interior before the charges against said allotment herein authorized shall have been paid shall pay all charges remaining unpaid at the time of such purchase, and in all patents or deeds for such purchased allotments, and also in all patents in fee to allottees or their heirs issued before payment shall have been made of all such charges herein authorized to be made against their allotments, there shall be expressed that there is reserved upon the lands therein described a lien for such charges, and such lien may be enforced, or upon payment of the delinquent charges may be released by the Secretary of the Interior (acts May 30, 1908, vol. 35, p. 558; Aug. 24, 1912, vol. 37, p. 526; June 30, 1913, vol. 38, p. 90; Aug. 1, 1914, vol. 38, p. 593).

That in addition to the construction charges every allottee, entryman, purchaser, or owner shall pay to the superintendent of the reservation a maintenance and operation charge based upon the total cost of maintenance and operation of the systems on the several reservations, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to fix such maintenance and operation charge upon such basis as shall be equitable to the owners of the irrigable land. Such charges when collected shall be available for expenditure in the maintenance and operation of the systems on the reservation where collected: Provided, That delivery of water to any tract of land may be refused on account of nonpayment of any charges herein authorized, and the same may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be collected by a suit for money owed: Provided further, That the rights of the United States, heretofore acquired, to water for Indian lands referred to in this amendment, namely, the Blackfeet, Fort Peck, and Flathead Reservation land, shall be continued in full force and effect until the Indian title to such land is extinguished.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations and issue such notices as may be necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this act, and he is hereby authorized and directed to determine the area of land on each reservation which may be irrigated from constructed ditches and to determine what allowance, if any, shall be made for ditches constructed by individuals for the diversion and distribution of a partial or total water supply for allotted or surplus unallotted land: Provided, That if water be available prior to the announcement of the charge herein authorized, the Secretary of the Interior may furnish water to land under the systems on the said reservations, making a reasonable charge therefor, and such charges when collected may be used for construction or maintenance of the systems through which such water shall have been furnished.

The work to be done with the amounts herein appropriated for the completion of these projects may be done by the Reclamation Service, on plans and estimates furnished by that service and approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

That lands on the Flathead Indian Reservation in Montana valuable for agricultural or horticultural purposes, heretofore classified as timberlands, may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be appraised and opened to homestead entry under regulations prescribed by him, upon condition that homestead entrymen shall at the time of making their original homestead entries pay the full value of the timber found on the land at the time that the appraisement of the land itself is made, except as hereinafter provided, such payment to be in addition to the appraised price of the lands apart from the timber, as herein authorized: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior may in his discretion accept payments in installments for said timber under such terms, conditions, rules, and regulations as he may prescribe.

That the legal road authorities charged with the duty of laying out and opening public roads and highways under the laws of the State of Montana having jurisdiction over any territory embraced within any Indian reservation in Montana, are hereby authorized and empowered to lay out and open public roads within any of the said Indian reservations in conformity to and in accordance with the laws of the State of Montana relating to the laying out and opening of public roads, and that any public road when so laid out and opened shall be deemed a legal road: Provided, That such road authorities shall, in addition to notifying the landowners as provided in the State laws, likewise serve notice upon the superintendent in charge of the restricted Indian lands upon which it is proposed to lay out a public road, and shall also furnish him with a map drawn on tracing linen showing the definite location and width of such proposed road, and no such road shall be laid out until after it has received the approval of such superintendent.

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to redeem a mortgage on the allotment selection of Starr McGillis, a Turtle Mountain Chippewa Indian, described as the northwest quarter of section 34, township 164 north, range 70 west of the fifth principal meridian, North Dakota, $1,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, the said sum to be reimbursed from the rentals of said allotment not to exceed 50 per cent of the amount of rentals received annually: Provided, That in the event a patent in fee shall be issued for this land before the United States shall be wholly reimbursed as herein provided, the amount remaining unpaid shall become a first lien on such allotment, and the fact of such lien shall be recited on the face of the patent in fee and the amount of the lien set forth thereon, and the receipt of the Secretary of the Interior, or of the officer, agent, or employee duly authorized by him for that purpose, for the payment of the amount of the mortgage, when duly recorded by the recorder of deeds in the county wherein the land is located, shall operate as a satisfaction of such lien.

For the erection of a headstone to mark the grave of Scarlet Crow, a Sioux Indian chief of the Wahpeton Tribe, who was buried March 13, 1867, in the Congressional Cemetery, Washington, D. C., in a grave marked "76–R. A. 22," $100.

That all claims of whatsoever nature which the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands of Sioux Indians may have or claim to have against the United States shall be submitted to the Court of Claims, with the right to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States by either party, for the amount due or claimed to be due said bands from the United States under any treaties or laws of Congress; and jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine all claims of said bands against the United States, and to enter judgment thereon. If any such question is submitted to said court it shall settle the rights, both legal and equitable, of said bands of Indians and the United States, notwithstanding lapse of time or statute of limitations. Such action in the Court of Claims shall be presented by a single petition, to be filed within one year after the passage of this act, making the United States a party defendant which shall set forth all the facts on which the said bands of Indians base their claims for recovery; and the said petition may be verified by the agent or authorized attorney or attorneys of said bands, to be selected by said bands and employed under contract approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with the provisions of existing law, upon information or belief as to the existence of such facts, and no other statements or verifications shall be necessary. Official letters, papers, reports, and public records, or certified copies thereof, and oral testimony, depositions, and sworn statements by members of said bands of Indians may be used as evidence. Whatever moneys may be found due the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands of Indians under the provisions of this act, less attorney's fees, shall be placed to their credit in the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That the compensation to be paid the attorney or attorneys for the claimant Indians shall be determined by the Secretary of the Interior, but in any event shall not be greater than the amount named in the approved contract: Provided further, That such compensation shall in no event exceed $15,000.

For maintenance of the sanatorium for the Choctaw and Chickasaw Indians, for incidental and all other expenses for its proper conduct and management, including pay of employees, repairs, improvements, and for necessary expense of transporting Indians suffering with tuberculosis and trachoma to and from said sanatorium, $20,000.

To enable the superintendent for the Five Civilized Tribes to enforce the prohibitory law within the jurisdiction of Union Agency, Okla., $5,000.

The act of Congress approved June 28, 1906 (34 Stat. L., 539), and the act of Congress approved April 18, 1912 (37 Stat. L., 88), authorizing expenditures from Osage tribal funds of not exceeding $50,000 for schools and $40,000 for agency and emergency purposes, or an aggregate of $90,000, is hereby amended to provide that not exceeding such aggregate amount may be used for such purposes when authorized by the Secretary of the Interior, in such manner as he deems for the best interests of the Osages, not exceeding, however, in the aggregate the amount so authorized.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to pay to the enrolled members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes of Indians of Oklahoma entitled under existing law to share in the funds of said tribes, or to their lawful heirs, out of any moneys belonging to said tribes in the United States Treasury or deposited in any bank or held by any official under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior, not to exceed $200 per capita in the case of the Choctaws and $100 per capita in the case of the Chickasaws, said payment to be made under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe: Provided, That in cases where such enrolled members, or their heirs, are Indians who by reason of their degree of Indian blood belong to the restricted class, the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, withhold such payments and use the same for the benefit of such restricted Indians: Provided further, That the money paid to the enrolled members as provided herein shall be exempt from any lieu for attorneys' fees or other debt contracted prior to the passage of this act, except where contracts have been heretofore approved by the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with existing law: And provided further, That such contract shall first be approved by the existing Department of the Interior: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to readjudicate those applications for enrollment upon the rolls of the Five Civilized Tribes which were pending unadjudicated in the department on December 1, 1906, and also those which came to said department between said date and the final closing of the rolls on March 4, 1907, and to add to the appropriate rolls the names of those persons shown to be equitably entitled to such enrollment: Provided, That such readjudication shall be made upon the record as it stood on March 4, 1907: And provided further, That upon such enrollment the said Secretary shall pay to each of said enrolled persons, in lieu of an allotment of land, the sum of money directed to be paid to each person enrolled, upon said rolls, by the act of August 1, 1914.

For salaries and expenses of six oil and gas inspectors, authorized in the Indian appropriation act approved August 1, 1914, to be under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, to supervise oil and gas mining operations on allotted lands leased by members of the Five Civilized Tribes from which restrictions have not been removed, and to conduct investigations with a view to the prevention of waste, $25,000.

No future allotment shall be made in the Creek Nation except as may be hereafter authorized by Congress.

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to acquire on behalf of the Choctaw Nation, Oklahoma, by purchase or otherwise, such lands or easements as shall be necessary for the purpose of a roadway leading from Wheelock Academy, Choctaw Nation, Oklahoma, to the public highway, and to expend therefor not to exceed $150 from Choctaw tribal funds.

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to pay, out of any money in the Treasury of the United States belonging to the Creek Nation, to M. L. Mott the sum of $472.22 for services rendered the Creek Nation from January 15 to February 18, 1914, inclusive, and $210.20 as reimbursement for actual expenses incurred in connection therewith.

That section 1 of an act approved March 3, 1909, entitled "An act for the removal of restrictions on alienation of lands of allottees of the Quapaw Agency, Okla., and the sale of all tribal lands, school, agency, or other lands on any of the reservations within the jurisdiction of such agency, and for other purposes," be amended to read as follows:

"That the Secretary of the Interior may, in his discretion, and he is hereby authorized to remove the restrictions as to sale, encumbrance, or taxation from all of the allotted lands of any adult allottee of any of the tribes of Indians, including the Modocs, belonging to the Quapaw Indian Agency, in the State of Oklahoma, whenever he shall be satisfied that any Indian allottee is competent to manage his or her affairs, but said lands from which the restrictions have been removed shall not be liable for the satisfaction of any debt contracted prior to the removal of said restrictions by the Secretary."

For subsistence and civilization of the Yankton Sioux, South Dakota, including pay of employees, $14,000.

That jurisdiction be, and hereby is, conferred upon the Court of Claims of the United States to hear, determine, and render final judgment for any balance found due the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Bands of Sioux Indians, otherwise known as Santee Sioux Indians, with right of appeal as in other cases, for any annuities which may be due to said bands of Indians under and by virtue of the treaties between said bands of Indians and the United States, dated September 29, 1837 (7 Stat. L., 538), and August 5, 1851 (10 Stat. L., 954), as if the act of forfeiture of the annuities of said bands, approved February 16, 1863, had not been passed; and said act of forfeiture and all subsequent acts and parts of acts and treaties inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed for the purposes hereof: Provided, That the court, in rendering judgment, shall ascertain and include therein the amount of accrued annuities under the treaty of September 29, 1837, up to the date of the passage of this act, and shall determine and include the present value of the same and the capital sum of said annuity, which shall be in lieu of said perpetual annuity granted in said treaty; and to ascertain and set off against such amount so found all payments or other provisions, of every name and nature, made to or for said bands by the United States, or to or for any members thereof under the authority of any act of Congress, excluding treaties, since said act of forfeiture was passed, which are properly chargeable against said unpaid annuities.

That upon the rendition of such judgment, and in conformity therewith, the Secretary of the Interior is hereby directed to determine which of said Indians now living took part in said outbreak, and to prepare a roll of the persons entitled to share in said judgment by placing on said roll the names of all living members of the said bands residing in the United States at the time of the passage of this act, excluding therefrom the names of those found to have participated in the outbreak; and he is directed to distribute the proceeds of such judgment, except as hereinafter provided, per capita, to the persons borne on the said roll.

That proceedings shall be commenced by petition, verified by the attorney or firm of attorneys so authorized by John Eastman, assignee of Charles A. Eastman or Charles Hill, the attorneys in fact employed by said Indians under a contract bearing date November 27, 1896, approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs June 29, 1897, and by the Secretary of the Interior July 1, 1897, and said suit shall be conducted by said attorneys or firm of attorneys as attorneys of record, together with other counsel appearing in the case; and the court shall find and award upon a quantum meruit not to exceed 10 per cent of the amount recovered to said attorneys and their associates the compensation which shall be paid to them for services rendered and to be rendered, and distribute the sum thus awarded to such attorneys and their associates as their respective interests may appear, under agreements among themselves, which may be filed with the court, and the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to pay the said sum of money to the said attorneys immediately upon rendition of final judgment, out of the proceeds of such judgment, if any, when an appropriation therefor shall be made by Congress.

That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized and directed to apply, out of any funds to the credit of said Indians, the sum of $2,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be expended under the direction of the attorneys of said Indians in said case in the taking of testimony therein and defraying the expenses of printing incidental thereto.

For the equipment and maintenance of the asylum for insane Indians at Canton, S. Dak., for incidental and all other expenses necessary for its proper conduct and management, including pay of employees, repairs, improvements, and for necessary expense of transporting insane Indians to and from said asylum, $45,000.

For a proportionate share of the amount required to construct a wagon road or highway through the Standing Rock Indian Reservation in Corson County, S. Dak. from a point on the Missouri River north of Pontis, S. Dak., thence in a northwesterly direction to the town of Tatanka, the sum of $5,000, in accordance with the report of the Secretary of the Interior of December 7, 1914, made in pursuance of the provisions of section 20 of the act entitled "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1915," approved August 1, 1914: Provided, That such sum shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in such manner and at such times as he may deem proper, in the employment of Indian labor for the construction of said road or highway, and that the same shall be reimbursable from the Standing Rock Reservation 3 per cent fund under the act of February 14, 1913 (37 Stats. L., p. 675).

UTAH.

SEC. 23. For support and civilization of Confederated Bands of Utes: For pay of two carpenters, two millers, two farmers, two blacksmiths (art. 15, treaty of Mar. 2, 1868), $6,720; for pay of two teachers (same article and treaty), $1,800; for purchase of iron and steel and the necessary tools for blacksmith shop (art. 9 same treaty), $220; for annual amount for the purchase of beef, mutton, wheat, flour, beans, and potatoes, or other necessary articles of food and clothing and farming equipment (art. 12, same treaty), $30,000; for pay of employees at the several Ute agencies, $15,000; in all, $53,740.

For the support and civilization of detached Indians in Utah, including pay of employees $10,000.

The Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to withdraw from the Treasury of the United States, within his discretion, the sum of $450,000 of the principal funds to the credit of the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians and to expend the sum of $150,000 of said amount for the benefit of the Navajo Springs Band of said Indians in Colorado, not to exceed $50,000 of which amount may be used in providing school and hospital facilities among said Indians, and the sum of $200,000 of said amount for the Uintah, White River, and Uncompahgre Bands of Ute Indians in Utah, and the sum of $100,000 of said amount for the Southern Ute Indians in Colorado, which sums shall be charged to said bands; and the Secretary of the Interior is also authorized to withdraw from the Treasury the accrued interest to and including June 30, 1915, on the funds of the said Confederated Bands of Ute Indians appropriated under the act of March 4, 1913 (37 Stats. L., p. 934), and to expend or distribute the same for the purpose of promoting civilization and self-support among the said Indians, under such regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe: Provided, That the said Secretary of the Interior shall report to Congress on the first Monday in December, 1916, a detailed statement as to all moneys as provided for herein.

To carry into effect the provision of article 9 of the treaty of March 2, 1868 (15 Stats. L., p. 619), with the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians, for furnishing seeds and agricultural implements, the sum of $10,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary.

For continuing the construction of lateral distributing systems to irrigate the allotted lands of the Uncompahgre, Uintah, and White River Utes, in Utah, and to maintain existing irrigation systems, authorized under the act of June 21, 1906, reimbursable as therein provided, $10,000, to remain available until expended.

That the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs be, and are hereby, authorized and directed to negotiate an agreement with the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians for a final settlement of all of the rights, claims, and demands of said Indians against the United States arising under the agreement between said Indians and the United States ratified by the act of June 15, 1880 (21 Stat., p. 199), with a view to relieving the unsold lands, the subject of said agreement, from all claims or demands of said Indians, and to make the proceeds of said lands now available as a trust fund for their present use to advance their civilization, and under any law or agreement with the United States, which have not heretofore been adjudicated; and the Secretary of the Interior and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs shall report the result of such negotiations to Congress at the earliest possible date; and there be and is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $5,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary for said purpose, to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior: Provided, That the Indians may be represented in the said negotiations by counsel selected by themselves, but no contract for compensation shall be valid until approved by the Secretary of the Interior, and said Secretary of the Interior shall approve the form of said contracts: Provided further, That if an agreement can not be entered into with said Confederated Bands of Ute Indians as hereinbefore provided, said Confederated Bands of Ute Indians may bring an action in the Court of Claims, which is given jurisdiction for the purpose, to hear and determine and render judgment with right of appeal, as in other cases, for the value of the lands undisposed of, which were ceded by said Indians to the United States in 1880, not to exceed the present value thereof under the public-land laws, as administered at the time of said session, and all claims and counter claims or set-off of either party, the petition to be verified by claimant's attorneys, now by them employed, and the Attorney General is hereby directed to appear for the United States.

For a proportionate share of the amount required to construct an interstate wagon road or highway, through the Kaibab Indian Reservation, Utah, the sum of $9,000: Provided, That such sum shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in such manner and at such times as he may deem proper in the employment of Indian labor for the construction of said road or highway.

For expenses incident to carrying out the provisions of law of the United States applicable to the Qui-nai-elts and Quil-leh-utes, including pay of employees necessary to such work, $1,000.

For support and civilization of Indians at Colville, Taholah, Puyallup, and Spokane Agencies, including pay of employees, and for purchase of agricultural implements, and support and civilization of Joseph's Band of Nez Perce Indians in Washington, $18,000.

For expenses incident to carrying out the provisions of the laws of the United States applicable to the Indians at Yakima Agency, including pay of employees necessary to such work, $3,000.

For support of Spokanes in Washington (art. 6 of agreement with said Indians, dated Mar. 18, 1887, ratified by act of July 13, 1892), $1,000.

For operation and maintenance of the irrigation system on lands allotted to Yakima Indians in Washington, $15,000, reimbursable in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 1, 1907: Provided, That money received under agreements for temporary water supply may be expended under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior for maintenance and improvement of the irrigation system on said lands.

For support and education of 350 Indian pupils at the Cushman Indian School, Tacoma, Wash., including repairs and improvements, and for pay of superintendent, $50,000, said appropriation being made to supplement the Puyallup school funds used for said school.

For the second installment of $635,000 to pay for water supply for irrigation of 40 acres of each Indian allotment on the Yakima Indian Reservation irrigation system, in the State of Washington, provided by the act of August 1, 1914 (Public, No. 160), $100,000, to be covered into the reclamation fund (act of Aug. 1, 1914, vol. 38, p. 605, sec. 1).

For construction of a dam across the Yakima River for the diversion and utilization of water provided for 40 acres of each Indian allotment on the Yakima Reservation, Wash., and such other water supply as may be available or acquired for the irrigation of a total of 120,000 acres of allotted Indian land on said reservation, and for beginning the enlargement and extension of the distribution and drainage system on said reservation, $100,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended: Provided, That the cost of the entire diversion works and distribution and drainage system shall be reimbursable by the owners of the lands irrigable thereunder in not to exceed 20 annual payments, and the Secretary of the Interior may fix operation and maintenance charges which shall be paid as he may direct.

In the apportionment of charges against Indians due allowance shall be made for such amounts as may have been repaid the United States on account of reimbursable appropriations heretofore made for this project, and for the construction of the irrigation system prior to the passage of the act of December 21, 1904 (33 Stat. L., 595), as therein provided. All charges against Indian allottees herein authorized, unless otherwise paid, may be paid from individual shares in the tribal funds when the same is available for distribution; and if any allottee shall receive patent in fee to his allotment before the amount so charged against him has been paid to the United States, then such amount remaining unpaid shall be and become a lien upon his allotment, and the fact of such lien shall be recited in such patent and may be enforced by the Secretary of the Interior by foreclosure as a mortgage, and should any Indian sell any part of his allotment with the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, the amount of any unpaid charges against the land sold shall be and become a first lien thereon and may be enforced by the Secretary of the Interior by foreclosure as a mortgage, and delivery of water to such land may be refused within the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior until any dues are paid: Provided further, That no right to water or to the use of any irrigation ditch or other structure on said reservation shall vest or be allowed until the owner of the land to be irrigated as herein provided shall comply with such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, and he is hereby authorized to prescribe such rules and regulations as he may determine proper for making effective the foregoing provisions, and to require of owners of lands in fee such security for the reimbursement herein required as he may determine necessary and to refuse delivery of water to any tract of land until the owners thereof shall have complied therewith.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to patent to the Washington State Historical Society, for memorial and park purposes, the following-described lands in the diminished Colville Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, to wit: A tract of land not exceeding 4 acres in area located in the northwest corner of lot 2 of section 17, the precise description of said tract to be determined by said Washington Historical Society and the Secretary of the Interior prior to the issuance of the patent therefor, and lot 7, containing 20.90 acres of section 21, all in township 30 north, range 25 east, of the Willamette meridian, in Washington: Provided, That the lands hereby granted shall be paid for by the said society at their appraised value, to be ascertained in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe, and the proceeds thereof placed in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Indians belonging on the reservation of which the lands herein described are a part, and thereafter paid to the said Indians or used for their benefit in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior may deem for their best interests: Provided further, That the lands hereby granted shall be subject for a period of 25 years to all the laws of the United States prohibiting the introduction of intoxicants into the Indian country.

That there be, and hereby is, granted to school district No. 56, Klickitat County, Wash., the northwest quarter of the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 11, township 6 north, range 14 east, of the Willamette meridian, containing 2½ acres, now used as a public-school site by said district, and being a part of the Yakima Indian Reservation; and the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to issue patent to said district for said lands, the same to be used for school purposes.

The Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to lease for mining purposes unallotted lands on the diminished Spokane and Colville Reservations, in the State of Washington, and the Muscalen and Apache Reservations, in New Mexico, for periods not exceeding 25 years, on such terms and conditions as he may determine, to citizens of the United States applying therefor: Provided, That no charge shall be made for prospecting, rentals shall be based on mining production, and proceeds of rentals shall be paid into the proper tribal funds.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized to make an allotment of not more than 8 acres of land within the diminished Colville Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, to Se-cum-ka-nullax in lieu of a portion of the Moses agreement allotment No. 36, embraced within the homestead entry of Charles M. Hickerson.

That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to accept the homestead proof submitted by Charles M. Hickerson for that part of his homestead embraced within allotment No. 36 to Se-cum-ka-nullax, of Chief Moses's band of Indians, if the same is shown to be in compliance with the homestead laws, and the title of said Indian to that part of said allotment embraced within said entry is hereby extinguished.

WISCONSIN.

SEC. 25. For the support and education of 210 Indian pupils at the Indian school at Hayward, Wis., including pay of superintendent, $36,670; for general repairs and improvements, $5,000; in all, $41,670.

For support and education of 275 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Tomah, Wis., including pay of superintendent, $57,925, of which sum not exceeding $10,000 may be used for general repairs and improvements to buildings.

For support and civilization of the Chippewas of Lake Superior, Wis., including pay of employees, $7,000.

For expenses incident to carrying out provisions of laws of the United States applicable to the Pottawatomie Indians who reside in the State of Wisconsin, including pay of employees, $7,000.

For the support and civilization of that portion of the Wisconsin Band of Pottawatomie Indians residing in the States of Wisconsin and Michigan, and to aid said Indians in establishing homes on the lands purchased for them under the provisions of the act of Congress approved June 30, 1913, $100,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended, said sum to be reimbursed to the United States out of the appropriation when made of the principal due as the proportionate share of said Indians in annuities and moneys of the Pottawatomie Tribe in which they have not shared, as set forth in House Document No. 830, Sixtieth Congress, first session, and the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to expend the said sum of $100,000 in the purchase of houses, building material, seed, animals, machinery, tools, implements, and other equipment necessary to enable said Indians to become self-supporting.

Section 3 of the act of March 28, 1908 (35th Stats. L., p. 51), is hereby amended to read:

"That the lumber, lath, shingles, crating, ties, piles, poles, posts, bolts, logs, bark, pulp wood, and other marketable materials obtained from the forests on the Menominee Reservation shall be sold under such rules and regulations as the Secretary of the Interior may prescribe. The net proceeds of the sale of all forest products shall be deposited in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Menominee Tribe of Indians. Such proceeds shall bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent per annum, and the interest shall be used for the benefit of such Indians in such manner as the Secretary of the Interior shall prescribe."

For the repair and construction of sidewalks in the village of Odanah within the Bad River Reservation, $1,000, said sum to be reimbursed to the United States from any moneys which are now or which may hereafter be placed to the credit of the Bad River Band of Wisconsin Chippewa Indians.

That there is hereby appropriated the sum of $90,000 for the payment of the members of the Stockbridge and Munsee Tribes of Indians who were enrolled under the act of Congress of March 3, 1893, equal amounts to the amounts paid to the other members of said tribe prior to the enrollment under said act, and such payments be made upon the certificate and order of the Commissioner of Indian Affairs upon claims being filed with him, showing to his satisfaction that such claimants, or the ancestors of such claimants, were enrolled under the act of March 3, 1893, entitled "An act for the relief of the Stockbridge and Munsee Tribes of Indians of the State of Wisconsin."

That without bias or prejudice to the rights or interest of any party to the litigation hereinafter mentioned, the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized to sell the timber on the so-called "school lands" and "swamp lands," within the boundaries of the Bad River and Lac du Flambeau Indian Reservations in Wisconsin, and to which the State of Wisconsin has asserted a claim; to keep a separate account of the proceeds of such sale with each legal subdivision of such land, and to deposit the said proceeds at interest in a national bank, bonded for the safe-keeping of individual Indian moneys, to be paid over together with the interest thereon to the party who shall finally be adjudged to be the owner of such land: Provided, That the consent of the State or parties claiming title therefrom be obtained before any such sale shall be made.

WYOMING.

SEC. 26. For support and civilization of Shoshone Indians in Wyoming, including pay of employees, $15,000.

For support and education of 175 Indian pupils at the Indian school, Shoshone Reservation, Wyo., including pay of superintendent, $31,025; for general repairs and improvements, $5,000; in all, $36,025.

For support of Shoshones in Wyoming: For pay of physician, teacher, carpenter, miller, engineer, farmer, and blacksmith (art. 10, treaty of July 3, 1868), $5,000; for pay of second blacksmith, and such iron and steel and other materials as may be required, as per article 8, same treaty, $1,000; in all, $6,000.

For continuing the work of constructing an irrigation system within the diminished Shoshone or Wind River Reservation, in Wyoming, including the maintenance and operation of completed canals, $25,000, reimbursable in accordance with the provisions of the act of March 3, 1905, and to remain available until expended.

For continuing the work of constructing roads and bridges within the diminished Shoshone or Wind River Reservation, in Wyoming, $15,000, said sum to be reimbursed from any funds which are now or may hereafter be placed in the Treasury to the credit of said Indians.

For repairs at the old abandoned military post of Fort Washakie, on the Wind River Reservation, Wyo., $881.66 from the amount heretofore collected as rentals of buildings at said post.

For extension, enlargement, and construction of the Le Clair and Riverton ditches for the irrigation of Indian allotments and land in private ownership on the north side of the Big Wind River, Wind River Reservation, Wyo., reimbursable as provided by section 1 of the act of August 1, 1914, $45,000, to be immediately available and to remain available until expended.

SEC. 27. Section 26 of the Indian appropriation act approved June 30, 1913 (38 Stat. L., p. 103), is hereby amended so as to read as follows:

On or before the 1st day of July, 1916, the Secretary of the Interior shall cause a system of bookkeeping to be installed in the Bureau of Indian Affairs, which will afford a ready analysis of expenditures by appropriations and by units of the service, showing for each activity or class of work the expenditures for salaries and wages of employees, buildings, and other permanent improvements, administration, equipment, maintenance, operation, and other purposes. Such additional changes and improvements in the system of bookkeeping shall be made as may be advisable in the judgment of the said Secretary.

On the first Monday in December, 1917, and annually thereafter, a detailed statement of expenditures as heretofore described, for the preceding fiscal year, shall be transmitted to Congress by the Secretary of the Interior.

The sum of $12,000 is hereby appropriated for expenses of installing the new system of bookkeeping required by this section, including the pay of expert accountants at a rate of not exceeding $15 per day, and their assistants, to be employed by the Secretary of the Interior, and the purchase of such books, stationery, and other supplies as may be necessary.

REPORT ON INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Committee on Indian Affairs, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 20150) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, respectfully reports the same back with sundry amendments and as so amended recommends its passage.

In addition to the amounts appropriated, gratuity and reimbursable, the following amounts have been authorized to be withdrawn from tribal funds:

Minnesota Chippewas	$215,000
Montana, Blackfeet	150,000
Oklahoma Indians	315,150
Utah, Utes	450,000
Total withdrawal of tribal funds	1,130,150

In addition thereto is the per capita payment to the Choctaws and Chickasaws.

SURVEYING AND ALLOTTING INDIAN RESERVATIONS (REIMBURSABLE).

Amount appropriated, $125,000.

This appropriation is the same as allowed by the House and as estimated by the department. It is $25,000 less than the sum provided for the year 1915 by Congress, and in view of the fact that the department has on hand a small unexpended balance and believes that the appropriation may be safely set at $125,000, this sum is recommended by the committee.

IRRIGATION, INDIAN RESERVATIONS (REIMBURSABLE).

Amount appropriated, $250,000.

There was appropriated last year by Congress $345,700; the department estimate for the current year is $295,700, or $50,000 less, and it appearing that the department has been able through economy and care to conduct the irrigation work in more than 30 reservations, as shown on pages 11 to 27 of the House hearings, the sum of $250,000 is not deemed too large by the committee, and its appropriation is recommended.

The provisions added by your committee to the language of the House bill are all included in the department's estimates. A full discussion of this item by your committee is found on page 260 of the Senate committee hearings, and the rights of the United States to water for use on Indian reservations are confirmed for use on land allotted to Indians in severalty.

SUPPRESSING LIQUOR TRAFFIC AMONG INDIANS (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 4, line 17.)

House hearings, page 27. Discussed in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, pages 922–927.

Amount appropriated, $125,000.

The amount appropriated last year was $100,000, and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs has urged the increase to the sum adopted by the committee and as appropriated by the House. The legislation is necessary and is recommended. This is a gratuity appropriation.

RELIEF OF DISTRESS AND PREVENTION OF DISEASE AMONG INDIANS (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 4, line 23.)

House hearings, page 29. Discussed in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 927.

Amount appropriated, $300,000; estimate of department, $300,000; House bill allowed $350,000.

This provision reduces the amount allowed in the House by $50,000. Attention is called to the appropriation of $100,000 appearing in the Senate bill at page 13, line 6, where an item of $100,000 is inserted in lieu of the provision which was added by the House and stricken out by the Senate committee. A detailed report has been submitted by the Interior Department covering all of the transactions under the previous appropriation for 1915, House hearings, pages 29–33.

This is a gratuity appropriation, and the marked success attaching to the efforts of the department during the past year warrants the committee in continuing the allowance at the figure given in the present bill.

SUPPORT OF INDIAN DAY AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOLS (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 5, line 13.)

House hearings, pages 40–48. Discussed in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 932.

Amount appropriated, $1,550,000; estimate of department, $1,550,000; allowed by House, $1,440,000.

The amount recommended by your committee was asked for by the department in its estimates, and the increase of $110,000 over the sum appropriated by the House is justified by the commissioners in the hearings before this committee and the House. The amount reported by your committee is recommended.

INDIAN SCHOOL AND AGENCY BUILDINGS (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 6, line 7.)

House hearings, page 48. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, pages 933–934.

Amount appropriated, $440,000; estimate of department, $440,000; appropriated by House, $400,000.

This increase is fully justified on page 49 of the House hearings, showing a complete analysis of the appropriation which was made for the year 1915. The estimate of the department is based upon the expenditure for the particular purpose for which this sum is now asked, and your committee recommends the adoption by the Senate of the sum included in the bill.

TRANSPORTATION OF INDIAN PUPILS (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 6, line 20.)

House hearings, page 50. Discussion in House on pages 934–935 of volume 52 of CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Amount appropriated, $72,000; estimate of department, $75,000; allowed by House, $72,000.

The sum estimated is $3,000 greater than is allowed by the House and Senate. A full and complete justification for the amount appropriated was given by the department and the sum allowed is recommended by your committee.

INDUSTRIAL WORK AND CARE OF TIMBER (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 7, line 10.)

House hearings, page 52. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, pages 935–936.

Amount appropriated, $450,000; estimate of department, $450,000; House allowed $400,000.

This item is fully discussed in the House hearings, from page 52 to 63, and covers the Forestry Service, experimental work, and other important items coming under this head. This appropriation is the same as that allowed last year, and we heartily recommend the sum here appropriated, as this work is of far-reaching and urgent importance to the department.

PURCHASE AND TRANSPORTATION OF INDIAN SUPPLIES—INDIAN WAREHOUSES (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 8, line 13.)

House hearings, page 64; Senate hearings, pages 263, 310. Discussion in House on page 937 of CONGRESSIOAN RECORD, volume 52.

Amount appropriated, $300,000; estimate of department, $350,000; allowed by House, $300,000.

This paragraph refers to what are known as Indian warehouses, and the committee has suggested that the word "permanent" be inserted before the word "warehouses" and that a proviso be adopted which shall require that all purchases for less than $50 may not be purchased by competitive bidding. The department has established warehouses which are to be conducted at certain specified places in localities most convenient for distribution, and the committee heartily recommend the appropriation, which is $50,000 less than the estimates.

BOARD OF INDIAN COMMISSIONERS (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 9, line 15.)

House hearings, page 71; Senate hearings, pages 269, 566–594. Discussion in House on page 937 of CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52.

Amount appropriated, $10,000; estimate of department, $4,000; allowed by House, $4,000.

The sum appropriated by the committee is in line with the amount appropriated last year. A full and complete statement of the activities of the Board of Indian Commissioners is shown on page 269 of the hearings, and a general review of its work is given in a report before this committee by Mr. George Vaux, Warren K. Moorehead, Daniel Smiley, Edward E. Ayer, Frank Knox, and Bishop William D. Walker, on pages 566–594 of the hearings. The committee is of the opinion that the sum appropriated, $10,000, is needed for the use of the Board of Indian Commissioners, and recommends the appropriation.

PAY OF INDIAN POLICE (GRATUITY).

Amount appropriated, $200,000; estimate of department, $200,000; allowed by House, $100,000.

The increase of $100,000 over the House appropriation is in accordance with the estimate of the department and is the same as was allowed for the previous year. It appears essential that the sum allowed by your committee should be placed at the disposal of the department for this particular work, and the appropriation is recommended. About 646 Indian police are employed by the bureau.

GENERAL EXPENSES, INDIAN SERVICE, TRANSPORTATION AND INCIDENTAL EXPENSES (GRATUITY).

Amount appropriated, $125,000; estimate of department, $135,000; appropriated by House, $100,000.

A justification for this item is found on pages 74–75 of the hearings before the House committee. About $60,000 is expended for salaries and traveling expenses, and the distribution of the expenditure appears in detail in the hearings. The item is recommended by your committee.

INDIAN SERVICE INSPECTORS (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 10, line 10.)

Amount apropriated, $30,000; estimate of department, $30,000; appropriated by House, $30,000.

House hearings, page 75. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 939.

The amendment added by your committee provides "exclusive of 1 chief inspector," and the sum appropriated is in accord with the estimates and is the same as was appropriated by the House.

DETERMINATION OF INDIAN HEIRS, ALLOTTEES (REIMBURSABLE).

(Bill, p. 10, line 14.)

House hearings, page 76. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 939.

Amount appropriated, $100,000. This is in accordance with the appropriation by the House and as estimated by the department. A full discussion and justification for this appropriation is found on pages 78–83 of the hearings before the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House.

ENCOURAGEMENT OF INDUSTRY AND SELF-SUPPORT AMONGST THE INDIANS (REIMBURSABLE).

(Bill, p. 11, line 20.)

House hearings, page 83. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, pages 941, 1283.

Amount appropriated, $600,000; allowed by House, $200,000; estimate of department, $600,000.

A full justification for this appropriation is found on page 83 of the House hearings. The commissioner says that about 200,000 Indians have received allotments and a large part of them are without funds to begin farming operations and the appropriation is very beneficial in helping them to get started on their allotments. The entire amount appears to have been apportioned, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, among the various reservations, not exceeding $75,000 to any one reservation. This year, however, $100,000 is allowed as the limit to which each reservation is entitled, and the appropriation is recommended by your committee.

CONTINUING THE WORK OF THE JOINT COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE INDIAN AFFAIRS (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, pages 175, 714, 727.

This commission consists of Senators ROBINSON (chairman), LANE, and TOWNSEND, of the Senate, and Representatives STEPHENS (chairman), BURKE, and CARTER, of the House. No appropriation has been asked by this committee amendment. The Indian appropriation act, under which the commission was created, required report to be submitted prior to March 4, 1915. At the same time that this commission was created another was created composed in part of the same members, charged with the responsibility of investigating two particular and very large matters. Congress has been in session practically all the time since the creation of this commission. Its meetings have been held largely at night and it has worked under many obstacles. The amendment provides that the commission shall make findings, conclusions, and recommendations to the Sixty-fourth Congress. The adoption of this amendment is strongly recommended.

This provision has been the subject of an act (S. 7652) reported favorably by this committee on February 15, 1915, by Senate Report No. 983. The extract from the report referred to is appended. The change suggested in the report has been added to this provision:

"The Committee on Indian Affairs reports S. 7652 favorably and recommends that the same do pass without amendment.

"The Indian appropriation act of June 30, 1913, created a joint commission of Congress, composed of three Members of each branch, to investigate Indian affairs. That act carried an appropriation of $25,000 for the use of the joint commission. The commission was promptly organized and has made extensive investigations as to the methods of accounting in the Indian Bureau and as to conditions existing on many of the reservations. Under existing law the commission is required to make its final report on or before March 4, 1915. Congress has been practically in continuous session since the creation of the joint commission, and this has hampered that body in the performance of its duty. The task is enormous, and the joint commission has held many night sessions in order that its members might also be able to attend the sessions of Congress. About one-half of the $25,000 appropriated for the use of the commission remains unexpended. This bill extends the authority of the commission so that its activities may be continued during the Sixty-fourth Congress and reappropriates the balance of the unexpended fund.

"The committee recommends that the following amendment be made in said bill: After the word 'Congress,' in line 13 of said bill, strike out the period and insert a colon and the following:

"'Provided, That when any vacancy shall occur upon said joint commission by reason of the expiration of the term of office of any Member of the House of Representatives upon said joint commission or of any Senator upon said joint commission, or from any other cause, the Speaker of the House, if the vacancy occurs with reference to a Member of the House of Representatives, or the President of the Senate, with reference to a Senator, shall fill such vacancy by appointment.'"

PURCHASE OF VEHICLES FOR INDIAN SERVICE (NO APPROPRIATION).

House hearings, page 88. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1059.

This provision carries no appropriation and the legislation is made necessary because section 5 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act of the current year, which prohibited the departments and bureaus of the Government from purchasing passenger-carrying vehicles and motor-propelled vehicles without first obtaining permission and authority of Congress, applies to the Indian appropriation bill. From the statement of Mr. Meritt, on page 89 of the House hearings, a full explanation of the necessity for this enactment is provided, and the committee recommends the item.

SANITARY CONDITIONS AMONG INDIANS (REIMBURSABLE).

(Bill, p. 13, line 14.)

Appropriation, $100,000; estimate of department, $100,000; allowed by House, nothing.

The object of the expenditure, as submitted by the department, is for digging and sinking wells, constructing wooden floors, and placing additional windows, etc., in Indian homes; building fly-proof privies and other construction to improve sanitary conditions on Indian reservations. It appears from the statement of Mr. Meritt, on page 36 of the House hearings, that there are 8,000 Indian families throughout the United States living in insanitary conditions and dirt floors and largely in wickiups and one-room cabins without any ventilation whatever. The appropriation is recommended by the committee.

REPEAL OF SECTION 4 OF THE ACT OF MAY 11, 1880 (NO APPROPRIATION).

House hearings, page 95. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1071.

It is obvious from a perusal of this amendment that the section referred to should be repealed. This is recommended by the Secretary of the Interior and is favored by the committee.

FUNDS OF INCOMPETENT INDIANS.

House hearings, page 96; Senate hearings, page 767.

The statement of Mr. Meritt on page 767 of this committee's hearings shows that the purpose of the proposed legislation is to enable the department to pay incompetent but able-bodied Indians their pro rata share of the funds now in the Treasury to their credit and to use the funds for their benefit.

AMENDING ACT APPROVED JUNE 25, 1913—EXECUTION OF DEEDS, LEASES, OR AGREEMENTS WITH INDIAN TRIBES (NO APPROPRIATION).

House hearings, page 97; Senate hearings, pages 486, 733.

The commissioner states that if the legislation proposed is enacted it will broaden the statute so as to include personal property of the Indians, and it will also prohibit one Indian from trading on the property of other Indians. There are a number of mixed-blood Indians who are shrewd enough in trading around among the full bloods to acquire their property, and it is for the purpose of protecting the full bloods against the mixed bloods that this legislation is necessary. This is especially necessary, as the department is now buying cattle for the Indians and trying to get them started industrially on their allotments.

It is essential that the provision appearing on line 6, page 16, should be enacted also, for it includes a penalty for violation of this provision by any superintendent, agent, or employee of the Government.

AMENDING ACT OF JUNE 21, 1906, AUTHORIZING THE PRESIDENT TO CONTINUE TRUST PERIOD ON RESTRICTED INDIAN LAND (NO APPROPRIATION).

House hearings, page 244; Senate hearings, page 304.

This provision gives to the President the right to continue a trust or other restriction against alienation for such a period as he may deem best, but does not apply to the lands of the Osage Tribe or the Five Civilized Tribes. A statement on page 305 of the Senate committee hearings gives full information upon the provision.

NEGOTIATING AGREEMENTS WITH INDIAN TRIBES (GRATUITY).

Appropriation, $10,000.

This item was estimated for by the department, and interesting and valuable comment upon it appears on pages 296–297 of the Senate committee hearings. The appropriation would in many ways save the Indians money and enable them to obtain certain rights without the employment of attorneys.

REIMBURSEMENT OF A. G. POLLOCK (GRATUITY).

House hearings, page 92. Discussion in House, page 1071, volume 52, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Amount appropriated, $49.25; estimated by the department and allowed by House.

INDIAN LAWS AND TREATIES, VOLUME 3.

Senate hearings, pages 176–306.

Amount appropriated, $2,000.

By resolution of the Senate adopted March 3, 1911, the Committee on Indian Affairs was authorized to have prepared a compilation of Indian laws and treaties, Executive orders, etc., subsequent to July 1, 1902, the period prior to that date having been covered by two volumes published in 1902. On August 14, 1912, the Senate ordered the printing of the document as Senate Document No. 719, Sixty-second Congress, second session.

A complete and carefully annotated document of 800 pages conforming in size to the first two volumes, embracing all Indian laws, treaties, Executive orders, proclamations, etc., from July 1, 1902, to December 1, 1913, was prepared and printed. This document contains marginal annotations and footnotes covering as to each statute every case in which these laws are cited or construed by the Supreme Court of the United States, the Federal courts, the Court of Claims, the Opinions of the Attorney General, the Secretary of the Interior, and important decisions of State courts. Marginal references are made to acts and treaties embraced in the first two volumes. It also contains various old treaties and agreements which are not otherwise available in printed form and which could not be obtained at the time of the preparation of the former compilation. Also permission was obtained from "Cyc" to print in the appendix its subject on Indians and laws applicable to Indians, which is very valuable from a reference standpoint. A full and complete index accompanies the volume.

The work of preparing this third volume was commenced in 1911 and has been performed in a very careful manner, necessitated by the fact that this volume and the two preceding volumes, which embrace all laws and treaties relating to the Indians to date, are used by the Congress, the departments, and the courts throughout the country in matters pertaining to the Indians.

The item making appropriation for the first two volumes of the compilation is contained in the Indian appropriation act of March 3, 1903:

"To pay the persons who compiled and indexed the two volumes of the Treaties, Laws, Executive Orders, etc., relating to Indian affairs, under Senate resolution of May 20, 1902, $5,000, of which said sum so much as may be necessary may be expended as additional compensation to any officer or employee of the United States, to be immediately available, and to be paid only upon vouchers signed by the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate." (32 Stat., 1000.)

ARIZONA AND NEW MEXICO—SUPPORT AND CIVILIZATION (GRATUITY).

House hearings, page 109. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1071.

Amount appropriated, $330,000, as estimated by the department and allowed by the House. This appropriation is the same as allowed for many years and is recommended by the committee.

INDIAN SCHOOL, PHOENIX, ARIZ. (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 18, line 21.)

House hearings, page 112. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1073.

Appropriation, $129,500; allowed by House, $117,900; estimate of department, $156,500.

The increase by the committee of $11,600 is due to the necessity for increase in the items of repairs and general improvements. The sum allowed is $27,000 less than the department's estimates, and the appropriation is recommended.

REPEAL OF SECTION 2, ACT OF JUNE 30, 1913 (NO APPROPRIATION).

House hearings, page 117; estimate of department, page 417.

The item refers to an appropriation in the Indian appropriation act approved June 30, 1913, which made the cost of a bridge across the San Carlos River in Arizona reimbursable from the funds of the San Carlos Indians. The reimbursable feature was added on the floor of the House and was enacted into law. It appears from Mr. Meritt's statement, on page 117 of the hearings before the House committee, that while the Indians derive benefit from the bridges the white people benefit more largely than they. The reimbursable feature of the former appropriation should be stricken out in so far as the tribal funds of the San Carlos Indians are involved.

MAINTENANCE OF IRRIGATION, PIMA INDIAN LANDS, ARIZONA (REIMBURSABLE).

Appropriated $20,000, as estimated by the department and allowed by the House.

The irrigation system, which was provided by the Reclamation Service, covers about 8,000 acres of land. A distributing system has been commenced and the continuation of this work necessitates $10,000 which, with a like amount required to maintain the pumping plants and canal systems, makes the sum carried by the item $20,000. It is considered essential that the work of promoting irrigation on this reservation be continued.

WATER SUPPLY FOR PAPAGO INDIAN VILLAGES, ARIZONA (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 20, line 17.)

House hearings, page 121; Senate hearings, pages 275, 764.

Estimate of department, $20,000; appropriated by House, $10,000; by committee, $15,000.

The department received by the last year's appropriation $20,000, and this has been expended in the development of a water supply for the Indians. The appropriation is recommended by the committee as essential.

IRRIGATION, PAPAGO INDIAN LANDS, ARIZONA (REIMBURSABLE).

Estimate of department, $20,000; omitted by House; allowed by committee, $20,000.

A full discussion of this appropriation and its necessity is to be found on pages 276–279 of the Senate committee's hearings. The lands embraced within the area of these eight villages and subject to irrigation are 3,000 acres. There is no better land in Arizona than that on this reservation, and these Indians could become entirely self-supporting if means were provided whereby the lands could be irrigated. The committee recommends the adoption of the amendment. A letter from the commissioner justifying the adoption of this amendment is given:

WASHINGTON, D. C., February 16, 1915.

MY DEAR SENATOR ASHURST: Referring to the item of $20,000 in the estimates for the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1916, for beginning construction of the works to protect the irrigable allotments of the Papago Indians from damage by floods and to irrigate the same, I have the honor to advise you that this is a most meritorious project and one that may be considered in a manner urgent.

The work comes under two heads, protection of the irrigable lands from damage by floods and an irrigation system for the irrigation of the land.

For a great many years the Indians farmed an extensive area on the Papago Reservation, which lies south of Tucson, and doubtless they would still be irrigating except for the great difficulty of maintaining the headings of their ditches in the barrancas, which are liable to destructive erosion by the action of flood water.

In the report of the engineers of the Indian Service, Senate Document No. 973, Sixty-second Congress, the urgent necessity of protecting these lands from further encroachment of the barrancas was fully discussed. To leave these lands unprotected for a few years longer will doubtless result in such a condition that the Indians will be damaged both in the loss of their lands and in the absence of facilities for using water for irrigation upon those allotments not destroyed by floods.

The question of a water supply is discussed in detail in the report mentioned, and there is no doubt of the existence of a supply which may be developed for use on the lands of this reservation without infringing in any degree upon the supply requisite for the city of Tucson. While accurate information is not available as to the acreage formerly cultivated by these Indians, it is believed that they cultivated an area considerably in excess of that contemplated by the project for which the appropriation was requested. Therefore the water which will probably be required for the project under discussion will not exceed the amount which might be decreed to these Indians upon an adjudication if due consideration were given their activity in the former use of water for irrigation. It is therefore recommended that the item receive favorable consideration by Congress.

Very truly, yours, CATO SELLS, Commissioner.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs.

COLORADO RIVER RESERVATION—EXAMINATION AND SURVEY OF DAM SITE (REIMBURSABLE.)

(Bill, p. 21, line 9.)

House hearings, page 124.

It is estimated that there are 150,000 acres of land which can be irrigated in this reservation, and it is for the purpose of acquiring definite information regarding the construction of this proposed new irrigation project that this appropriation is asked by the department. There are about 500 Indians residing on the reservation near the agency and 600 to 700 Mojaves at Fort Mojave and other Indians living along the Colorado River. The appropriation is recommended by the committee.

WATER SUPPLY, NAVAJO INDIAN RESERVATION (REIMBURSABLE).

(Bill, p. 21, line 9.)

Estimate of department, $25,000; allowed by House, $10,000; allowed by committee, $25,000.

Hearings, House committee, page 125.

The amount allowed by the House has been increased $15,000 and the money made immediately available. The department's superintendent of irrigation gives a detail of the need for the money on page 126 of the House committee hearings. This is the same amount as was appropriated last year and a summary of the manner in which the money is to be disbursed will be found on page 421 of the Estimates of Appropriations for 1916. The department needs the money for use amongst the largest tribe of unallotted Indians in the United States and the committee recommends the appropriation.

PURCHASE OF LANDS, NAVAJO RESERVATION (REIMBURSABLE).

Estimate of department, $1,000; not allowed by House; committee allowed $1,000.

House hearings, page 129, show a complete justification for the item proposed. It is desired to purchase, if possible, certain lands belonging to the Santa Fe Railroad, approximately 330,000 acres, which lie within the reservation, having been granted to the railroad prior to the designation of the reservation, in 1866. The proprietary interest of the road in alternate sections has in a measure tended to depreciate the value of adjacent Indian lands, and it is for the purpose of instituting preliminary steps to the survey and ascertainment of values, etc., that the $1,000 appropriation is asked. It is recommended by the committee.

CONSTRUCTION OF DAM ON GILA RIVER INDIAN RESERVATION (REIMBURSABLE).

Estimate of department, $50,000; not allowed by House; committee allowed $50,000.

Senate hearings, page 278, show a justification for this item. The limit of expenditure is $160,000, and is in line with previous expenditure of $50,000 authorized by the Indian appropriation bill of 1915, and limiting the total expense to the total amount as given, $160,000. The commissioner has shown, on page 279 of the Senate committee's hearings, the necessity for the expenditure, and attention is called to the statements of Mr. Meritt and Mr. Reed shown on the page of hearings cited. The committee recommends the appropriation.

BEGINNING THE CONSTRUCTION OF DAM ON THE GILA RIVER AT FLORENCE, ARIZ. (REIMBURSABLE).

No estimate; not allowed by House; allowed by committee, $75,000.

Senate hearings, pages 498–506. The statements of Hon. CARL HAYDEN, Member of Congress for Arizona, showing the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, relate the fact that late in January of this year the Gila River experienced the most disastrous flood in its history, and all of the headings of the various canals above Florence have been washed away. The water rights owned by the Indians it is necessary for the Government to protect, and as white farmers may find means to restore the devastated headgates and canals, it may become necessary for the Government to oppose such a step in order to protect the Indians. The construction of the dam at this point has strategic value in protecting the rights of the Indians. On page 500 of the Senate committee's hearings will be found Mr. HAYDEN'S statement justifying the appropriation. The committee recommends the appropriation.

PURCHASE OF LANDS FOR HOMELESS CALIFORNIA INDIANS (GRATUITY).

House hearings, page 143; Senate hearings, pages 6, 521.

Estimate of department, $10,000; not allowed by House; committee allowed $30,000.

The committee has increased the estimate of the department to the sum of $30,000. The statements of Hon. JOHN RAKER, a Representative in Congress from California; Dr. E. L. Eliot, of the Board of Indian Commissioners, and of others, found on pages 521 to 531, evidence the necessity for the increase, which has been favored by Mr. Meritt. It appears from their statements that 1,686 Indians are without lands and that purchases can be made of reasonably small tracts upon which the Indians may be located and induced to remain. The committee, after hearing the recommendations of the commissioner and of other persons, increased the appropriation to $30,000.

IRRIGATING ALLOTMENTS, YUMA RESERVATION, CAL. (REIMBURSABLE).

Estimate of department, $40,000; allowed by House, $40,000; committee allowed $40,000.

House hearings, page 148; Senate hearings, page 7. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1073.

On page 7 of the committee hearings will be found the statement of Mr. Meritt calling attention to the fact that the omission of the appropriation in the House print of the bill was due to the proviso as submitted in the department's estimate being stricken out on point of order, and through a misprint of the bill the entire item was omitted. The item as it now appears has the approval of the House and of this committee and should be adopted.

SUPPORT AND CIVILIZATION OF SEMINOLES IN FLORIDA (GRATUITY).

Estimate of department, $10,000; not allowed by House; committee appropriated $10,000.

House hearings, page 153; Senate hearings, page 7. Discussion in House, Congressional Record, volume 52, page 1074.

The department made an estimate for this appropriation and it was recommended by the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House, but objection was made. Following is a letter from L. A. Spencer, special commissioner to the Florida Seminoles, and one from Hon. Duncan U. Fletcher, recommending the appropriation:

UNITED STATES SENATE, COMMITTEE ON PRINTING,
January, 22, 1915.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
Chairman Indian Affairs Committee, United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Herewith I inclose to you letter just at hand from the special commissioner to the Florida Seminoles.

This has a bearing on the amendment you recently introduced, at my suggestion, to the Indian bill. I am sending it to you as a matter of information for the committee, should it be necessary to have further information on the matter.

Yours, very sincerely, DUNCAN U. FLETCHER.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
UNITED STATES INDIAN SERVICE,
Miami, Fla., January 18, 1915.

Hon. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR FLETCHER: Your letter of the 15th was received this afternoon, and it is certainly a relief. The actual conditions are as follows:

I took the work with a view to helping the Indian and not myself. It is a very hard and discouraging work and the available funds were so fixed that they could not be used for many of the needed expenditures. Therefore I have used all of my salary, except that actually needed for the support of my family, to make needed purchases. This I have done gladly, but the work is now getting beyond my resources.

The objection to the present "item" seems to be the clause providing for land purchase. This clause was introduced because we can not use any of the present funds for that purpose, and we need a small site somewhere near town where we can bring sick Indians for treatment. The main purpose of the appropriation was to start the Indians in farming operations on land we already own. They will make good farmers, but owing to the fact that they know nothing of scientific fertilization it will be necessary to use some money in teaching them. I have constantly urged upon them the necessity of commencing to farm, and now a start can be made.

We do not want to make them wards of the Government, but we want to make them self-supporting citizens, and if we do not give them a start, with the extermination of the game they must necessarily degenerate into useless vagabonds. The argument was made that they got a certain amount of money from the tourists, and while true it is also a fact that that is one of the greatest drawbacks to the work. The Indian must be impressed with the fact that he must work for his living and not pose as a curiosity or live by his wits, and my job is to show him how to work.

I know that you will do all you can, but I am so vitally interested that I can not refrain from urging you to exercise all vigilance in the matter.

Very truly,

LUCIEN A. SPENCER,
Special Commissioner, Florida Seminoles.

SANATORIUM, FORT LAPWAI, IDAHO (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 25, line 12.)

Estimate of department, $40,000; not allowed by House; committee allowed $40,000.

House hearings, page 158; Senate hearings, page 12.

This sanatorium has a capacity for 100 patients, and the amount appropriated by the committee is a conservative estimate for the current year. The statement of the commissioner on page 158 of the House hearings amply justifies the appropriation which has received the sanction of the committee.

SANATORIUM, SAC AND FOX AGENCY, IOWA (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 26, line 5.)

Estimate of department, $25,000; not allowed by House; committee allowed $25,000.

House hearings, page 159; Senate hearings, page 12.

This sanatorium was established during 1914 for the treatment of tuberculosis and trachoma, the building having formerly been used as a school, which was discontinued four or five years ago. This item is justified by Mr. Meritt on page 159 of the House committee hearings and the appropriation is favorably reported by your committee.

RELIEF OF THE CHETTIMANCHI BAND OF LOUISIANA INDIANS (GRATUITY).

Senate hearings, page 445; amount appropriated, $1,500.

Full justification for this appropriation is shown in the following correspondence, and the item is recommended:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, March 27, 1914.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have your letter of March 10 submitting for report a copy of Senate bill 4733, for the relief of the Chettimanchi Band of Indians in Louisiana, and for other purposes.

Under the provisions of the act of Congress approved June 17, 1844 (5 Stat., p. 676), to provide for the adjustment of land claims within the States of Missouri, Arkansas, and Louisiana, etc., reviving the act of Congress approved May 26, 1824 (4 Stat., p. 52), to enable the claimants to lands within certain States to institute proceedings to try the validity of their claims, the Chettimanchi Indians, through Alexander Bertin, acting as their chief, and Joseph Yoyo et al., on the 16th of June, 1846, filed their petition in the District Court of the United States for the District of Louisiana praying for certificate of title to a tract of land in parish of St. Mary, comprised within a certain tract of land claimed by the Chettimanchi Indians, of which they had been in possession more than 70 years preceding the present suit, situated on both sides of the River Teche in the county of Attakapas, having a front of about 1 league on the right line from the upper to the lower limit.

On the 19th of June, 1848, the decree of said court confirmed to the petitioners the lands respectively claimed by them, viz, "To the nation or tribe of Chettimanchi Indians," tract designated on the township plat of T. 13 S., R. 9 E., of the southwestern district of Louisiana, as section 22, containing 266.48 acres; section 23, containing 131.37 acres; section 27, containing 404.92 acres; and section 34, containing 290.66 acres; in the aggregate 1,093.43 acres. It also confirmed unto Marie Rose Pecot, widow of the late John Armelin, and her heirs, the tract designated on the said plat as section 5, containing 160.75 acres; and to Gabriel L. Fuselin and Sarah B. Evans, and to their heirs, the tract designated on said plat as section 11, containing 569.85 acres, that to Fuselin with a front of 2 arpents, that to Evans 8 arpents more or less.

The suit was carried to the Supreme Court of the United States on appeal, and the said court dismissed the appeal at the December term, 1852.

As provided and authorized by the sixth section of the act of 1824 aforesaid (4 Stat. p. 54), the petitioners presented plats of surveys to the General Land Office of the aforesaid three tracts, of 1,093.43 acres, of 160.75 acres, and of 569.85 acres, confirmed to the Indians by the decree of the United States District Court for Louisiana June 19, 1848, and confirmed by the United States Supreme Court at its December term in 1852, under said acts of Congress approved May 26, 1824, and June 17, 1844, whereupon a patent in fee for said three tracts was issued by the General Land Office February 1, 1855.

The Indians now own about 260 acres of the original tract, the remainder having been lost to them through sales and otherwise. Emmet Alpha, an attorney at law, of Franklin, La., represented these Indians in certain litigation affecting their lands. The Indians neglected to pay the attorney his fee and he recovered a judgment against them. This judgment was assigned to F. C. Vigeurie, of Franklin, La., and now amounts to $1,200, including interest. A foreclosure was had in February of this year and the land offered for sale, but in view of the fact that no bid was received for two-thirds of the appraised value, $9,000, there was no sale and the land was readvertised.

The Indian Rights Association was interested in this matter and for a time considered furnishing the necessary funds. On March 12 the Commissioner of Indian Affairs received a telegram from Chief Supervisor Holcombe advising that Miss McIlhenny, of New Orleans, had provided the necessary funds to save the lands to the Indians.

The Comptroller of the Treasury has ruled that the appropriation for "relieving distress, prevention of disease," etc., is not applicable to assist these people in connection with the land, so that if any action is to be taken by the Federal Government in their behalf it is necessary that there shall be an appropriation by Congress.

The lands of these Indians are valued at more than $30 per acre, and the improvements thereon are said to be worth from two to three thousand dollars. By using $1,200 of the amount for the payment of the judgment or claim against these Indians, there would be little left for the purchase of additional lands.

Regarding the proviso that the Secretary may require that the legal title to all property purchased or the title to which is to be cleared shall be in the name of the United States, I suggest that this remain in the bill. An appropriation at this time which will conserve to these Indians their property may avoid a larger draft on the public funds at a later date, and therefore I urge and recommend the passage of the bill.

Very truly, yours,

A. A. JONES,
First Assistant Secretary.

UNITED STATES SENATE, COMMITTEE ON FISHERIES,

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
Chairman Indian Affairs Committee, United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: With this please find inclosed copy of letter written by me recently to Hon. THOMAS S. MARTIN, which is self-explanatory. I hope that the Indian Affairs Committee will see fit to include in their appropriations an item for the payment of this claim.

Very truly, yours,

J. R. THORNTON.

FEBRUARY 6, 1915.

Hon. THOMAS S. MARTIN,
Chairman Committee on Appropriations, United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: On the 23d of February, 1905, a judgment was rendered in the district court for the parish of St. Mary, La., against certain persons belonging to the Chettimaches Tribe of Indians, jointly in the sum of $678.57, with 5 per cent interest thereon from the 23d of December, 1904. This judgment was subsequently sold by the plaintiff to one Adolph Vigueric, and the property of the Indians was seized and advertised for sale to satisfy same. Miss Sara Avery McIlhenny, a resident of Iberia Parish, became interested in the Indians and took steps to prevent the sale of their property. She got into communication with the Indian Affairs Office here, and on the matter being referred to the Attorney General, the United States attorney for the eastern district of Louisiana was instructed to prevent, if possible, the sale of the property of the Indians. The matter finally resulted in the purchase of this judgment by Miss McIlhenny for $1,195.57. The United States attorney was directed to take steps to protect Miss McIlhenny in respect to the payment made by her for the judgment, and thinking that it would be proper to have the judgment revived in the St. Mary Parish State court, wrote to the Department of Justice advising them as to how this should be accomplished and what it would cost. On the 27th of January, 1915, Assistant Attorney General Charles Warren wrote to the United States attorney at New Orleans, Hon. Walter Guion, stating that "the matter has been taken up informally with the Indian Office and the promise of the Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs secured, that he will to-day ask the Appropriations Committee in the Senate to appropriate an amount sufficient to pay Miss McIlhenny in full, so that the judgment against the Chettimaches may be canceled." I presume that this matter has been taken up since then with the committee by the assistant commissioner, and hope that the committee will see fit to make the desired appropriation. In addition to the sum—$1,195.57—paid for the judgment, Miss McIlhenny disbursed 50 cents for reinscribing the judgment in St. Mary Parish, thus making a total of $1,196.07 paid out by her for the account of the tribe. I take it that the committee will feel justified in including this amount in the appropriation bill.

In addition, Miss McIlhenny agreed to see that the fee of an attorney in Franklin, La., Mr. Charles J. Boatner, who had been representing the tribe in an effort to prevent the sale of their property, would be paid him, and while she has not paid Mr. Boatner the amount of the fee claimed by him, the sum of $350, she has definitely agreed that he should be paid his fee by the Indians as soon as the amount can be earned by leasing their property, and she desires that if possible the sum of $350, attorney's fee, be added in the appropriation, making the total $1,546.07, so as to include Mr. Boatner's fee. I do not know whether the committee will feel justified in including this $350 item, but will request that it receive consideration in connection with the rest of the desired appropriation.

Kindly advise me as soon as practicable whether the committee has received word from the Indian Office or considered this matter.

Very truly, yours,

J. R. THORNTON.

INDIAN SCHOOL, MOUNT PLEASANT, MICH. (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 27, line 8.)

Estimate of department, $85,450; allowed by House, $64,450; allowed by committee, $71,450.

This is the only Indian boarding school in the State of Michigan, and there are about 1,400 children of school age. This is an appropriation less than was allowed this institution last year by $14,000.

The appropriation is necessary and is recommended by the committee.

SUPPORT AND EDUCATION, INDIAN SCHOOL, PIPESTONE, MINN. (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 27, line 15.)

Estimate of department, $55,175; allowed by House, $49,675; allowed by committee, $51,675.

House hearings, page 168; Senate hearings, page 13.

The addition to the appropriation by this committee covers an appropriation for repairs and improvements to buildings. This is in accordance with the department's estimate, which has been reduced by $3,500.

CELEBRATION, WHITE EARTH BAND, CHIPPEWAS (TRIBAL FUNDS).

(Bill, p. 28, line 13.)

Estimate of department, $1,000; allowed by House and this committee, $1,000.

House hearings, page 174; Senate hearings, page 14. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1075.

This is the amount usually authorized to be withdrawn from tribal funds each year for the celebration mentioned. The discussion in the House of Representatives thereon will be found at page 1075 of the RECORD, and the item was adopted by the committee without objection.

PREPARATION OF ROLL, WHITE EARTH BAND CHIPPEWA INDIANS.

(Bill, p. 29, line 5.)

Senate hearings of February 19, 1915.

The Indian appropriation act approved June 30, 1913 (38 Stat. L., 77), provided (p. 88) for the making of a roll of the Chippewa Indians allotted within the White Earth Reservation in the State of Minnesota, such roll to be made by a commission of two persons appointed by the United States District Court of Minnesota.

At the time of the approval of that act there was pending before the courts the question of what degree of other than Indian blood was necessary to constitute a mixed-blood Indian within the meaning of the amendment contained in the acts approved June 21, 1906 (34 Stat. L., 325, 353), and March 1, 1907 (34 Stat. L., 1015, 1034).

As it was not known just where the courts would draw the line or what construction would finally be placed upon the law, it was deemed advisable to provide that the status roll of the Indians should show the percentage of blood, so that wherever the courts might finally draw the line the classification of the roll would become effective.

Since that time the United States Supreme Court has affirmed the decision of the circuit court of appeals that any identifiable admixture of other than Indian blood is sufficient to constitute a mixed-blood Indian, all others being full bloods.

It is therefore apparent that the purpose of the roll would be fulfilled if it shows whether the allottee in each instance is a full-blood or a mixed-blood Indian, and that the immense amount of time and expense which would be incurred in endeavoring to ascertain with accuracy the particular percentage of Indian blood possessed by each individual would not be warranted. The matter of determining whether an allottee is a full blood or a mixed blood would be comparatively easy, and much more readily ascertained than the particular degree of blood.

As the law now reads it will be necessary to show on the rolls the quantum of Chippewa Indian blood of the allottees as near as it reasonably can be ascertained. If amended as suggested, it will only be necessary to show whether the allottee is a full blood or a mixed blood. The commission appointed by the court to make the roll has suggested that the law be so amended.

HOSPITAL, CHIPPEWA INDIANS, MINNESOTA (TRIBAL FUNDS).

Estimate of department, $25,000; not allowed by House; allowed by committee, $25,000.

House committee hearings, page 175; Senate hearings, page 21.

This is authority for an expenditure from tribal funds and is in line with the policy of the department with respect to safeguarding the health of the Indians, an appropriation of $50,000 having been made last year for a similar purpose. The statement of Assistant Commissioner Meritt on page 21 of the Senate committee hearings calls attention to the necessity for the appropriation, and it is accordingly recommended by the committee.

GENERAL COUNCIL OF CHIPPEWA INDIANS (TRIBAL FUNDS).

Senate hearings, pages 259, 565.

Authorized withdrawal, $4,000.

It appears from the statement made before the committee that the general council of this tribe has saved the Indians, in one instance, $80,000. Its continuation is authorized, and the Secretary of the Interior has instructions to participate therein through his representatives.

RESERVATION OF MINERAL RIGHTS TO INDIANS ON CEDED LANDS, CHIPPEWA INDIANS OF MINNESOTA (NO APPROPRIATION).

(Bill, p. 32, line 3.)

This provision requires that upon all ceded lands of the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota the minerals are to be reserved by the United States for the use and benefit of the Chippewa Indians.

ESTABLISHMENT OF A FOREST RESERVE, RED LAKE INDIAN RESERVATION, MINN. (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 20.

The statement of Senator CLAPP, on page 20 of the Senate committee's hearings, shows that this reservation has not yet been allotted This provision is the same as S. 7179, introduced by Senator NELSON on January 6, 1915, and referred to this committee. The Secretary of the Interior promptly reported favorably upon the bill in question (S. 7179), and it has therefore been incorporated in this appropriation bill. The communication of Secretary Lane upon the item in question is here given, and as no appropriation is asked and this legislation is necessary, it is recommended:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 18, 1915.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of January 7, 1915, transmitting a copy of Senate bill 7179, to provide for the establishment of a forest reserve within the Red Lake Indian Reservation, Minn., and asking for a report upon the same.

Within the western portion of the Red Lake Indian Reservation there is a very large area of open lands which are susceptible of drainage, as is shown by House Document No. 971, Sixty-third Congress, second session. When drained these lands will afford excellent agricultural allotments for the Red Lake Indians. However, it has been the experience of the department that many Indians, especially Indians within the lake States, are reluctant to leave the timbered areas and settle permanently in open agricultural countries. The eastern portion of the Red Lake Reservation is generally timbered, and the larger part of it has a broken surface and sandy soil which is unfitted for agriculture. I believe that it would be best for the Red Lake Indians to preserve this eastern portion as community property. Senate bill 7179 provides for holding this land on the eastern side of the reservation as tribal property, and also makes provision for the sale of the timber thereon in such manner as good administration will require.

I should be pleased to see this bill enacted into law.

Cordially, yours,

FRANKLIN K. LANE.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs, United States Senate.

PAYMENT OF ASSESSMENTS ON INDIAN ALLOTMENTS, STATE RURAL HIGHWAYS, STATE OF MINNESOTA (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 400; CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 2452.

This provision has the approval of the department and is the subject of a bill (H. R. 20195) introduced in the House by Mr. MILLER, of Minnesota, and which has been favorably reported to that body on January 25, 1915. (See H. Rept. No. 1319, 63d Cong., 2d sess.) This provision is essential and its adoption is recommended. The report of the department is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 12, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. STEPHENS: I have received your letter of December 22, 1914, transmitting for report H. R. 20193, "Providing for the payment of assessments on Indian allotments benefited by the construction of State rural highways in the State of Minnesota."

This bill is almost identical with House bill 15289, upon which a report was made under date of May 22, 1914. In that report it was stated that the department was in accord with the purpose of the bill, except that it might be construed in its present form to create a lien on Indian lands held in trust by the United States and to authorize a sale of such lands to pay the charges assessed. It was therefore suggested that there be inserted a provision specifically exempting the Indian lands from a forced sale.

As the suggested modification has been made, the department favors the enactment of the proposed legislation.

Very truly, yours,

A. A. JONES,
First Assistant Secretary.

Hon. JOHN H. STEPHENS,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs,
House of Representatives.

EMPLOYMENT OF HIGH-SCHOOL TEACHERS AT WHITE EARTH, MINN. (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 37, line 21.)

Senate hearings, page —.

The act of 1913 provided $4,000 for the purpose stated in this provision, and last year a like sum was appropriated. The good accomplished was so great that it is esteemed as necessary by the committee to continue the allowance.

SUPPORT AND CIVILIZATION, FLATHEAD INDIANS, MONTANA (GRATUITY).

Estimate of department, $15,000; allowed by House, $12,000; committee appropriated, $20,000.

The increase of this item was due to the fact that during the hearings it developed that many of the Indians on this and other reservations were in a necessitous condition and the appropriation was therefore made immediately available.

SUPPORT AND CIVILIZATION, BLACKFEET INDIANS, MONTANA (GRATUITY).

Estimate of department, $15,000; allowed by House, $15,000; committee allowed, $25,000.

The hearings on pages 112 to 120 will disclose that the Indians on this reservation are in a deplorable condition. Some of them are in need of food and clothing, and a perusal of the testimony before the committee and the statements of members of this committee who have visited the reservation amply justified the committee in raising the appropriation allowed by the House and directing that it be made available immediately.

PURCHASE OF CATTLE FOR BLACKFEET INDIANS, MONTANA. (TRIBAL FUNDS.)

(Bill, p. 41, line 12.)

Estimate, $150,000; allowed by House, $75,000; committee allowed $150,000.

House hearings, page 196; Senate hearings, page 125.

The estimate of the department was for $150,000, and the statement of the commissioner shows that the appropriation is necessary, as the Indians possess grazing lands which should be utilized for their benefit in the husbandry of live stock, the surplus lands affording ample range for such purchases as the department has made.

BLACKFEET, FLATHEAD, AND FORT PECK IRRIGATION PROJECTS (REIMBURSABLE).

Senate hearings, pages 130 to 149 and 361. Discussed in House at page 1079 of volume 52, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

This provides for the continuation of the irrigation work on the Indian lands of these reservations. The estimate therefore appears in a letter from the Acting Secretary of the Treasury, dated January 8, 1915. (H. Doc. No. 1481, 63d Cong., 3d sess.) The amount carried by this appropriation is the sum of $836,996.81. The language of the bill, on lines 12 to 16, on page 44, covers the sum of $525,187.93 into the reclamation fund of these tribes out of their tribal funds on deposit to their credit in the Treasury. In a communication dated January 7, 1915, addressed to the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of the Interior transmits his recommendation for the legislation here recommended by your committee, as well as an appropriation for the Yakima Reservation, Wash. The communications referred to are as follows:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, January 8, 1915.

The SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

SIR: I have the honor to transmit herewith, for the consideration of Congress, copy of a communication of the Secretary of the Interior, of the 7th instant, submitting supplemental estimates of appropriation for the service of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, aggregating $1,275,187.93 for continuing the construction of the Blackfeet, Flathead, and Fort Peck irrigation projects in Montana, and for the second installment on account of the storage water right provided in the Indian appropriation act approved August 1, 1914 (38 Stat., p. 605), for the irrigation of Indian allotments on the Yakima Indian Reservation in the State of Washington, in compliance with section 5 of the act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat., p. 1009), for incorporation in the sundry civil and Indian appropriation bills, respectively.

The reasons for the submission of the above estimates at this time are explained in the notes accompanying the same.

Respectfully,

B. R. NEWTON, Acting Secretary.

JANUARY 7, 1915.

DEAR MR. SECRETARY: I transmit herewith a supplemental estimate of appropriation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, aggregating $1,275,187.93, for continuing the construction of the Blackfeet, Flathead, and Fort Peck irrigation projects in Montana, and for the second installment on account of the storage water right provided in the Indian appropriation act of August 1, 1914 (Public, 160), for the irrigation of Indian allotments on the Yakima Indian Reservation in the State of Washington, in compliance with section 5 of the act of March 3, 1901 (31 Stat. L., 1009).

The estimate for the work on the Montana projects should therefore be incorporated in the sundry civil appropriation bill for the ensuing fiscal year. The installment on account of the Yakima water supply is to be covered into the reclamation fund, and should be included in the Indian appropriation bill.

The emergency character of these estimates is explained in notes appended to the estimates.

The estimates have been submitted to the President and have received his approval. It is recommended that they be transmitted to Congress for favorable consideration.

Cordially, yours, FRANKLIN K. LANE.

The SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY.

SALE OF TIMBER ON LANDS OF THE FLATHEAD RESERVATION, MONT. (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 374.

This provision is the subject of a bill (S. 647), and has been reported by the committee. The legislation is recommended in view of the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior in his letter of January 18, 1915, to Senator MYERS, as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 18, 1915.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In further reference to the matter of the reclassification and reappraisement of certain lands within the former Flathead Indian Reservation in Montana which was presented in your letter of October 14, 1914, and subsequent correspondence with the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, I have the honor to advise you that it is the belief of the department that the most satisfactory solution of the difficulties which are being encountered there will be the enactment of legislation which will authorize the homesteading of tracts upon which the amount of timber is comparatively small and the land fit for agricultural uses.

Legislation of this character which was recommended by the department in 1912 was introduced in the Sixty-second Congress as Senate bill 6624 and House bill 23881, but was not passed. The same legislation was proposed in Senate bill 647 of the Sixty-third Congress, which was introduced by yourself. In a reconsideration of the matter it has appeared that this legislation could be improved, and the form has been recast. The amended form reads as follows:

"That section 11 of the act of April 23, 1904 (33 Stats. L., 302), entitled "An act for the survey and allotment of lands now embraced within the limits of the Flathead Indian Reservation, in the State of Montana, and the sale and disposal of all surplus lands after allotment," amended by the act of March 3, 1909 (35 Stats. L., 796), be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"'SEC. 11. That merchantable timber on said lands, returned and classified by said commission as timberlands, may be sold by the Secretary of the Interior, under such regulations as he may prescribe, and after the sale and removal of the timber such of said lands as are valuable for agricultural or horticultural purposes shall be sold or opened to homestead entry by the Secretary of the Interior in such manner and under such regulations as he may prescribe: Provided, That lands valuable for agricultural or horticultural purposes, heretofore classified as timberlands, may, in the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, be appraised and opened to homestead entry under regulations prescribed by him, upon condition that homestead entrymen shall at the time of making their original homestead entries, or before final proof thereon, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, pay the full value of the timber found on the land at the time that the appraisement of the land itself is made, such payment to be in addition to the appraised price of the lands apart from the timber, as herein authorized.'"

I should be pleased to see this item included in the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1916.

Cordially, yours, FRANKLIN K. LANE.

Hon. H. L. MYERS, United States Senate.

PURCHASE OF LANDS AND SUPPORT OF HOMELESS INDIANS OF NEVADA (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 54, line 24.)

Senate hearings, pages 226, 252, 306.

Appropriated, $15,000.

This is a committee amendment. There have been filed with your committee numerously signed petitions from residents of Nevada requesting this appropriation. A full and complete statement justifying this appropriation is found on page 226 of the hearings on the bill, wherein the Senator from Nevada [Mr. PITTMAN] gives a complete history of the Washoe and other tribes of Nevada Indians. The department did not estimate for this appropriation, but the commissioner states that the money is needed to remedy the conditions existent among these Indians, and the committee heartily recommends the appropriation.

JICARRILLA RESERVATION, N. MEX., ALLOTMENTS AND SALE OF TIMBER (NO APPROPRIATION).

It is important that this item be included in the bill because the money now to the credit of these Indians is available only for irrigation purposes. This reservation is on the Continental Divide, and it is deemed impracticable to irrigate these lands. The money is to be used for the maintenance of the Indians when received, in the purchase of live stock, seeds, and implements. The committee recommends the adoption of the legislation.

LEASE OF LIMESTONE DEPOSITS, TUSCARORA NATION OF NEW YORK INDIANS (NO APPROPRIATION).

This provision has passed the House of Representatives (H. R. 14196) and has been made the subject of a report by this committee on January 15, 1915 (H. Rept. No. 918, 63d Cong., 3d sess.), which refers to House Report No. 366 of the Sixty-third Congress, second session. An extract from the House report is appended, and the committee recommends the adoption of the provision:

"The Committee on Indian Affairs, to whom was referred the bill (H. R. 14196) authorizing the Tuscarora Nation of New York Indians to lease or sell the limestone deposits upon their reservation, having duly considered the same, recommend that the bill do pass.

"All of the Indians present before your committee recognized the jurisdiction of the Federal Government over this matter, and that the Indians have no right to lease or sell the lands without the authority and consent of said Government, but are desirous that some disposition of at least a part of their limestone deposits should be made at once. They are insistent that their nation should be recognized and empowered to carry on negotiations to that effect, but that no contract be entered into until it is approved by a referendum vote of the entire adult roster of the nation, and any such contract shall be further subject to the approval of the Secretary of the Interior, and that the matter of the disposition of the limestone deposits be thoroughly advertised, so that there will be no possibility of one or more particular contractors being favored by any faction which may exist among their people.

"There is considerable diversity of opinion as to the extent and value of this deposit. Evidence submitted shows that the best tentative offer the nation has received on a royalty basis is 1 cent per short ton, and the best lump-sum offer for a lease covering about 250 acres, same being a strip 40 rods wide on the north line of the reservation, is $50 per acre ground rent to the occupants of the strip, and $126 per capita to all the members of the nation, regardless of age or sex—all to be paid in advance.

"There is some difference of opinion as to whether a lease for a lump sum or upon a royalty basis is for the best interests of the nation.

"The Geological Survey values the contents of these deposits at 10 cents per ton, while Mr. Edward H. Foley, superintendent of the Solvay quarries at Jamesville, N. Y., a practical quarryman, states that a price of 2 cents a short ton would be favorable to the Indians.

"The quantity contained in the 40-rod strip is estimated by the Geological Survey as containing 6,306,000 long tons on the 250-acre tract, if 9 feet deep. Evidence produced, however, questions the estimated depth of the deposit as being 9 feet. One of the Indians, Mr. Edgar L. Rickard, who has worked in neighboring quarries, claims that the depth is considerably less than this.

"We beg to quote from Geological Bulletin No. 522, of the United States Geological Survey, pages 276, 277, and 279, as follows:

"'The limestones of Clinton age in the western part of the State, though not particularly thick nor high grade, are of great value because of the lack of better stone in a region where the demand is great.

* * * * * * *

"'The iron and steel plants in the Buffalo region now require about 3,000 tons of fluxing rock per day, and this requirement is likely to increase rather than decrease in the future. Until recently the chief sources of flux have been the pure limestone lenses at the base of the Onondago limestone. But these lenses, both in Canada and in the United States, are now within measurable reach of exhaustion, so that the intensity of demand for a pure limestone in the Buffalo region is very great. In view of these facts, the recently developed limestones of Clinton age become of peculiar industrial importance.

* * * * * * *

"'The total tonnage available is, however, limited, and unless new ones are discovered the supply from this source can not last for many years.'

"The Tuscarora limestone deposits are on the line of the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad, and are located but a few miles from the point of consumption.

"Your committee recommends that in case a contract is consummated the distribution of the amount received by the Secretary of the Interior be paid at once to the adult members of the nation, and such portion as belongs to the minors of the nation be deposited in the Treasury of the United States until they shall become of age, when it shall be distributed among them by the Secretary of the Interior.

"If a lease is made on a royalty basis, it is desirable that as large an advance payment as possible be secured, as many members of the nation who have been carrying the burden of the nation are well advanced in years, and if they do not receive an early distribution would probably benefit but little from their limestone deposits."

REDEMPTION OF STARR M'GILLIS MORTGAGE (REIMBURSABLE).

Amount appropriated, $1,500.

House hearings, page 228; Senate hearings, page 288.

This is an investment by the Government in behalf of the Indian of $1,500, which is amply secured, as shown by the testimony of Mr. Meritt appearing on page 288 of the committee's hearings, and the appropriation of the sum is recommended. The item is also justified on page 228 of the House hearings.

HEADSTONE FOR SCARLET CROW, A WAHPETON CHIEF (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 61, line 18.)

Amount appropriated, $100.

Senate hearings, page 223.

This item was in the bill last year, and is approved by the department. The hearings of this committee, page 224, show that Scarlet Crow was a scout for the United States, and while in Washington in 1867 he died. He was buried in the Congressional Cemetery, but his grave is not marked, and it is for the purpose of rendering fitting tribute to his valuable services to the Government that the committee recommends the appropriation.

CLAIMS OF SISSETON AND WAHPETON BANDS OF SIOUX INDIANS (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page —.

The subject of this legislation was incorporated in Senate bill 5255, which passed the Senate on June 5, 1914. (CONG. RECORD, vol. 51, pt. 10, pp. 9838, 9839.) House report No. 1274, Sixty-third Congress, second session, of January 11, 1915, suggests certain changes in the act as originally drafted, and these changes are incorporated in the language of the section reported by your committee. This confers jurisdiction upon the Court of Claims to determine the claims of the Indians mentioned. This has been the subject of a number of reports, all favorable, and the one dispute (respecting attorneys' fees) has been remedied by a limitation of the amount to $15,000.

SUPPORT AND CIVILIZATION OF WICHITAS, OKLAHOMA (GRATUITY).

Estimate, $5,000; not allowed by House; allowed by committee, $5,000.

House hearings, page 233; Senate hearings, page 24. Discussion in House, Congressional Record, volume 52, page 1279.

This is a sum which is estimated for by the department and is the regular amount allowed annually for these Indians. A point of order was made in the House of Representatives, and it was inserted by this committee, as the commissioner states the money is essential.

SUPPORT AND CIVILIZATION OF CHEYENNES AND ARAPAHOES (GRATUITY).

Estimate, $35,000; not allowed by House committee; allowed by Senate committee, $35,000.

House hearings, page 236; Senate hearings, page 25. Discussion in House, Congressional Record, volume 52, page 1281.

Two thousand seven hundred and fifty Indians at four different agencies are given attention by this item, by means of 37 employees. The regular annual sum is here allowed. The appropriation is recommended.

WOMEN'S BOARD OF DOMESTIC MISSIONS (GRATUITY).

Senate hearings, page 26.

Appropriated, $10,000.

This is to reimburse the Women's Board of Domestic Missions for the loss sustained through the removal of the Mescalero Apaches to their original reservation in New Mexico from Fort Sill, Okla., the women's board being compelled to abandon the buildings referred to. The buildings were used for educational purposes. The department recommends the appropriation, Mr. Meritt submitting his justification on page 26 of the House hearings.

AUTHORIZING THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR TO VACATE CERTAIN LANDS IN OKLAHOMA RESERVED FOR TOWN SITE (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 719.

This item is the subject of a separate bill, S. 4619, favorably reported by the committee on February 13, 1915. A similar bill passed the Senate in Sixty-first Congress, second session, but reached the House too late for adoption there. It appears from the report of the department on the proposed legislation that no objection exists to the bill. It authorizes the Secretary of the Interior to reimburse 29 purchasers of land within a town site in Oklahoma which is to be vacated.

The report of the department of most recent date is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, March 21, 1914.

HON. HENRY F. ASHURST,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs, United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Receipt is acknowledged of the letter dated February 26, 1914, transmitting a copy of Senate bill 4619, Sixty-third Congress, second session, authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to vacate certain lands in Oklahoma reserved for a town site, and for other purposes.

The department wishes to invite to your attention lines 3 to 7, page 2, of the above bill, providing for the allotment of the said town site in equal amounts to San-a-was and Moe-tak-dah, two enrolled Comanche Indian women who have not heretofore received allotments. The Office of Indian Affairs informs me that Moe-tak-dah died March 26, 1912, leaving as her relatives and heirs one Pessa, granddaughter, and Mattie Quah-ne-nah, great granddaughter.

The latter has been provided for on the Comanche allotment roll based on the act of June 5, 1906 (34 Stat. L., 213), which provided for the allotment of children of the tribe born subsequent to and entitled to allotment under the act of June 6, 1900 (31 Stat. L., 676). However, Pessa has not been allotted by reason of the fact that she was born prior to that date.

It is therefore suggested that section 2 of the bill (S. 4619) be amended by striking out, in line 5, page 2, the name "Moe-tak-dah" and inserting the name "Pessa."

If the bill be amended as suggested, I see no objection to its passage.

Cordially, yours,

A. A. JONES,
First Assistant Secretary.

GRANTING RIGHT OF WAY TO ATCHISON, TOPEKA & SANTA FE RAILWAY, CHILOCCO INDIAN RESERVATION (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 632.

This provision is also incorporated in S. 7025, Sixty-third Congress, second session, and the grant of a right of way not to exceed 200 feet in width over the reservation at Chilocco is recommended.

PAYMENT OF INTEREST TO OSAGE INDIANS (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings of February 12, page —.

About a quarter of a million dollars is distributed quarterly to members of the Osage Tribe. Conditions have arisen whereby money lenders exact usurious rates of interest from certain Indians, and the department has submitted the amendment to remedy it and the justification given below. In some cases several thousand per cent interest is charged, and 40 per cent per annum is considered by some of these Indians as a low rate of interest.

The act of June 28, 1906 (34 Stat. L., 539), regarding the subdivision of the lands and funds of the Osage Indians, provides (sec. 4, subdivisions 1 and 2) that the interest of the segregated shares of the Osage tribal funds, as well as individual shares of the royalties arising from oil and gas leases, shall be paid quarterly to the members entitled thereto, and that the interest of minors shall be paid to the parents or to the legal guardians where the parents are deceased.

This law appears to be mandatory and to give discretion to the department to withhold payments of interest of minors only "when the Commissioner of Indian Affairs becomes satisfied that the said interest of any minor is being misused or squandered."

About $300,000, being the interest on trust funds and oil and gas royalties, is paid to the Osage Indians quarterly. These shares under the present law go to the competent and incompetent alike for their unrestricted use. Experience has demonstrated that many of these Indians are as unfit as a child to be given the unrestricted use of these funds. The methods by which some of the unscrupulous characters separate the incompetent Indian from his money are appalling. The Indian pays usurious interest on borrowed money previous to repaying the loan; he demands no canceled notes or receipted bills; he affixes his thumb-mark signature to any paper that he is told to sign; and then, having used all the money received at the payment in liquidating such debts, he is compelled to again borrow sufficient to tide him over until the next payment. In this manner it is probable that he pays an interest on borrowed funds of not less than 40 per cent per annum.

It is evident that if the Osage Indians are to receive even approximately the benefits which they might have from these payments, some discretion should be lodged in the department with respect to which of the Indians should be given the unrestricted use of their money. The purpose of the amendment is to permit the department to withhold payment and to use the funds for the benefit of the individuals where it is shown that the money has heretofore been misused or squandered.

ADMINISTRATION OF AFFAIRS OF FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES (GRATUITY).

Estimate, $175,000; House allowed, $150,000; Senate committee allowed, $175,000.

The commissioner states in his testimony before the committee that the service would be greatly crippled if the amount allowed by the House were allowed to stand. This appropriation cares for about 35,000 restricted Indians in Oklahoma, most of whom are full bloods, and it will be years before the Government can release jurisdiction over them.

PROBATE ATTORNEYS, FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 68, line 7.)

House hearings, page 250; Senate hearings, pages 30, 427. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1286.

Estimate, $85,000; allowed by House, $85,000; committee allowed, $85,000.

From April 1 to December 1, 1914, the amount saved to minors and orphans through protests, exceptions, and suits was $585,122. An interesting résumé of their work is shown on pages 426–429 of the committee's hearings. The amount, $85,000, was adopted by the House.

INDIAN SCHOOLS IN FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 68, line 19.)

House hearings, page 256; Senate hearings., pages 40, 290, 629. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1287.

Estimate, $275,000; allowed by House, nothing; allowed by committee, $275,000.

This provision was estimated for by the department and was stricken out by the House. It is essential that the money be allowed, as a complete analysis of expenditures on page 256 of the House hearings shows completely and fully disbursement of the money.

SANATORIUM, CHOCTAW AND CHICKASAW NATIONS (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 71, line 13.)

Estimate, $20,000; not allowed by House committee; allowed by Senate committee, $20,000.

House hearings, page 261; Senate hearings, page 42.

This item is justified in the House committee hearings, page 261. Authority has been given for the construction of a hospital, and the amount provided here is for its upkeep and maintenance. The amount allowed is necessary and is recommended.

ENFORCEMENT OF PROHIBITORY LAW, FIVE CIVILIZED TRIBES (GRATUITY).

(Bill, p. 71, line 19.)

Senate hearings, page 70. Committee amendment.

Amount appropriated, $5,000.

This appropriation is for the purpose of aiding the Indian Bureau to cooperate with the United States attorney for Oklahoma in aiding in keeping away from the members of the Five Civilized Tribes beer and whisky. The reasons for this appropriation appear on page 70 of the committee hearings, and the provision has the approval of the committee.

Estimated by department, page 450 of Estimates of Appropriations. Adopted by House, page 1346 of volume 52, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

By their agreements with the United States the members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes have been guaranteed a distribution of their funds in the Treasury of the Government and on deposit in banks. The question was adopted by your committee, as shown on page 661 of the hearings, by the following vote: Ayes—Senators MYERS, ROBINSON, THOMPSON, OWEN, WHITE, CLAPP, PAGE, and the chairman; nays—Senators LANE and GRONNA. The committee has heard the testimony of every person who could have any knowledge upon this subject and who wished to be heard. Our conclusion is that the money is in the Treasury and to the credit of the Indians, that they are entitled to it, and that the statement shown on page 265 of the House committee hearings clearly shows that the withdrawal of the money sufficient to make the per capita payments will not injure the interest of anyone.

Much controversy has been aroused by efforts to reopen the rolls of these tribes by those who claim they should participate in this per capita distribution. Without prejudice to any person's rights, there will remain in the Treasury sufficient money to fully compensate all persons who may under any circumstances have any right to a distributive share. The Interior Department has rendered its decision in accordance with law as to who are entitled to share in this distribution. More than $13,000,000 will remain to the credit of these tribes after the withdrawals here authorized are made. With such a vast fund, ably administered as it is, increasing all the time, it would be unjust to deprive enrolled members of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes from participation in this distribution.

WITHHOLDING FROM ALLOTMENT CERTAIN LANDS IN CREEK NATION (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, pages 39, 224, 282, 311; House committee special hearings on H. J. Res. 380 of January 7, 1915; favorably reported to House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 2617.

This provision is embodied in House joint resolution 380, which was the subject of two reports, viz. No. 1326, of January 27, 1915, and No. 1326, part 2, of January 30, 1915, to the House of Representatives, the latter being a minority report. The language of this provision in the appropriation bill here considered is similar to the majority report to the House, except that the sale of such lands as may be unallotted is prohibited, but the same may be leased. The land herein involved is said to be worth about $10,000,000. The provision authorizing a per capita distribution of $800 to each member of the tribe who has not received allotment and who was entitled to allotment prior to the compilation of the list of names included in Senate Document No. 478, Sixty-third Congress, second session, has been increased to $2,080 by the committee. A full hearing was granted to all persons interested, and the testimony appears on pages of this committee hearings as given at the opening of this justification, and the committee refers especially to the testimony before the House committee cited. On page 4 of the majority report of the House committee (H. R. 1326, pt. 1) appears the statement of the department which justifies this proposed legislation. There are just five persons on the rolls entitled to allotment, and no provision has been made for them; they will not be entitled to land, and the money payment here authorized will compensate them. The committee recommends the legislation.

SCHOOLS FOR SIOUX INDIANS (TREATY ITEM).

House hearings, page 289; Senate hearings, pages 40, 65, 290, 511, 601, 630, 672. Discussion in the House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1349.

Estimate, $200,000; allowed by House, $200,000; allowed by Senate, $200,000.

The committee has attached to the appropriation as adopted by the House the following language:

"To be expended under the agreement with said Indians in section 17 of the act of March 2, 1889, which agreement is hereby extended to and including June 30, 1916."

This provision of course recognizes the treaty of 1889 and provides $200,000 for the education of the Sioux Indians. Recognizing the treaty to the extent of appropriating the amount called for ($200,000), the Government should provide sufficient schools for the education of the Indians. It appears that this has not been done, and the money here appropriated has for many years been utilized for the education of Sioux children at other than Government schools to some extent. At the present time about $20,000 per year, according to the testimony before the committee, is so utilized. A great deal of testimony has been heard by your committee, and it has been deemed advisable to recommend to the Senate the continuance of the treaty.

WAGON ROAD, STANDING ROCK RESERVATION.

Estimate of department, in H. R. 1236, of December 7, 1914, $5,000; not considered by House committee. Discussion in House, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, volume 52, page 1350; Senate hearings, pages 68 and 201.

The appropriation bill of August 1, 1914, carried an item appropriating $1,000 for the purpose of making an investigation as to the feasibility and necessity of the road for which $5,000 is here appropriated. This report, with accompanying map, is found in House Document 1236, Sixty-third Congress, third session, and the Secretary of the Interior reports favorably upon the project and asks for the sum of $5,000. In pursuance to the prior appropriation and the subsequent report the committee recommends that $5,000 be allowed.

CONFEDERATED BAND UTE INDIANS, AUTHORIZING SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR TO SETTLE ALL CLAIMS (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 295. House hearings, pages 401 and 663. No amount appropriated.

This legislation is recommended by the department in a communication dated January 23, 1915, from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and as it appears in the bill is approved by the department. The review of the proposed paragraph is as follows:

JANUARY 23, 1915.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have your letter of January 15, 1915, inclosing copy of an amendment intended to be proposed by Senator THOMAS to the pending Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1916 (H. R. 20150), the purpose of which amendment is to provide for the negotiation of an agreement with the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians for a final settlement of all their claims against the United States.

In submitting an adverse report to the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs, United States Senate, on a proposed amendment to H. R. 26874, Sixty-second Congress, third session (Indian appropriation bill for fiscal year 1914), which would have enabled the Confederated Bands of Ute Indians to submit to the Court of Claims for adjudication their claim against the United States, the department, under date of January 31, 1913, said, among other things:

"There are no difficult legal questions involved in the determination of the rights and interests of these Indians, and no questions involving the attention of attorneys of unusual forensic or legal ability, if indeed there are any questions which justify the employment of any attorneys whatever. The questions at issue involve chiefly the determination of certain mineral, timber, and nonirrigable lands. There is apparent no sufficient reason why representatives of the Government can not determine the value of these lands and, after fully consulting with the Indians, reach an agreement which may be submitted with the full consent of the Indians to Congress for appropriate action."

I am of the opinion that the amendment now proposed is in some respects very desirable. However, I am opposed to that part of the amendment providing that the "said Indians may be represented in said negotiations and settlement by the counsel of their own selection and who are now representing them under written agreement."

In the first place, as may be inferred from department letter referred to above, there appears to be no questions involved which would justify the employment of an attorney. Furthermore, as far as the records of this office are concerned, no contract between the Ute Indians and any attorneys to represent them in this matter has received the approval of the office and the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the provisions of section 2103 of the Revised Statutes. If the amendment were adopted as written, it would probably have the effect of validating any contract which might have been written, and I would be opposed to such action in the absence of full knowledge of the terms of such contract. I therefore suggest that the amendment be amended by striking out all that part thereof after the word "Interior," in line 11 of page 2.

Very truly, yours,

CATO SELLS, Commissioner.

IRRIGATION OF INDIAN ALLOTMENTS, YAKIMA INDIAN RESERVATION, WASH. (REIMBURSABLE).

(Bill, p. 86, line 15.)

House hearings, page 304. Senate hearings, pages 194 and 197.

Estimate of department, $100,000; allowed by Senate committee, $100,000.

The item of $100,000 here allowed is in line with the like appropriation in the bill for last year. House Document No. 1481, Sixty-third Congress, third session, containing a full justification for this provision, did not reach the House committee in time for the consideration of the House, and the item here would appear as a committee amendment. On page 5 of Document No. 1481, referred to, the language here recommended is to be found. This is a work still under way and is essential to the completion of the project in accordance with previous legislation.

CONSTRUCTION OF DAM ACROSS YAKIMA RIVER, WASH. (REIMBURSABLE).

(Bill, p. 86, line 23, to p. 88, line 23.)

House hearings, page 305. Estimated by department, Book of Estimates, page 463. Senate hearings, pages 197 and 231.

Estimate, $100,000. Senate committee allowed $100,000.

This provision is embodied in House Document No. 1472, dated November 18, 1914, submitted to Congress January 4, 1915, and hence the justification did not reach the House committee in time for its consideration. The statement of the commissioner, on pages 198 and 199 of our committee hearings, and the statement of Senator WESLEY L. JONES, amply justify the appropriation. The department has made estimate for the work in compliance with the Indian appropriation act of last year, and as this has long been contemplated, the appropriation is necessary. (38 Stat. L., 605.) Under date of February 13, 1915, the Assistant Secretary of the Interior again refers to this matter as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, February 13, 1915.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR ASHURST: Acknowledging receipt of your reference of a proposed amendment intended to be made to the bill (H. R. 20150) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, appropriating $400,000 for construction of a dam across the Yakima River and for beginning the enlargement and extension of the distribution and drainage system on the Yakima Indian Reservation, I invite your attention to the report dated November 18, 1914, which I submitted to Congress under date of January 4, 1915, in compliance with a provision of the Indian appropriation act of August 1, 1914 (38 Stat. L., 605).

The work proposed is very necessary, and meets with my approval. In view, however, of the desirability of curtailing appropriations where not absolutely necessary, it is believed that reasonably satisfactory progress can be had on this project if the appropriation of $100,000 is made in accordance with the former estimate submitted through the Secretary of the Interior, and I recommend that this amount be included in the bill.

Cordially, yours,

A. A. JONES,
First Assistant Secretary.

PATENTS TO KAMI SAM AND OTHER INDIANS IN THE STATE OF WASHINGTON (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 202.

The statement of Senator JONES, of Washington, respecting this item shows that the same was reported favorably to the House of Representatives, and on February 20 the House passed a bill containing this legislation. (See Cong. Rec., vol. 52, p. 3848.) Some question arising during the discussion of the provision by this committee, the department was called upon for further information, and on January 30 the following report, in addition to various others previously made, was received:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 30, 1915.

MY DEAR SENATOR: The department has received by your reference, for report, a copy of a proposed amendment to the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916 (H. R. 20150) confirming "as fee simple patents, without restrictions against alienation as of their dates of issuance," 12 patents heretofore issued to certain Indians covering homesteads in the State of Washington. In each of the cases cited fee simple patents have been issued by the Government.

This proposed amendment is identical with H. R. 19376 and S. 6671, upon which favorable reports have heretofore been made. These reports have been printed as House Report No. 1246, Sixty-third Congress, third session, copy inclosed. There is also inclosed copy of a supplemental report of January 5, 1915, on S. 6671.

This proposed legislation is desired in order to remove any doubt as to the right of these particular Indians to pass title, in view of certain decisions of the State courts to the effect that Indians are entitled to 25-year restricted trust patents under the Indian homestead act of July 4, 1884 (23 Stat. L., 96), instead of patents under the general homestead law as citizens of the United States.

In view of the situation presented, without going into the question of the validity of said patents, I can see no objection to the proposed amendment, and recommend that the item be incorporated in the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1916.

Cordially, yours,

A. A. JONES,
First Assistant Secretary.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs, United States Senate.

GRANTING LANDS TO STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY, WASHINGTON (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 231.

A reference to page 234 of the hearings of this committee will show that the legislation referred to passed the Senate in its substantial form January 17, 1913. (S. 5379, 62d Cong., 3d sess.) This provision is pending in a separate bill (S. 3130, 63d Cong.) and has the approval of the department.

GRANTING LANDS TO SCHOOL DISTRICT 56, KLICKITAT COUNTY, WASH. (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 206.

Reference to page 206 of the hearings will show that the legislation recommended is necessary, and the department has reported thereon favorably, under date of January 28, 1915. The provision is also pending as Senate bill 6859, Sixty-third Congress, third session. The approval of the department is set out as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 28, 1915.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt by your reference of January 20 of a copy of S. 6859, being a bill granting certain lands to school district No. 56, Klickitat County, Wash., and authorizing the issuance of patent therefor, and to report as follows:

The site of school district No. 56, Klickitat County, Wash., I find to be within that part of the Yakima Indian Reservation in Washington which was annexed to the reservation under the provisions of section 1 of the act of December 21, 1904 (33 Stat., 595–596). The act contained a provision that—

"Where valid rights have been acquired prior to March 5, 1904, to lands within said tract by bona fide settlers or purchasers under the public land laws, such rights shall not be abridged, and any claim of said Indians to these lands is hereby declared to be fully compensated for by the expenditure of money heretofore made for their benefit in the construction of irrigation works on the Yakima Indian Reservation."

By correspondence with the superintendent of the Yakima Indian Reservation and Mr. G. A. Jacroux, clerk of said school district No. 56, it is found that the school grounds in question are legally described as the northwest quarter of northwest quarter of northeast quarter of northeast quarter, section 11, township 6 north, range 14 east, western meridian, containing 2½ acres; that the school board desires to enlarge its facilities, and for that purpose finds it necessary to acquire title to the land. The act contains no provision for the sale of lands needed for public purposes or for the gratuitous patenting of any tract so needed.

The correspondence indicates that this 2½-acre site is not needed for any Government, administrative, or Indian use; that it is not claimed by any Indian; that the school was situated thereon prior to the time the land was annexed to the reservation; and that the acquisition of title by the school board is a matter of much importance to the community. It has been the policy of the Indian Office and the department to encourage the establishment of public-school districts within the borders of Indian reservations, in order that facilities may be afforded for the attendance of Indian and white children in the same school. For these reasons I am in accord with the action proposed in the bill.

Very truly, yours,

A. A. JONES,
First Assistant Secretary.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs,
United States Senate.

ALLOTMENTS TO TWO INDIANS IN THE DIMINISHED COLVILLE RESERVATION, WASH. (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 301.

This provision is pending in Sixty-third Congress, third session, as S. 4310, limiting the granting of 8 acres of land to Se-cum-ka-nullax, embraced in a homestead allotment of one Charles M. Hickerson, to which the Indian mentioned was entitled, but through an error of some sort was deprived. No appropriation is carried by this provision. A full justification appears on pages 301–304 of the committee hearings.

PURCHASE OF BUILDING MATERIAL, SEED, AND ANIMALS FOR POTTAWATOMIE BAND OF WISCONSIN INDIANS (REIMBURSABLE).

Senate hearings, page 246. Appropriation, $100,000.

These Indians have between $400,000 and $500,000 in the Treasury, and the money is to be reimbursed out of their proportionate share of the funds in the Treasury. House Document 830, Sixtieth Congress, first session, shows their proportionate share, as cited in the proposed amendment. This item is fully justified by Mr. Meritt on page 247 of the House hearings.

PAYMENT TO STOCKBRIDGE AND MUNSEE INDIANS (GRATUITY).

Senate hearings, pages 253 and 436. Appropriation, $90,000.

A reference to page 436 of the committee's hearings will show a justification for the item. This appropriation is recommended by the department. It provides for payment to certain Indians who were enrolled under the act of March 3, 1893, sums equal to the amounts paid to the other members of said tribe prior to the enrollment under said act.

SALE OF TIMBER ON LANDS IN BAD RIVER AND FOND DU LAC RESERVATIONS, WIS. (NO APPROPRIATION).

Senate hearings, page 762.

This is a committee amendment added at the request of the department, and for a full justification thereof reference is had to page 762 of this committee hearings. No appropriation is carried by this item, and its adoption is recommended.

ENLARGEMENT AND REPAIR LE CLAIR AND RIVERTON DITCHES, WIND RIVER RESERVATION, WYO. (REIMBURSABLE).

Senate hearings, page 515; discussion in House, volume 52, CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, pages 1359–1360.

Appropriated, $45,000.

This has the approval of the department, and the sum appropriated is needed in order to cooperate with the water users, both white and Indian, under the project, already constructed in part, and it will develop for irrigation several thousand acres of fertile soil beneficial to the Indians. The committee recommends the appropriation.

ACCOUNTING SYSTEM, INDIAN BUREAU (GRATUITY).

It will appear from the following quotation from the statement made to this committee (p. 295 of hearings) that this provision is necessary:

"The Office of Indian Affairs, whose volume of business runs to many million dollars each year, and whose trusteeship includes the custody and control of approximately a thousand million dollars' worth of property, is equipped with records so inadequate as not only to imperil the rights of those for whose benefit these funds and properties are held, but to leave the administrator himself without protection. An accounting system is maintained which is single entry in principle. The accounts are partial and inaccurate in many particulars. It is impossible with present methods for the officials of the Indian Office to keep in personal touch with the many varied transactions and the constantly changing status of property and funds."

The Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs has also made recommendations with respect to this appropriation and recommend the same.

[The conference report on the Indian appropriation bill appears on p. 5358 of to-day's proceedings.]

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate, not later than 9.30 a. m. this day, and without further debate after 9.30 a. m., proceed to vote on this conference report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The request having been made, the Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Hollis	O'Gorman	Shields
Bankhead	Hughes	Overman	Simmons
Brandegee	Johnson	Owen	Smith, Ga.
Bryan	Jones	Page	Smith, Md.
Catron	Kern	Penrose	Smoot
Chamberlain	Lane	Pittman	Sterling
Chilton	Lea, Tenn.	Poindexter	Swanson
Clapp	Lee, Md.	Pomerene	Thompson
Fall	Lewis	Ransdell	Vardaman
Fletcher	Lippitt	Reed	Walsh
Gore	Martine, N. J.	Robinson	Weeks
Gronna	Myers	Shafroth
Hardwick	Norris	Sheppard

The VICE PRESIDENT. Fifty Senators have answered to the roll call. A quorum is present. The Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST] has asked unanimous consent that at not later than 9 o'clock and 30 minutes this morning the Senate proceed to vote upon the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill. Is there objection?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I can not agree to a unanimous consent at this time.

Mr. ASHURST. Does the Senator from North Dakota object? I was unable to hear him.

Mr. GRONNA. I can not agree to giving unanimous consent at this time to vote.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator, then, objects?

Mr. GRONNA. I want to occupy the floor for half or three-quarters of an hour.

Mr. ASHURST. There is so much confusion that I did not hear whether or not the Senator objected. Does he object?

Mr. GRONNA. I do object.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator objects. Then I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to vote not later than 10 o'clock this day on the pending conference report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, as I said a moment ago, I can not agree to fix a time for voting. I do not want to make an agreement at this time until I have——

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator objects to that?

Mr. GRONNA. I do, until I have finished my remarks. I have some matters which I wish to present to the Senate. Perhaps when I get through, so far as I am concerned, I shall have no objection.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator from North Dakota having objected to the hour of 10 o'clock, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed not later than the hour of 10.30 a. m. this day to vote on the conference report.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. GRONNA. I shall object to unanimous consent for voting at a particular time.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator objects to voting at 10.30?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator says he objects to agreeing to vote at any time.

Mr. GRONNA. At any time.

Mr. ASHURST. Then, as a final request, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to vote on the conference report at 11 o'clock and 15 minutes a. m. this day.

Mr. GRONNA. Well, Mr. President, I have just said that I can not agree to anything of that kind just now. It may be that I shall have no objection to taking a vote at some particular hour, but I can not agree at the present time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. There is objection. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield to me?

Mr. GRONNA. I yield for a question.

Mr. ASHURST. Will the Senator from North Dakota himself state an hour or a moment at which he will agree to vote or at which he will not interpose any objection?

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, will the Senator from Arizona yield to me?

Mr. ASHURST. I have not the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from North Dakota has the floor.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator from North Dakota yield to me for a moment?

Mr. GRONNA. Yes.

Mr. GALLINGER. I want to inquire, having been absent from the Chamber for a short time, whether the agreement on this bill is a full agreement on the part of the conferees?

Mr. ASHURST. The conferees have had a full and free conference and have agreed, save and except the Senator from Minnesota [Mr. CLAPP] did not join in the report.

Mr. GALLINGER. But it is a full agreement?

Mr. ASHURST. It is a full agreement on all the disputed items.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I shall not detain the Senate very long.

CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD CONVEYANCES IN NEVADA.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Before the Senator from North Dakota begins, the Chair desires to lay before the Senate certain messages from the House of Representatives.

Mr. GRONNA. Of course, I yield for that purpose, Mr. President.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate the amendment of the House of Representatives to the bill (S. 5042) legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada, which was to strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

That all conveyances heretofore made on or before January 1, 1885, by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California, the Central Pacific Railroad Co., or the Central Pacific Railway Co., or the Contract & Finance Co., to the extent that the conveyances of the latter company were founded upon conveyances originally made by above-named railway companies, or either or any of them or their assigns, of or concerning land forming part of the right of way and now within the corporate town or city limits of the towns or cities of Elko, Carlin, Reno, Wells, and Winnemucca, in the State of Nevada, granted by the Government by the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, entitled "An act to aid the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," and all other acts of Congress amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto are hereby legalized, validated, and confirmed to the extent that the same would have been legal or valid if the land involved therein affected by this act had been held by the corporation making such conveyances under absolute or fee-simple title, subject to the conditions hereinafter stated.

SEC. 2. That this act shall have no validating force until the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California, or its assigns, shall file with the Secretary of the Interior an instrument in writing accepting its terms and provisions.

SEC. 3. That nothing herein contained shall have the effect to diminish said right of way to a less width than 50 feet on each side of the center of the main track of the railroad as now established and maintained.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, I move that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I simply desire to ask the Senator from Nevada what effect does the change made in the House amendment have upon the Senate bill which we passed some time ago?

Mr. PITTMAN. There is this difference: The bill which passed the Senate applied to all lands in the State of Nevada on a right of way on the same conditions. This limits it to five towns in Nevada.

Mr. SMOOT. It is a restriction, rather than an extension?

Mr. PITTMAN. It is a restriction.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Nevada that the Senate concur in the House amendment.

The motion was agreed to.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT FORSYTH, GA.

The bill (H. R. 20604) to construct a public building for a post office at the city of Forsyth, Ga., was read twice by its title.

Mr. HARDWICK. I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Georgia?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Georgia is not that the same matter that was put into the general deficiency bill?

Mr. HARDWICK. The Senate has already passed this proposition.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It was included in the general deficiency bill, was it not?

Mr. HARDWICK. Yes, sir.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Then what is the object of considering this bill?

Mr. HARDWICK. Because the House did not pass it in that form. It was lost in conference between the Houses.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. This is not included?

Mr. HARDWICK. No, sir; but the Senate has already passed this proposition in another form.

Mr. TOWNSEND. What is it?

Mr. HARDWICK. A public building for Forsyth, Ga.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

THE DALLES-CELILO CANAL.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 426) providing that the Congress of the United States shall participate in the celebration of the opening of The Dalles-Celilo Canal was read twice by its title.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the joint resolution. There is no money appropriated by it.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I should like to hear the title of the joint resolution read once more.

The SECRETARY again read the joint resolution by title.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Oregon to make a brief statement as to the purpose of the joint resolution.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, we are about to celebrate the opening of a great canal, which has been constructed by the Government, and this joint resolution simply provides for the representation of Congress at the celebration. It involves no expense to the Government.

Mr. GALLINGER. No appropriation is carried?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. No appropriation is carried.

Mr. GALLINGER. There is no objection on my part.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the joint resolution?

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

PEARL RIVER BRIDGE, LOUISIANA.

Mr. RANSDELL. Mr. President——

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Louisiana?

Mr. RANSDELL. Will the Senator permit me to make a report?

Mr. GRONNA. If I may do so without losing the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair has promised to protect the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. RANSDELL. I ask the Senator from North Dakota to permit me to submit a report on a bridge bill affecting Louisiana.

Mr. GRONNA. With pleasure.

Mr. SMOOT. Is it a House bill?

Mr. RANSDELL. It is. I report favorably without amendment from the Committee on Commerce the bill (H. R. 21562) to authorize the construction of a bridge across Pearl River, at or near the city of Bogalusa, La. I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

The bill was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

To the city of Durango, Colo., two condemned bronze or brass cannon or fieldpieces and a suitable outfit of cannon balls.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. I move that the Senate concur in the House amendments.

Mr. SMOOT. What bill is that?

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Senate bill 5495. The House has added some further items for condemned cannon.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Oregon that the Senate concur in the amendments of the House of Representatives.

The motion was agreed to.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

The Senate resumed the consideration of the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20150) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I was about to discuss some of the provisions in the bill pertaining to North Dakota. I understand the committee of conference disagreed to amendment numbered 96, appropriating $20,000 for a new dormitory for the Indian school at Bismarck, N. Dak.

Mr. President, the records will show that that school has the capacity of 60 pupils, and that 94 pupils have been enrolled. The Assistant Commissioner of Indian Affairs testified before the Committee on Indian Affairs, and recommended in the strongest terms the appropriation of $20,000, stating that it was necessary in order to provide adequate room for the pupils who are now attending that school. The committee of conference have seen fit to strike out that provision. I can not, of course, ask the chairman of the committee why it was stricken out. I find no fault with the able Senator from Arizona [Mr. ASHURST], the chairman of the committee. I am quite sure that he has made every effort possible to deal equitably with all these schools and that he tried to do justice to all the great irrigation projects as well; but, Mr. President, the records do show that that school is overcrowded.

I desire to refer to another item, namely, the appropriation of $15,000 for a new building for the school at Wahpeton, N. Dak., and to call attention to the fact that during the year 1913 91 Indian children applied for admission to that school and were denied the privilege of attending the school on account of a lack of room. The record gives the name of each and every one of those 91 pupils, and yet the committee of conference has seen fit to strike out that appropriation.

Mr. President, there is another amendment to which I want briefly to call attention, and that is amendment No. 98, which provides as follows:

To enable the Secretary of the Interior to redeem a mortgage on the allotment selection of Starr McGillis, a Turtle Mountain Chippewa Indian, described as the northwest quarter of section 34, township 164 north, range 70 west of the fifth principal meridian, North Dakota, $1,500, or so much thereof as may be necessary, the said sum to be reimbursed from the rentals of said allotment not to exceed 50 per cent of the amount of rentals received annually: Provided, That in the event a patent in fee shall be issued for this land before the United States shall be wholly reimbursed as herein provided, the amount remaining unpaid shall become a first lien on such allotment, and the fact of such lien shall be recited on the face of the patent in fee and the amount of the lien set forth thereon, and the receipt of the Secretary of the Interior, or of the officer, agent, or employee duly authorized by him for that purpose, for the payment of the amount of the mortgage, when duly recorded by the recorder of deeds in the county wherein the land is located, shall operate as a satisfaction of such lien.

Mr. President, that amendment was proposed in the interest of the Indians. No one could possibly benefit by this provision save and except the Indians themselves, and why the committee of conference has seen fit to refuse to aid these Indians to take care of their own property I can not understand. The provision is absolutely in the interest of the Indians. It was recommended by the Indian Bureau and urged by Mr. Meritt before our committee, who said that it was necessary to make such provision in order to protect the property of the Indians. Why that item should be rejected I can not understand.

Then there is an amendment to which I want briefly to call attention, namely, amendment numbered 100, permitting the Wahpeton and Sisseton Indians to take their claims to the Court of Claims. The amendment provides:

That all claims of whatsoever nature which the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands of Sioux Indians may have or claim to have against the United States shall be submitted to the Court of Claims, with the right to appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States by either party, for the amount due or claimed to be due said bands from the United States under any treaties or laws of Congress; and jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine all claims of said bands against the United States, and to enter judgment thereon. If any such question is submitted to said court it shall settle the rights, both legal and equitable, of said bands of Indians and the United States, notwithstanding lapse of time or statute of limitations. Such action in the Court of Claims shall be presented by a single petition, to be filed within one year after the passage of this act, making the United States a party defendant, which shall set forth all the facts on which the said bands of Indians base their claims for recovery; and the said petition may be verified by the agent or authorized attorney or attorneys of said bands, to be selected by said bands and employed under contract approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with the provisions of existing law, upon information or belief as to the existence of such facts, and no other statements or verifications shall be necessary. Official letters, papers, reports, and public records, or certified copies thereof, and oral testimony, depositions, and sworn statements by members of said bands of Indians may be used as evidence. Whatever moneys may be found due the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands of Indians under the provisions of this act, less attorney's fees, shall be placed to their credit in the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That the compensation to be paid the attorney or attorneys for the claimant Indians shall be determined by the Secretary of the Interior, but in any event shall not be greater than the amount named in the approved contract: Provided further, That such compensation shall in no event exceed $15,000.

On this particular item, Mr. President, I want to call the attention of the Senate to what the Department of the Interior has to say about it. I read from the hearings on the Indian appropriation bill for 1914, volume 1, page 737. The letter is addressed to Hon. WILLIAM J. STONE, chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the United States Senate. In order to save time I shall forego reading the letter and ask to have the full letter printed in the RECORD, together with my remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be so ordered.

The letter referred to is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 29, 1914.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I have received your letter of January 27, 1914, inclosing for report S. 113, a bill providing for a commission to settle certain claims between the United States Government and the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians, and the Sioux of the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Bands.

H. R. 5816 has also been referred for report. This bill also provides for a commission to settle the claims of the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians. There were two paragraphs added to the preamble in this bill which are not included in S. 113. These paragraphs read:

"Whereas the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Bands of Indians at the time the said treaty of 1851 was entered into had in fact no interest whatsoever in the said lands tributary to the Minnesota River as above described, for the reason that the said Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Bands had already relinquished to the Government of the United States all their right, title, and interest in and to all their lands by virtue of the treaties made and entered into on July 5, 1830, and October 15, 1836, including the said land located along the banks of the Minnesota River above described; and

"Whereas the Government of the United States has improperly credited sums of money to the said Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Tribes on account of the sale of the said lands as aforesaid, and has disbursed the said money so credited to the said Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Tribes, which in fact belonged to and was the property of the said Sisseton and Wahpeton Tribes."

From the preamble and the two paragraphs quoted above it appears that the bill has reference to the claims of the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians only against the United States on account of the change made by the Senate in the treaty of July 23, 1851 (10 Stat. L., 949), with them, and also because the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Indians were paid a sum of money under the treaty of August 5, 1851 (10 Stat. L., 954), the Sisseton and Wahpetons believing that they are entitled to this money.

The Sissetons and Wahpetons claim that the treaty of July 23, 1851, by which they ceded certain lands in Iowa and in the Territory of Minnesota and accepted lieu lands lying along the Minnesota River, was amended by the Senate without their assent or ratification, by striking out the third article thereof and adding a supplemental article by which they were paid for the lieu lands at the "grossly inadequate" rate of 30 cents per acre.

The facts shown by the records are that the United States, by the treaty of July 23, 1851, agreed in article 3 thereof to set aside "in part consideration of the foregoing cession" certain lieu lands therein described lying along the Minnesota River "whenever and in such manner as the President of the United States shall direct." Article 4 thereof provided that "in further and full consideration of said cession, the United States agree to pay the said Indians the sum of $1,665,000." The Senate amended the treaty by striking out the third article and adding the following:

"1. The United States do hereby stipulate to pay the Sioux Bands of Indians, parties to this treaty, at the rate of 10 cents per acre, for the lands included in the reservation provided for in the third article of the treaty as originally agreed upon. * * *

"2. It is further stipulated that the President be authorized, with the assent of the said bands of Indians, parties to this treaty, and as soon after they shall have given their assent to the foregoing article as may be convenient, to cause to be set apart by appropriate landmarks and boundaries such tracts of country without the limits of the cession made by the first (second) article of the treaty as may be satisfactory for their future occupancy and home: Provided, That the President may, by the consent of these Indians, vary the conditions aforesaid if deemed expedient."

The treaty of August 5, 1851, provided for the payment of $1,410,000 to the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Bands. The third article of this treaty, which was similar to the third article of the treaty of July 23, was also stricken out by the Senate and amended in the same manner as that treaty.

The said amendments made by the Senate were submitted to the said bands of Sioux, who gave their "free and voluntary assent thereto" September 8, 1852, and September 4, 1852. (10 Stat. L., 952 and 958.)

By the act of July 31, 1854 (10 Stat. L., 315–326), the President was authorized "to confirm to the Sioux of Minnesota, forever, the reserve on the Minnesota River now occupied by them, upon such conditions as he may deem just."

This was done, and the reservation so established continued to be occupied by these Indians until their treaties on June 18 and 19, 1858 (12 Stat. L., 1031–1037), whereby they ceded the part thereof lying north of the Minnesota River and retained the land south of said river. By Senate resolution of June 27, 1860 (12 Stat. L., 1042), these bands were paid 30 cents per acre for the ceded lands north of the river.

Following the so-called Minnesota massacre or outbreak of the said bands of Sioux in 1862 Congress, by the act of March 3, 1863 (Stat. L., 819), provided for their removal "beyond the limits of any State," and for the disposition of their remaining lands in Minnesota—the proceeds thereof to be applied for their benefit under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior in their new home.

By the act of February 16, 1863 (12 Stat. L., 652), Congress, as a punishment for the outbreak mentioned, declared:

"That all treaties heretofore made and entered into by the Sisseton, Wahpeton, Medawakanton, and Wahpakoota Bands of Sioux of Dakota Indians, or any of them, with the United States, are hereby declared to be abrogated and annulled, so far as said treaties or any of them purporting to impose any future obligation on the United States, and all lands and rights of occupancy within the State of Minnesota and all annuities and claims heretofore accrued to said Indians, or any of them, to be forfeited to the United States."

Under the provisions of the act of June 21, 1906 (34 Stat. L., 325–372), the claim of the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands for the restoration of the annuities so forfeited was heard by the Court of Claims, which rendered a judgment in their favor. By the act of May 30, 1908 (35 Stat. L., 478–514), Congress appropriated, to satisfy the judgment, the sum of $788,866.87, which amount was distributed among the claimants entitled thereto—a pro rata of $157.40.

As to the contention of the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians that they are entitled to the money paid to the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Indians, because these bands had theretofore given up all their rights by the treaties of July 5 (July 15), 1830 (7 Stat. L., 328), and October 15 (Nov. 30), 1836 (7 Stat. L., 527), attention is invited to the fact that the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians agreed, by the treaty of July 23, 1851, to cede all their interest in the lands therein described to the Government, and if the Government chose to treat with the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Indians for the cession of any interest which they believed they might have, it is not seen that the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands would have any claim against the Government for the amount so paid to the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota Bands. Moreover, the Sisseton, Wahpeton, Medawakanton, and Wahpakoota Bands of Indians were all parties to the treaty of July 15, 1830, and the Sisseton, Wahpakoota, and Upper Medawakanton Indians were parties to the treaty of November 30, 1836.

From the foregoing history of the various treaties with these bands of Sioux and from the records of this department it is believed that the claims set forth in the bill are without merit. The Indians, however, are of the opinion that they have a claim against the Government which should be adjusted.

In view of this fact, the department is of the opinion that the claims of these Indians, instead of being investigated and reported upon by a commission, should be submitted to the Court of Claims for adjustment, with the right of either party to appeal to the Supreme Court.

It is therefore recommended that the title of the bill be changed to read:

"A bill conferring jurisdiction on the Court of Claims to hear, determine, and render judgment in claims of the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands of Sioux Indians against the United States."

It is further recommended that the preamble be omitted and that the bill be further amended by striking out all after the enacting clause and inserting in lieu thereof the following:

"That all claims of whatsoever nature which the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands of Sioux Indians may have or claim to have against the United States shall be submitted to the Court of Claims, with the right of appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States, by either party for the amount due or claimed to be due said bands from the United States under any treaties or laws of Congress; and jurisdiction is hereby conferred upon the Court of Claims to hear and determine all claims of said bands against the United States and to enter judgment thereon. If any such question is submitted to said court, it shall settle the rights, both legal and equitable, of the said bands of Indians and the United States, notwithstanding lapse of time or statute of limitations. Such action in the Court of Claims shall be presented by a single petition, to be filed within two years after the passage of this act, making the United States a party defendant; shall set forth all the facts on which the said bands of Indians base their claims for recovery; and the said petition may be verified by the agent or authorized attorney or attorneys of said bands to be employed under contract approved by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with the provisions of existing law, upon information or belief as to the existence of such facts, and no other statements or verifications shall be necessary. Official letters, papers, reports, and public records, or certified copies thereof, may be used as evidence. Whatever moneys may be found due the Sisseton and Wahpeton Bands of Indians under the provisions of this act, less attorney's fees, shall be placed to their credit in the Treasury of the United States: Provided, That the compensation to be paid the attorney or attorneys for the claimant Indians shall be determined by the Court of Claims, but in any event shall not be greater than the amount named in the approved contract."

Should the bill be amended as herein recommended, I see no objection to its enactment by the Congress.

A draft of a bill as recommended above is inclosed.

Very truly, yours,

(Signed) A. A. JONES,
First Assistant Secretary.

Hon. WILLIAM J. STONE,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs, United States Senate.

Mr. GRONNA. I wish, however, to call attention to one particular paragraph in this letter. I read from page 738:

The Sissetons and Wahpetons claim that the treaty of July 23, 1851, by which they ceded certain lands in Iowa and in the Territory of Minnesota and accepted lieu lands lying along the Minnesota River, was amended by the Senate without their assent or ratification, by striking out the third article thereof and adding a supplemental article by which they were paid for the lieu lands at the "grossly inadequate" rate of 30 cents per acre.

Mr. President, I wish to call the attention of the Senate to that paragraph. The Indian lands along that river were sold at the enormous price of 30 cents an acre. They were not allowed, according to the claims of the Indians, more than one-half of the amount of land that they were really entitled to, and their lands netted them 30 cents per acre. Yet Senators ask me why I am not satisfied with having that very item rejected or thrown out of this very bill. All that these Indians asked was to take their case to the Court of Claims and there have it adjudicated. It seems to me it is only a fair request.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota permit me to make a request for printing in the RECORD?

Mr. GRONNA. I shall be through in a very few minutes, Mr. President. I dislike to refuse to yield, but I shall not occupy the floor for more than a few minutes.

Mr. JONES. Of course I do not like to break into the continuity of the Senator's remarks.

Mr. OVERMAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me to enable me to ask a question of the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs?

Mr. GRONNA. If I can yield, of course, without losing the floor.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair will protect the rights of the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. OVERMAN. I desire to ask the chairman if there is any probability at all of getting this bill through at this session?

Mr. ASHURST. Does the Senator mean the Indian appropriation bill?

Mr. OVERMAN. Yes.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, the Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN] asks me what I think as to the probability of the passage of the Indian appropriation bill. I regret to state that in my judgment the chances are not favorable for the passage of the bill. The Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA], by reason of the fact that we did not make an appropriation for a certain dormitory, is conducting a filibuster which will probably defeat this bill. My esteemed friend, the Senator from North Dakota, said, however, that if we could compose the differences on the Choctaw payment he would be glad to withdraw his objection.

I did not know before that one ASLE J. GRONNA knew more about Oklahoma than one TOM P. GORE and one ROBERT L. OWEN. The Senator from North Dakota possibly may know more about Oklahoma than the Oklahoma Senators do, but I doubt it. My judgment is that the Senator from North Dakota will defeat this bill.

I do not believe the Indian appropriation bill at this time has any chance to survive, but nevertheless I should like to ask that at 10 o'clock a. m. this day the Senate vote on the conference report. I want to ask if there is an objection to that?

Mr. TOWNSEND. That would necessitate calling the roll again.

Mr. ASHURST. No, no.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I shall try to be through my speech by 10 o'clock. I can not yield just now, and I can not agree to unanimous consent at this time.

Mr. ASHURST. The Senator objects? Very well.

Mr. GRONNA. I do not want to hold the floor any longer than 10 o'clock.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Will the Senator yield for a moment for a suggestion? Would not the Senator agree at this time to a motion to disagree to the House amendments, and send the bill back for another conference, to see what can be brought about?

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, if the Senators had honored me with their presence this evening, I tried to explain the situation for two hours and a half, but it was an impossibility for me to reach them and tell them what I desired to tell them when they were not in the Chamber. It is true, as the Senator from Arizona has said, that I have called attention to a few items in this appropriation bill pertaining to North Dakota.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President——

Mr. GRONNA. I have said to the Senator from Arizona, the chairman of the committee, that I should not object to the passage of this bill because of anything that has been stricken out, so far as it affected North Dakota, and he stated it correctly.

Mr. ROBINSON. Mr. President, will the Senator yield to me for an inquiry?

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from North Dakota yield to the Senator from Arkansas?

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; I shall be glad to yield to the Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. ROBINSON. I should like to ask the Senator to state, if he has no objection to doing so, whether in his opinion it is probable that the Indian appropriation bill will be passed.

Mr. GRONNA. Well, Mr. President, when I get through with my remarks at 10 o'clock, so far as I personally am concerned, I shall make no objection.

Mr. ROBINSON. I should like to have the Senator be frank with me, because I think the Senator knows whether the bill, under the circumstances that exist now, can be passed; and if it is not to be passed I think we should agree to the joint resolution that has been presented by the House of Representatives, and not compel an extra session of Congress, such as would result unless some provision is made for carrying on the work of the Indian Bureau.

Mr. GRONNA. I agree with my good friend the Senator from Arkansas, but I shall be through by 10 o'clock.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President——

Mr. ROBINSON. Just a moment, Mr. President. The point I am trying to make is this: There is a great deal of undisposed of and important business to come before the Senate during the brief two hours remaining of this session, and it is a well recognized fact that the Indian appropriation bill can not be passed until some agreement can be reached concerning it. The Senator from North Dakota is too practical and too fair to insist upon the defeat of other important legislation. He does know, in my opinion, whether or not this bill is going to be passed; and I repeat the statement that if the bill is not to be passed we ought to abandon what in my opinion is an absurd proceeding here, and go on with the business of the Senate.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, the Senator must permit me to answer him.

Mr. ROBINSON. Certainly.

Mr. GRONNA. I have said over and over again that so far as I am personally concerned I shall not object to the passage of this bill. I shall leave the floor at 10 o'clock; but I want to say, in reply to what my good friend the Senator from Arizona has said, that so far as the post-office bill is concerned I shall vote for that bill without any amendment whatever just as soon as it is brought into this body. I do not know that there is any opposition to the post-office bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair feels that in the interest of the economy of time the Chair has a right to inquire whether, when the Senator from North Dakota takes his seat there is any other Senator who proposes to talk upon the bill?

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, I shall ask the recognition of the Chair for about 5 or 10 minutes.

Mr. LANE. Mr. President, I wish to make some remarks.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Then the Senate is now in possession of the fact that already two Senators have announced that they propose to follow the Senator from North Dakota, who says he will conclude by 10 o'clock.

Mr. GRONNA. Yes; that is my intention.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, will the Senator from North Dakota yield to me for a moment?

Mr. GRONNA. I will yield for a question. I do not think my entire time should be taken up with interruptions, because I have stated that I will be through in a very few moments.

Mr. STONE. I am not going to make an appeal to the Senator. If he can not comprehend the situation, it is useless to talk. The bill is dead. That is conceded, and that is what the Senator wishes; but there are other things that are not dead, and we might go on to those. I want, if we can, to have an executive session.

Mr. GRONNA. Mr. President, I did not yield for a lecture. I yielded for a question. I want to say to the Senator from Missouri that when I took the floor I said to the Members of this body that there were one hundred and seventy-odd amendments to this bill, and if they would let the friends of the so-called La Follette amendment amend six of them—and I believe finally we said that if you would let us amend one of them—we would perhaps be satisfied and let this bill pass. I want to say to this body that, so far as the items affecting North Dakota are concerned, the Senator from Arizona quoted me correctly. I said to him that I should make no objection to the passage of the bill, so far as the North Dakota items were concerned, although I believed it was a mistake to take them out of the bill; but there are items in this bill that, in my judgment, will result in great injustice to the Indians if the bill is passed. There are items in this bill that are fundamental questions; and while I have not found any fault with the conferees, or with the men who differ with me, I have assumed that I have a right to criticize the bill according to my own convictions and according to my own opinion, and I have done it, I believe, in a parliamentary way. I shall leave to those who have honored me with their presence the decision as to whether I have discussed this bill or whether I have discussed some other measure.

Mr. President, I want to say to this body that I am deeply interested in the affairs of the Indians of this country. I have as much interest in the Indians of this country, I believe, as any other Senator on the floor, although I do not claim that I have any more. But, Mr. President, the amendment proposed by the Senator from Wisconsin was passed by this body by a vote of 33 to 13. The Senate has said that that amendment shall be incorporated into the provisions of this bill. The Senator from Arizona and every member of that committee knows that it was disclosed in the committee room that the Indians of Oklahoma are being charged scandalous rates of interest, usurious rates of interest, of from 40 to 1,000 per cent.

Mr. ASHURST. And if the Senator defeats this bill, he allows those high rates to go on and on.

Mr. GRONNA. The minimum rate charged in one of those localities was 40 per cent. That is the admitted testimony by the Indian agent. I believe the agent's name was Mr. Carroll.

I believe the time has come when we, as guardians of the Indian's property, should protect it. I feel that I would not be doing my duty unless I called attention to the fact that the Indian of this country has been robbed by the white man. The Indian's money has been invested in great projects not for the benefit of the Indian alone but for the benefit of the white man. The Indian's money has been extravagantly expended by the white man in the administration of his affairs; and I believe that the people of this great country will indorse the position I have taken when I say that the time has come when something more than promises should be given the Indians of the United States.

Mr. President, I am sorry that I have to differ with my good friends on this committee. I do not think anyone values the friendship and the association of the distinguished Senator from Arizona and other Senators who are members of this committee more than I. I know that they have done what they believed was right and honest, but I believe I may be pardoned for saying that I thought it was my duty to call attention to certain facts and certain conditions which exist and which affect most vitally the Indians of this country.

Mr. President, I shall not further delay the Senate. I yield the floor.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President, the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA] is, of course, in good faith. We all realize that. The Senator is sincere in whatever he says or does here in this body. But I do not think he caught fully the statement of the chairman of the committee with reference to the effect of his action upon the usurious rates of which he has spoken. It is true that Capt. Carroll, the agent of the Osage Indians, did state that outrageous interest rates were charged the Indians who were deriving revenue from the oil leases. It is true he did state that 40 and 50 per cent was being charged. It is true he stated further that there was no provision of law by which that could be stopped, and it is equally true that the committee adopted a provision by which it could be stopped, and that was in this bill, and was for the first time in this bill which the Senator is defeating.

Mr. GRONNA. May I ask the Senator a question?

Mr. FALL. And that provision was not in disagreement. It was agreed to by the House conferees and embraced in the conference report, and it was the only protection they had.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Does the Senator from New Mexico yield to the Senator from North Dakota?

Mr. FALL. I did not interrupt the Senator, and the Senator has occupied time. I have said that I would occupy only about five minutes, and I will. I want to say to Senators if you had done as I have done for the last three nights, stayed here every moment and occupied places on this floor, three hours would not have been lost in attempting to get a quorum this morning. This whole plan is simply the provision to place other Indians on the Choctaw and Chickasaw rolls. There is to be printed in this RECORD the report of Inspector McLaughlin. The whole history of this attempt if known would prove exceedingly interesting. I want to call attention to two or three statements contained in Inspector McLaughlin's official report, which will appear in the record of our proceedings to-morrow.

A gentleman who appeared before the Committee on Indian Affairs and insisted upon arguing against the provision distributing this per capita payment, and insisted upon having placed in the bill a proviso with reference to it, opening the Choctaw and Chickasaw rolls, was Mr. Ballinger. His partner is Mr. Lee, of the firm of Lee & Ballinger two years ago. I do not know what the firm name is now. I have before me, and there is in the RECORD, a circular sent out by Mr. Lee, then of the firm of Lee & Ballinger, selling shares in the fee in this case and making certain statements to the public with reference to the value of the shares and how he proposed to make every man who took an interest in his fee rich, stating that his attempt was to raise $16,000.

Mr. President, here is an extract from the circular of Lee & Ballinger, or Mr. Lee, in undertaking to finance his portion of this fee, and I call the Senator's attention to it:

It is our purpose to continue the fight for our clients until definite action is taken by Congress. We have been strong enough at all times to prevent a final settlement and distribution of the property. The opposition now realize that in order to get their own shares of the property they must consent to legislation giving our clients their rights. I have spent a great deal of money and have given all of my time since March 4, 1907, in the work of securing justice for our clients, and I shall continue to do so until some final action is taken by Congress.

As the lands have all either been allotted or ordered to be sold, the persons added to the rolls will have to take their share of the estate in cash, and it has been tentatively agreed that each person so enrolled is to receive $3,000 in cash.

In addition to the above cases, we represent about 10,000 people whose records do not conclusively show that they are entitled to share in the distribution of the property, but if Congress permits proof to be made in these cases, I estimate that at least 3,000 of them will be good. Our fee in these cases is 40 per cent—and in the event of success in the 3,000 cases indicated my individual fee would approximate $2,065,911.

That is what is behind this movement in opening the Choctaw rolls and placing others upon it.

I do not think I care to say anything more, Mr. President. I am ready to let the record stand.

Mr. STONE obtained the floor.

Mr. OVERMAN. Will the Senator yield to me?

Mr. STONE. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. OVERMAN. As stated by the chairman of the committee, and as is generally admitted on the floor of the Senate, it is impossible to pass this appropriation bill for the Indians. I therefore ask the Chair to lay before the Senate a joint resolution from the House, and I am directed by the Committee on Appropriations to report it favorably.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair lays before the Senate a joint resolution from the House of Representatives, which will be read at length.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 441) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That all appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, which shall remain unprovided for on June 30, 1915, are continued and made available for and during the fiscal year 1916 to the same extent, in detail, and under the same conditions, restrictions, and limitations for the fiscal year 1916 as the same were provided for on account of the fiscal year 1915 in the Indian appropriation act for that fiscal year. For all of such purposes a sufficient sum is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, or out of funds to the credit of Indians as the same were respectively provided in the Indian appropriation act for the fiscal year 1915: Provided, That the appropriations from the Treasury of the United States or from Indian funds shall not exceed in the aggregate the amounts of such appropriations for the fiscal year 1915: Provided further, That this joint resolution shall not be construed as providing for or authorizing the duplication of any special payment or for the execution of any purpose provided for in said appropriation act that was intended to be paid only once or done solely on account of the fiscal year 1915: Provided further, That appropriations continued hereunder shall be available for the maintenance, repair, and operation of motor-propelled and horse-drawn passenger-carrying vehicles in the same manner as appropriations were available for those purposes during the fiscal year 1915.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. In the Indian appropriation act of last year several appropriations were made for irrigation projects. Is it the understanding of the Senator from North Carolina that those appropriations would be carried forward, the same amount, for the coming fiscal year?

Mr. OVERMAN. I think the appropriation is just like in the last bill. That is my understanding.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Would that be so irrespective of the question whether or not the amounts were necessary?

Mr. OVERMAN. The exception is stated in the joint resolution. If he desires to have it read he can see.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Very well.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask that the joint resolution be put on its passage.

The joint resolution was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. OVERMAN. I now inquire of the chairman of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads the condition of the Post Office appropriation bill?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President, we had hoped up to this morning that we might yet be able to pass the Post Office appropriation bill. A great deal of work and study have been bestowed upon it. It is perhaps the largest single appropriation bill that has ever been presented to Congress since the Civil War, carrying approximately $325,000,000. I may say, that the Post Office Department in its activities is growing and extending itself every year. The rural service and other activities have been added to it until it extends to almost every household in the country.

While I deeply regret, as my associates on the committee do, that the bill can not be passed at the present session of Congress, we must yield with the very best grace that we can command. Frankness and candor compel me to say that I do not believe in the closing hours of this session the bill can be passed.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask the Chair to lay before the Senate the joint resolution from the House of Representatives and that it be read at length.

The joint resolution (H. J. Res. 440) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes, was read the first time by its title and the second time at length, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That all appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department which shall remain unprovided for on June 30, 1915, are continued and made available for and during the fiscal year 1916 to the same extent, in detail, and under the same conditions, restrictions, and limitations for the fiscal year 1916 as the same were provided for on account of the fiscal year 1915 in the Post Office appropriation act for that fiscal year. For all of such purposes a sufficient sum is appropriated in conformity with the act of July 2, 1836, not to exceed in the aggregate the amount appropriated for the fiscal year 1915: Provided, That if the revenues of the Post Office Department shall be insufficient to meet the appropriations made by this joint resolution, a sum equal to such deficiency of the revenues of said department is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to supply said deficiencies in the revenues for the Post Office Department for the year ending June 30, 1916, and the sum needed may be advanced to the Post Office Department upon requisition of the Postmaster General: Provided further, That this joint resolution shall not be construed as providing for or authorizing the duplication of any special payment or for the execution of any purpose provided for in said appropriation act that was intended to be paid only once or done solely on account of the fiscal year 1915: And provided further, That letter carriers assigned to collection service, who were promoted to the higher grades in accordance with the classification act, approved March 2, 1907, and whose salaries have been reduced during the past year, through no delinquency or charges of misconduct on their part, shall be restored to their former grades: Provided also, That on and after July 1, 1915, the compensation of each rural letter carrier for serving a rural route of 24 miles and over, six days in the week, shall be $1,200 per annum, payable monthly; on routes 22 miles and less than 24 miles, $1,152; on routes 20 miles and less than 22 miles, $1,080; on routes 18 miles and less than 20 miles, $960; on routes 16 miles and less than 18 miles, $840; on routes 14 miles and less than 16 miles, $720; on routes 12 miles and less than 14 miles, $672; on routes 10 miles and less than 12 miles, $624; on routes 8 miles and less than 10 miles, $576; on routes 6 miles and less than 8 miles, $528; on routes 4 miles and less than 6 miles, $480. A rural letter carrier serving one triweekly route shall be paid on the basis for a route one-half the length of the route served by him, and a carrier serving two triweekly routes shall be paid on the basis for a route one-half of the combined length of the two routes: Provided, That in the discretion of the Postmaster General, the pay of carriers who furnish and maintain their own motor vehicles and who serve routes not less than 50 miles in length may be fixed at not exceeding $1,800 per annum.

Mr. OVERMAN. I ask for the present consideration of the joint resolution.

Mr. TOWNSEND. Mr. President, I am not going to make any objection, because I assume that certain Senators want to make some speeches and want to confirm some postmasters, and one thing and another, and therefore we can not have time to consider a $325,000,000 bill to which a great deal of time has been devoted. This proposition of passing over bills that have been passed upon in committees is, in my judgment, not fair to the Senate or to the country. I do not like it. I do not know that it can be stopped.

I suppose we have got to the point where it is necessary for us to turn back to the department the expenditure of money as practically they may see fit to expend it, and that the Senate is helpless to pass these great supply bills, because they are put off until the last minute and are then pressed here in a hurry so that they can not receive consideration.

Mr. President, I simply desire to protest against this method of legislation. I would rather consider this bill now than to listen to speeches or to spend the time in confirming postmasters.

There being no objection, the joint resolution was considered as in Committee of the Whole.

The joint resolution was reported to the Senate without amendment, ordered to a third reading, read the third time, and passed.

"THE REWARD OF THE SUPERANNUATE."

Mr. STONE obtained the floor.

Mr. BANKHEAD. Mr. President——

Mr. STONE. I yield to the Senator from Alabama.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I hold in my hand a letter from Assistant Postmaster General Roper. It is very short, and I desire to have it read.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT,
FIRST ASSISTANT POSTMASTER GENERAL,
Washington, March 1, 1915.

HON. JOHN H. BANKHEAD,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR BANKHEAD: In compliance with your request for my views on the subject of superannuation and retirement in the civil service, I wish to advise you that I have given this subject a great deal of consideration since I have been connected with the Post Office Service, and referred to the matter in my annual report for 1914, on page 21. Your inquiry, however, affords me an opportunity to state these views at length and to support them more fully, and accordingly I submit the inclosed article, entitled "The reward of the superannuate."

Very sincerely, DANIEL C. ROPER.

Mr. BANKHEAD. I send to the Secretary's desk the article referred to in the letter just read. I do not desire to have the article read, but I should like to have it printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. It will be so ordered, in the absence of objection. The Chair hears none.

The article referred to is as follows:

THE REWARD OF THE SUPERANNUATE.

The productive period of every man's life is sandwiched between infancy and old age. In the two unproductive stages he is not capable of providing for his own wants. The natural ties of parentage generally prevent the helpless infant from becoming a charge upon the State, but the superannuate presents a definite and unsolved problem.

The problem of the superannuate can not be dismissed with the assertion that every man should provide for his own old age by laying aside a portion of his income during his productive years. Certainly all who can should do this. Many who could do so do not, and are culpable for that reason. There is a good deal of inertia in the body of wants which a family regards as necessities. It is hard to relegate meat and millinery to the list of luxuries. And so the margin of saving has gone glimmering.

Thus it has come to be a common thing for the wage earner to enter upon the twilight borderland of old age with no provision made for the necessities of life. Those for whom he has in his stalwart years provided have in their turn taken on themselves natural responsibilities. Rather than seek their aid and add to their already heavy burdens, he turns with desperate resolution to the task fast slipping from his failing grasp and vision. Who does not honor him and wish him well? But what shall we do with him? Other gregarious animals destroy their superannuates, as Dr. Osler has suggested that we, too, should do. But men, it is said, are humane.

Let us see what our humanity amounts to in the case of the superannuated human worker. First, we neglect him. He stumbles on, half blind and feeble. He drinks the cup of bitterness and sorrow. Then he becomes a charge upon an unwilling employer or upon an equally unwilling neighbor or relative. Upon these he has no just claim, and no one appreciates that fact more keenly than he. Upon whom, then, has he a claim for food and raiment? Upon the humanity of society, which bids him live, and of individuals, upon himself alone.

Fortunately, many have looked forward and provided during their years of vigor for the needs of the declining period of life. But countless thousands have been unable or unwilling to do so. It is these—it is the case of the man who, for whatever reason, has arrived at the age of incapacity with no means of support—that we are considering. It is fruitless in his case to urge the claim against himself. What he has produced he has consumed or permitted others to consume. He has nothing now but the memory of wants satisfied. He can produce no more. It is useless, often unjust, to condemn him, and heartless to make him suffer, even as an example to the thriftless. The problem that he presents may constitute an argument for State insurance and compulsory savings in recognition of the superannuate's claim against himself. This remedy may be applied to those who are thoughtlessly following in his footsteps, but it can not be applied to the man who is already superannuated.

Inevitably recourse must be had for his support to his claim against society, which demands, against all the economics in the matter, that the superannuate shall continue to live. In every community this claim, as a matter of fact, is recognized, grudgingly and ungraciously, perhaps, but still recognized, in the form of State and private charities to the old. With excellent logic some maintain that all these heterogeneous charities should be consolidated into the payment of indiscriminate old-age pensions by the State. In this way there would be imposed upon society as a whole the anticipated cost of superannuation in the case of each individual, and the burden would be distributed according to the established system of taxation.

At present the claim of the superannuate is strongly urged against his immediate employer. Propinquity governs, as with the beggar, who accosts the first well-dressed passer-by. Economically the employee has been most closely related to his employer, and both the employee and the community are best satisfied if that relationship is continued after it has ceased to be economic and has become philanthropic. Some large employers have cheerfully accepted this situation and established the definite policy of supporting their superannuated employees.

For many years a more or less active propaganda has been directed toward having the Federal Government establish a similar system of pensions for its army of civil-service employees. The public, however, has remained generally apathetic to this appeal. The opinion is commonly expressed that there is no reason for singling out the superannuated Government clerk for consideration in advance of privately employed workers. Nevertheless it may readily be shown that circumstances peculiar to the problem of superannuation in the Government service render its solution especially urgent in the interest not only of the employee but also of the Government itself, and a solution is not possible until a popular understanding of the problem is reached.

In 1912 President Taft's Commission on Economy and Efficiency compiled an elaborate report on the subject of the retirement of superannuated employees in the civil service, which was duly submitted to Congress. The report concludes with the recommendation that a law be passed embodying the following essential features:

1. That an employee now in the service who is 70 years of age be retired, and be paid by the United States an annuity equal to one-half of his average annual pay for the past five years, but no such annuity to exceed $600.

2. That an employee now under 70 years of age be retired when he reaches that age and be paid an annuity equal to one-half of his average annual pay for the entire period of service, but no such annuity to exceed $600: Provided, That there shall be deducted from the pay of such employee until he reaches 70 years an amount which, with interest at 4 per cent, compounded annually, will purchase such annuity, but no monthly deduction shall exceed 8 per cent of the monthly pay.

3. That a person first employed after the retirement plan is put into operation shall provide for the entire cost of his retirement allowance (which shall be an annuity of one-half of his average annual pay during his entire service, but no annuity to exceed $600), by deductions from his current pay of such amounts as may be required, with interest at 4 per cent, compounded annually, to pay his annuity.

4. That any person separated from the service before the age of 60 shall receive the amount of deductions made from his pay, with 4 per cent interest, compounded annually; after the age of 60 and before reaching 70 he shall receive the amount with interest in 10 annual installments, unless the total amount is less than $600, in which case the amount shall be paid at once. In case of death at any time before reaching 70, the amount of deductions, with interest, shall be paid to his legal representatives. In case of death after 70 the balance remaining to his credit over and above the sums paid to him in annuities shall be paid to his legal representatives.

5. That the Secretary of the Treasury shall invest the deductions and accrued interest thereon in bonds of the United States, States, and municipalities; and the United States shall appropriate a sum sufficient to assure to employees interest at 4 per cent per annum, compounded annually, on all deductions from salaries.

This is the plan proposed by the commission. Neither the country as a whole nor any section of the country or class of its citizens is as yet genuinely interested in the passage of such legislation. Bills innumerable have been introduced in Congress, but they will not be passed until the people have definitely registered their indorsement.

The people are the employers of the Government clerk. Congress is the mouthpiece of the people. So long as the people are indifferent to the need for civil pensions Congress will remain silent on the subject; and so long as Congress remains silent the superannuated Government clerk has no one at hand to whom in his extremity he can address his appeal except the officers of the executive branch of the Government, which, unlike Congress, is not the mouthpiece of the people but merely an agent for the performance of well defined administrative duties.

In contravention of his oath of office many a Federal officer has closed his eyes to the clear direction of the law and has responded to this appeal. How general this irregular practice has become may be judged from the casual reference to it by President Taft in the following sentence:

"The present practice of retaining such (superannuated) employees on the rolls and, as they grow older, expecting from them a smaller quantity and lower grade of work, can not continue indefinitely without seriously impairing the efficiency of the entire service and imposing upon the Government a cost that will be in excess of the expense to be incurred by the adoption of a reasonable plan for remedying existing conditions."

It is indeed strange to find a President of the United States, the highest executive, postulating a political proposition with the observation that his subordinate executive officers are violating a part of the law which they are sworn to uphold, and that he is aware of it. The argument of the Economy and Efficiency Commission follows along this line and is to that extent disingenuous. The commission urges that superannuation is a great financial burden to the Government and that it will be a constantly increasing burden. This being asserted, the way is made clear by main strength for an argument designed to show that the cost of the proposed plan of retirement bears a certain relation to the alleged necessary cost of superannuation at present—is in fact slightly more, but not much more. Now this seems a remarkable argument to have been made by the commission and indorsed by the President.

No doubt the Government suffers some measure of loss due to the retention in office of superannuated employees. But on being apprised of this condition it is the duty of executive officers to seek for a remedy first in existing law, even while proposing, if they will, some amendment of the law.

The civil-service law does not provide for permanency of tenure. On the contrary it specifically provides for the removal of incompetent employees. The way is clear under the law to remove summarily all employees who on account of advanced years or other causes are not rendering an adequate "quid pro quo" for their salaries. The law does not provide that length of service shall establish any claim on the part of the employee or any obligation on the part of the Government that is not effaced by the payment of the concurrent salary. Any substantial recognition of such a claim or obligation in addition to the payment of salary would seem to be a pure gratuity.

The ideal condition would be one under which the salaries paid by the Government would be sufficiently in excess of the cost of the normal standards of living for each grade to enable every employee to set aside and save amounts that would render him independent in his old age, and under which he would so set aside and accumulate the margin of his salary. But this condition does not exist. Either the salaries paid generally leave no margins over the cost of living, as some contend, or Government employees as a class lack thrift and the ability to save, as others say. Each of these alleged causes is perhaps a part of the real cause. Of the result there is no question. Employees of the Government very generally reach old age dependent entirely on the salaries attached to the positions that they are no longer capable of filling. Under the law they should be discharged, but the fact is that many of them are not discharged. The result is that tenure of office in the Government service does not now depend on the law or on the uniform needs of the service, but upon the varying temperaments of supervisory officers and their varying conceptions of their public duty. Especially is this true in the Postal Service, because of the wide discretion accorded to postmasters in the conduct of their offices.

It is said that the loss sustained by the Government on account of superannuation aggregates many millions annually. A careful canvass of first and second class post offices seems to indicate that this loss is probably less proportionately in the Postal Service than elsewhere. Alertness, dexterity, quickness of hand and eye, and other qualities of youth are peculiarly required for the performance of post-office work and tend of themselves to reduce superannuation in this service.

There are 80,000 classified civil-service employees, exclusive of rural carriers, at the 2,600 largest post offices in this country. Of these 80,000 employees, 2,508 are above 60 years of age. Of this number, 1,170, or nearly half, are between the ages of 60 and 65 years. Only 127 are over 75 years of age. There are isolated instances of men of advanced years performing active service. One assistant postmaster with a salary of $900 is 79 years of age. One city letter carrier is 89. Two post-office clerks and two laborers are each 87.

In considering these figures it should be borne in mind that the actual age of superannuation may vary with individuals. Few nonagenarians, or even octogenarians, are capable of performing active postal service; but some no doubt are capable, especially in lines of work to which they have become accustomed by a lifetime routine. For this reason the figures here set forth indicate an extremely small percentage of superannuation in the Postal Service—probably not in excess of 1 per cent. But however small the percentage may now be, it involves a feature of administration which should be dealt with in accordance with the wishes of the people as expressed in the laws enacted by Congress. Under existing law the only proper course for the department and for the postmasters, which is also the most humane and just course, is to put on notice all employees that they will be continued in office only so long as they are capable of earning the salaries paid them, and that salaries will be scaled and readjusted from time to time to meet the declining efficiency and earning power of the clerks and carriers.

This course, which is necessary under the law, may seem drastic and severe. It is not, however, without intrinsic merit. Once it is firmly established and universally applied all doubt will be removed from the minds of civil-service employees as to their expectancy of tenure in office. All will be stimulated to put forth their best efforts and to save. In every salary paid by the Government there is a possible margin of saving. To realize it many must reduce their standards of living. In many instances this will be painful and pathetic to consider; but it should be done. No matter what the amount of the salary is, the saving against old age and misfortune should come out of it first. It may be very desirable that the Government be served by men who are well clothed and fed and are able to support their families in some degree of comfort, but it is more desirable that the Government be served by men who are saving money.

It is clear that the people, through Congress, are responsible wholly for the scale of salaries paid to civil-service employees and for the lack of pension legislation. In these matters administrative officers have no discretion. These officers may, however, bring the whole matter directly and forcibly to the attention of Congress by obeying and enforcing the laws affecting superannuated employees. It is very desirable that the question of civil-service retirement be settled as soon as possible, and settled to the best interest of the employees and of the Government.

The institution of the classified civil service under which tenure of office depends on merit and not on political complexion is not of long standing, and as a consequence the problem arising from the superannuation of employees has only in recent years become acute. The problem has lately received much attention at the hands of Congress and of officers in the executive departments, but no legislation has resulted. Congress has seemed to be averse to entering upon any scheme of civil pensions, and it is believed by many that such a course would be fraught with difficulties and dangers both to the Government and to the employees. The consideration of retirement legislation has also been retarded by the multiplicity of plans proposed. Undoubtedly the Government suffers loss of efficiency due to the unlawful retention of superannuated employees. Many postmasters and other supervisory officers are disposed for humanitarian reasons to continue aged and incapacitated clerks in office without proper readjustment of their salaries long after their usefulness and value has begun to wane. Not only are the salaries of these clerks frequently an unwarranted expenditure of public funds under the law, but the promotions of deserving younger clerks are withheld and the incentive for the maximum endeavor on their part is reduced.

A remedy for superannuation in the Government service that suggests itself first, because of its apparent directness and simplicity, is the straight pension plan. This proposal is indorsed by many of the employees because it seems to them a definite increase in their compensations. Some public men have indorsed it because they believe the cost to be less than the present loss due to superannuation in the service. But it is noticeable that this plan is usually most approved by those whose consideration of it has been less thorough and is least approved by those who have given it more careful study. In the long run the straight pension has the effect of retarding the increase in the general salary scale for pensionable places, and that eventually as the result of this tendency employees pay many times over for their pensions. For this reason it is said that civil pensions in England are now unpopular with the employees holding the pensionable places.

There is no benefit from the straight pension plan except to the long lived, and this works a hardship to those who do not remain in the service until the age of retirement and to the families of those who die in the service. It is probable that there would be an irresistible tendency toward covering into the pension roll first the immediate and then the more remote dependent of deceased civil-service employees. The possibilities of favoritism and political corruption are apparent. The whole idea of straight pensions, involving, as it does, continual, direct, and uncertain drafts on the Public Treasury, is abhorrent to the general public and not likely ever to be approved by Congress.

In pursuing this inquiry into the question of superannuation the conclusion should quickly be reached that any feasible pension plan must be based at least partly on contributions from the persons to be pensioned. Moreover, the contributions should be compulsory. The object primarily sought is the relief of the Government from loss and inefficiency due to superannuation and only secondarily the relief of the employees concerned. A system of voluntary contributions would have the reverse viewpoint.

Of compulsory contributory plans there are two: First, those involving the savings idea, under which the contributions of each employee are kept intact for him and applied to a fund for his own retirement; second, those involving the mutual idea, under which all contributions are merged and applied to the general cost of retiring superannuated employees. The great merit of the first plan is that it is scientific in principle and equitable as between individuals. But it may be urged for the second plan that it will produce the result desired for the Government at a much less initial cost and at the same time secure to the employees all the practical benefits of the first plan.

A decision as to which of these retirement plans is the more worthy of support under all the conditions existing will constitute a step in the direction of the eventual solution of the vexed problem.

The plan of the first kind is that evolved after a long and thorough investigation by the Commission on Economy and Efficiency and recommended to Congress by President Taft on May 6, 1912. The essential features may be restated briefly:

From the pay of each employee a sufficient sum is deducted to provide for his retirement on half pay at the age of 70 years. It is stipulated that the Government shall pay 4 per cent interest on all contributions compounded annually. In case an employee does not remain in the service until the age of 70 years, the amount of his accumulated deductions and interest are returned to him in one sum. If he leaves the service between the ages of 60 and 70 years, the return payment is made in 10 equal annual installments. In case of death at any time the total amount of all deductions and accrued interest, less any amounts paid after age 70 under the annuity provision, is paid over at once in one sum to the legal representatives.

In so far as this plan concerns those employees who enter the service after the inauguration of the plan, it is perhaps not open to serious criticism; but in so far as it applies to persons already in the service its impracticability at once appears. Either very large appropriations must be made by Congress to supplement the contributions of those who are nearing the age of retirement or else confiscatory amounts must be deducted from the pay of the employees. In this dilemma the commission has been forced to propose a compromise which contains objectionable features of both alternatives. According to the commission's plan deductions up to as much as 8 per cent of the total salary are to be required of every employee unless a less percentage will provide the regular annuity at the superannuation age of 70 years. Amounts needed in excess of the 8 per cent contributions the commission proposes to have drawn from the Public Treasury. This latter feature is necessary if the plan is to become of any real value at once in relieving the service of superannuation.

The cost of applying this plan to the service at Washington alone has been carefully computed by the commission, and it may be assumed that the conclusions reached are approximately correct. The commission states that the plan in operation would require appropriations of about half a million dollars annually at the outset, increasing gradually to about $650,000, and then declining until at the end of 20 years the annual amount required of Congress would again be about half a million dollars. From that point the amount steadily declines and reaches the vanishing point at the end of 50 years from the outset of the plan. It is claimed by the commission that this cost is more apparent than real, owing to the constant loss from retaining superannuated employees which would be wiped out by the adoption of the commission's plan. Nevertheless, the present is clearly not an opportune time to ask Congress to inaugurate any plan of retirement that requires large annual appropriations.

One important detail of the commission's plan is objectionable. Fixing the age of retirement arbitrarily at 70 years would result in retaining in the service persons already superannuated and in separating from the service persons well able and willing to serve for several years longer. The age of retirement should be determined administratively on the merits of each individual case, according to the mental and physical condition of the applicants, and this would have the further advantage that in approving applications regard might be had within reasonable limits for the condition of the fund from which the retirement annuities were to be paid.

The conclusion must be accepted that there is no advantage to be gained in supporting a straight pension plan, the savings-annuity plan of the Commission on Economy and Efficiency, or any plan that involves as these do large appropriations by Congress. Superannuation, however, remains a pressing and urgent problem, and a practicable plan for dealing with it effectually should be accepted and advocated.

Such a plan should impose only a small direct burden on the employees and on the Public Treasury. The mutual feature can not seriously be objected to in view of the fact that the Government is a peculiarly permanent institution with a natural tendency to increase from year to year. It is not necessary that the contributions of each employee be applied directly to his individual retirement. The compulsory contributions of the employees may be made as low as 1 per cent of the monthly salary, which will impose no undue burden on them. The additional cost, if any, might be met by lapsed money-order funds, proceeds of dead-letter sales, supplemented by a small percentage of the postal surplus. This might have the happy effect of stimulating economy and efficiency in the service. Such a law should accord to the Postmaster General broad discretionary power in order that the determination of superannuation might be administrative, and so that the condition of the fund might be considered in approving applications. Able-bodied men of advanced years would thus be retained in the service to the benefit of themselves and of the Government.

Mr. PENROSE. May I ask the Senator from Alabama a question?

Mr. BANKHEAD. Certainly.

Mr. PENROSE. Do I understand that the Assistant Postmaster General favors a retirement system?

Mr. BANKHEAD. This simply gives his opinion on it.

Mr. PENROSE. Is the opinion favorable to retirement system or is it hostile to it?

Mr. BANKHEAD. I think he is inclined to something of that sort.

Mr. PENROSE. Then it is only general information?

Mr. TOWNSEND. He is entirely neutral.

Mr. BANKHEAD. It is only a general letter.

Mr. PENROSE. A letter of neutrality, as I understand, Mr. President.

STOCK-RAISING HOMESTEADS.

Mr. STERLING. Mr. President, will not the Senator from Missouri yield to me for a moment? It will take but a short time to bring the matter which I desire to the attention of the Senate.

Mr. STONE. Does the Senator from South Dakota desire to address the Senate?

Mr. STERLING. I do not desire to address the Senate. I want to call attention to a matter which was passed over last evening when we were considering the calendar, and to ask unanimous consent for its immediate consideration.

Mr. STONE. I should like very much to oblige the Senator, but we must have an executive session. We shall not be in executive session very long.

Mr. STERLING. I think it will take but a short time to dispose of the bill to which I refer, I will say to the Senator from Missouri, if I may call it up.

Mr. STONE. Does the Senator desire to ask unanimous consent?

Mr. STERLING. This bill is what is known as the grazing homestead bill, being No. 839 on the calendar.

Mr. STONE. Does the Senator ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the bill?

Mr. STERLING. Yes. Last evening when it was reached on the calendar the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] said that he would be satisfied with the bill if section 6 were stricken therefrom. He also stated at the same time that the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] desired to be present when the bill was called up. I now ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill, it being House bill 15799.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. SMOOT. I have no objection to taking up the bill, Mr. President, but I will say to the Senator from Missouri that I shall move to strike out section 6 of the bill.

Mr. STONE. Will that lead to discussion?

Mr. SMOOT. I hardly think it will.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. STONE. I can not resist appeals of Senators and I yield, with the understanding that if the bill leads to discussion it will be withdrawn.

Mr. SMOOT. That is a fair proposition, and I will agree to that with the Senator from Missouri now.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator from South Dakota asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, the title of which will be stated.

The SECRETARY. A bill (H. R. 15799) to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill heretofore has been read.

There being no objection, the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. STERLING. Now, I move that section 6 of the bill be stricken out.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The amendment proposed by the Senator from South Dakota will be stated.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to strike out section 6, as follows:

SEC. 6. That in the event there are not contiguous lands in area sufficient to complete an entry of 640 acres, as provided for in this act, the entryman or patentee shall have the right to enter within a radius of 10 miles from his first entry, subject to the same requirements as specified for contiguous additional entries, lands in reasonably compact form which have been designated for entry under the provisions of this act, that shall, together with the first entry, not exceed 640 acres: Provided, That the entryman shall be required to enter all contiguous areas open to entry prior to the entry of any noncontiguous land.

The amendment was agreed to.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill is still before the Senate, as in Committee of the Whole, and open to further amendment.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I understand the Senator from Missouri does not desire the consideration of this bill to be proceeded with.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, is this the grazing homestead bill?

Mr. BORAH. This is the 640-acre homestead bill.

Mr. WALSH. I object to its consideration at this time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. That ends it. The bill is out of the way.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. STONE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to; and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After 15 minutes spent in executive session the doors were reopened.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw, without prejudice, the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Oklahoma? The Chair hears none, and consent is given.

Mr. BURTON. Mr. President, during the years I have been in Congress I have seen a great deal of constructive legislation enacted in which I have taken great satisfaction. I have also witnessed with a good deal of complacency the defeat of certain measures which have been proposed here which to my mind were unsound in principle, mistaken in policy, and contrary to the public good. My name has become perhaps associated recently with the defeat of proposed legislation. Helping to prevent what to my mind was bad legislation is not without its gratification, certainly not without its usefulness.

Of the constructive measures that have fallen by the way there is none I regret more than those relating to the conservation of our natural resources, or, I may say, rather, relating to a rational utilization of them. The conditions of spoliation and greed and abuse under which they were being monopolized and wasted a decade or more ago very properly led the Presidents during the last two and the present administrations to withdraw or hold under reservation many of the most useful of these resources, particularly water powers and, to some extent, coal and mineral lands. Such a policy was intended only to avoid an immediate evil, and was never intended to be permanent or long continued. It was expected that Congress would within a reasonable time inaugurate a comprehensive and adequate policy for their utilization, one which would on the one hand safeguard the public interest, and on the other furnish a reasonable and secure basis for the investment of the capital necessary to their development.

Of these resources none is of more importance or of more immediate need than the development and use of water powers. I regret the failure of the bills pertaining to this subject.

In future legislation upon this subject I wish to say that we must take careful account of the fact that in an exceptional degree the development of water power is a national problem. There is no form of energy, no class of enterprise, which so demands concentration in control as the development of this great utility. Along with concentration, however, there should be the most careful safeguarding of the public interests, controlled by State and National commissions, so that this will not amount to a monopoly, so that the people may enjoy reasonable rates of service in the utilization of this source of power, which is sure to be one of the greatest features in the future development of the continent. Centers of industry, the development of manufacture remote from the source of this power and energy, will be materially benefited by its development.

I bespeak consideration for these features of this situation. Let any theories of State rights and national control be subordinated to broad considerations of public interest of the general benefit. Let us not make, on the one hand, the mistake which was made in the granting of millions of acres to railways in the form of land grants. Let us not tolerate monopoly, and, on the other hand, let us give to those who would undertake this great work of development for the benefit of the country a reasonable opportunity for its accomplishment.

On the whole the bill reported by the Senate committee for the development of water power in navigable streams comes nearer solving this vexed question than any measure heretofore proposed in Congress, but in some particulars it is not entirely satisfactory. I particularly call attention to the provision for repayment of the cost of construction and other obligations to be assumed by the Federal Government in case the grant is discontinued at the end of 50 years.

There are many other things in which I have been interested, Mr. President, and which I regret that I shall be unable to consider with other Members of the Senate in the future. I call particular attention to our relations with foreign countries. We should understand that we have come to a position in the great family of nations which is enlarging year by year. A spirit of comity, a spirit like that which prevails among those who would be gentlemen in the relation of individuals, must prevail in all our diplomatic and other relations with foreign countries. Let us recognize the necessity not alone of justice, but of a due regard for all the interests, all the peculiarities, even the idiosyncrasies, as we may call them, which we find to be characterstic of other people. I trust particularly that this spirit will be manifest toward nations, small and great, in this Western Hemisphere, that one of the marked features of the future may be closer relations and more manifest friendship with Central America and South America.

I leave the Senate with the feeling that whichever party may prevail, the country may have confidence in the patriotism, the intelligence, the industry of the Members of the Senate and of the House of Representatives. May all your legislation be actuated by an abiding realization of the greatness of this country, both its domestic interests and its foreign relations. Relieve our great business enterprises from undue hampering, but provide such control that dishonesty and monopoly may be impossible. Let regard be given to the humblest as well as the strongest, with the view that our interests are one, that the welfare of all of our varied population will be promoted by rational policies based upon justice and a due regard for the rights of all.

Mr. President, there are many other things which I should like to say, but in view of the pressure of public business and the nearness of the hour of adjournment I will not say more.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD an address by Mr. Levy Mayer, of Chicago, before the Creve Cœur Club, of Peoria, Ill. I do not say that I approve all the sentiments expressed in this article, but I think it a valuable contribution to the thought of the present time.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

[Address by Levy Mayer, of Chicago, before the Creve Cœur Club, of Peoria, Ill., on Feb. 22, 1915.]

Everything and everybody is being investigated. This espionage creates great unrest and business disturbance and disorder; it produces equal dissatisfaction among the masses. Every industry is on the grill.

Referring only to Federal investigations and eliminating altogether the ever-present State inquiries, there have during the last few years been the following:

(a) By the House of Representatives: The steel, the sugar, the shipping, and the textile industries; labor conditions in Colorado; the Alaska fur-seal industry; banking activities and stock exchanges, involving all interests; every line of industrial and commercial pursuit, in connection with the Federal Trade Commission and the Clayton antitrust bills; all business interests in framing the Underwood tariff bill.

(b) By the Senate: Combinations of capital in connection with the preparation of the Federal Trade Commission and Clayton antitrust bills; the National Association of Manufacturers; campaign contributions—those having nothing to lose may contribute, but to you who have much at stake that privilege is denied—the investigation of all industries charged with lobbying—you are now publicly pilloried if, when you are attacked, you go or send an agent to Washington to present reasons why you should be let alone.

(c) By the Department of Justice: The New Haven, the Southern Pacific, and all other land-grant railroads; the beef-packing industry; United States Steel Corporation; the Harvester Co.; the American Harvester Co.; the American Shoe Machinery Co.; anthracite coal interests; American Smelting Co.; fish-packing and cotton-fabric industries; produce exchanges and dealers in food supplies; cotton and stock exchanges; wheat situation; and numerous other prosperous enterprises.

(d) By the Interstate Commerce Commission: The Rock Island, Pere Marquette, New Haven, and Southern Pacific Railroads, the Oregon Steamship Navigation Co.; the railroads, particularly those of the Middle West and East, in connection with rate increases; and all railroads everywhere under the chapter of physical valuation.

(e) By the Federal Commission on Industrial Relations: A general dragnet of the relations of capital and labor; conditions of labor in factories; Rockefeller and Carnegie Foundations.

(f) By the Bureau of Corporations: All of the water-power and lumber interests and many corporations whose identities have not yet been made public.

(g) By the Bureau of Immigration: Conditions of employment and unemployment of labor.

Investigation is the penalty of success.

As I have said, practically every industry has been investigated and reinvestigated and then investigated again. Congressional inquiries have ramifications which lead to the summoning of witnesses who are required to reveal facts of the most confidential character regarding their business.

The Industrial Relations Commission has been devoting weeks examining many witnesses with all sort of fads and fancies about the Rockefeller and Carnegie Foundations. The commission is trying to find in those grand philanthropic establishments a menace to democratic institutions. In other words, the industrial commission seems to proceed upon the preconceived theory that these foundations threaten our political existence—a commission investigating for facts that may destroy public confidence in these foundations. Does any thoughtful and well-balanced mind really believe that these humane and benevolent foundations, which are making research for cures for deadly diseases, that are devoted to founding and improving colleges and libraries, do really tend to corrupt the people?

All this is great waste, waste of time, waste of energy, and, what is worse, destruction of confidence. The confidence of the masses is easily shattered, and it is difficult to be restored.

While Congress is investigating, seeking to control and run the business of the people, what has it done about minding its own?

A report made to Congress in 1912 shows that there were then 18 different systems of bookkeeping in the Treasury Department; that the Secretary of the Treasury could not tell within $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 the current obligations outstanding against the Government; that the Secretary of the Treasury could not give to the President a clean-cut balance sheet showing the exact financial position of the Government; and that the records of payment were from three months to a year and one-half behind; that there were from 300 to 700 millions of unaudited payments not on the books at all. The report showed a woeful lack of cooperation between the different departments, and that there was a duplication of efforts costing many millions yearly. Among many illustrations it appeared that the Post Office Department was carting tons of mail from the Printing Bureau to the post office three-fourths of a mile away, and that this same mail was again hauled back to the railroad station directly across the street from the Printing Bureau whence it came.

No private organization, no matter how big, could stand such gross mismanagement and reckless inefficiency. And what is true of the Nation, applies to the States and to the municipalities. Mismanagement, waste, and inefficiency are in the saddle. These same political riders are instructing and directing the merchants and manufacturers how to run their business—business which, of the corporations alone, yielded during the year ending June 30, 1914, a net income of $4,339,000,000.

But, aside from Federal interference, every year sees an increase in legislative hostility to industrial interests. Practically all of the 48 States are regularly passing laws to curb, exclude, and eliminate foreign corporations. There is neither reason nor business morality to support such legislative ostracism.

When the framers of the Constitution put into that instrument in 1789 the guaranty that the citizens of one State shall enjoy all the privileges and immunities of the citizens of every other State—they could not have anticipated how much corporate entities would thereafter control the industries of this country. Had they foreseen the reality, they would have defined the word 'citizen' to include a corporate as well as a natural person. There were at that time in the United States less than 30 corporations for profit. In 1800 the total corporations of all kinds in this country was 225. To-day there are 350,000. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, 316,909 corporations made returns to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue under the income tax law. Those corporations have a capital stock of $64,071,000,000, a bonded indebtedness of $37,136,000,000, and a net income of $4,339,000,000. These figures are beyond human grasp. The corporations in this country do over 90 per cent of its entire business. Why should not they, like individuals, be guaranteed equal privileges? To-day nearly every corporation is engaged in business in other States. Immediately it sets foot across the boundary line of its own State it is treated as an enemy, and is made to comply with oppressive requirements before it can secure recognition as a legitimate enterprise.

Each State has run a race with every other in a seeming endeavor to restrict, if not destroy, foreign corporate existence.

It is difficult to contemplate with composure the obstacles that are thus placed by the citizens of this country against trading by neighboring citizens who have taken corporate shape, and it is only in that form that business can extend and succeed to-day. The disjointed, hostile, and jealous 13 Colonies that preceded our present Nation did not resort to restrictions so destructive of trade and commercial enterprise as do the 48 States of this country in the year of 1915.

Instead of this tremendous handicap and burden, let Congress stop investigating and pass a short, model Federal incorporation law that will supplant the existing conflicts of 48 State systems. In the arena of trade and commerce the fetish of State rights has disappeared from all Democratic and Republican creeds alike.

It is axiomatic that ignorance of the law excuses no one. Every man is presumed to know the law at his peril.

There are some 4,000 legislators, National and State, legislating for us. The result of this activity baffles conception. During the last session of the National and State legislatures 43,403 pages of laws were enacted; they embraced 20,510 chapters and covered 151,083 heads or subheads. During this same period there were 28,000 decisions by courts of appeals in this country. These decisions have the force of statutory law and are equally binding. Ignorance of these decisions is attended with the same consequences as ignorance of statutory law.

The annual output of Congress and of our American legislatures is estimated to be five times greater than that of all the combined legislative assemblies of the world. This has produced a constant effort to evade the law without incurring the risk of punishment. We regard law as an inconvenience, to be evaded if it can be done with safety.

A few weeks ago a law was proposed in one of our neighboring States which would require that housemaids shall be given two nights off a week, shall have a suitable reception room for callers, and be required to work no longer than 56 hours in each week.

Recently Ohio passed a law making it a misdemeanor to furnish free of charge in any place where intoxicating liquors are sold any food, except crackers, cheese, and pretzels. A saloon keeper who had been arrested for furnishing a free lunch of sauer kraut, fish, and bread secured freedom from jail by the decision of the court holding the law unconstitutional, because it discriminated against and in favor of certain articles of food.

In Illinois, in 1913, our wise legislature enacted a law which will send to jail a hotel keeper whose bed sheets are less than 81 inches wide or shorter than 99 inches.

The fundamental and underlying error lies in the American conception that the legislature can do everything that is not naturally impossible, and sometimes legislatures transgress even this law.

I do not overlook the wonderful and unparalleled growth of this country, her institutions, her industries, her resources, and her wealth; but in the mad chase for every kind of game we have overlooked our duty to effect conservative, sensible, and clear-sighted control.

When Washington was President the total area of the United States was 827,884 square miles. To-day it is 3,726,000 square miles, or more than the area of all Europe and nearly one-fourth of the land of the globe.

Washington's constituency numbered 3,929,214; in Illinois alone there are now 5,638,591, and the population of continental United States is 100,000,000.

When Washington was President in 1790 our exports were $20,000,000 per annum, or $5 per capita. Last year they were $2,000,000,000, or $21 per head, and our domestic commerce exceeds $25,000,000,000 annually.

In Washington's day the transportation of freight by land was a risk too hazardous to be undertaken. At the present time 23,000,000 freight cars are employed in the transportation of commodities on land.

Toward the close of the eighteenth century the transportation of passengers was equally perilous. In 1790 there were only a few stage roads in operation; one ran between Philadelphia and New York, a distance of 90 miles, and the journey consumed three days. So dangerous was travel then that careful men made their wills before going to State conventions. It was deemed rapid transit to make in five days the trip from Boston to New York that is now made in five hours. To-day our whole continent can be traversed in less time than it took Adams to make the journey from Boston to New York. Now we have 240,000 miles of railroad, valued at $20,000,000,000, or one-seventh of the wealth of the country.

Such is the difference in the economic conditions between the country of Washington's day and that in which we have our being. But we have come to our present growth in spite of commissions, and in the teeth of nagging and obstructive investigations and legislation, frequently inspired by partisan bias and fed by a spirit of opposition or envy of those who, by skill, industry, and merit, have succeeded.

The population of Germany is, in round numbers, 70,000,000. Its annual exports prior to the war were $2,475,000,000, and imports $2,675,000,000, or a total of $5,150,000,000. Our imports during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, were $1,896,000,000 and the exports $2,364,000,000, or a total of $4,260,000,000 foreign trade. During substantially the same period Great Britain, with a population of 40,000,000, had exports of $3,075,000,000 and imports of $3,845,000,000, or a total of $6,920,000,000.

Comparison of the manner in which the German, English, and French Governments stimulate, help, and foster trade puts us to shame. There is no legislative business torment in those countries. There fruitful development of commerce and industry are among the most important governmental functions. Everything possible that helps or improves industry receives official encouragement and assistance.

In their industrial systems there are innumerable agreements and syndicates authorized and approved by Government to reasonably control output and fix prices.

In Germany alone there are over 600 lines in which the Government authorizes the maintenance of firm conditions and the prevention of excess of outputs and price cutting. A beneficent and farsighted Government policy has developed German commerce quicker than that of any other country, and this has produced commercial stability and financial strength. Such efficiency is the result of constructive, cooperating, and helpful laws that have made Germany's commercial activities so successful.

Similar efficient and wise governmental encouragement prevails in all other foreign countries. You can get it here if you will pull together and demand, not beg, for your rights.

I am not unaware of the shameful and scandalous outrages that have been committed by certain financial, commercial, and railroad bandits, and realize that these have produced a volcanic demand for legislative nostrums. But some of the remedies provided under the spur of an outraged public will create antidotes as commercially troublesome as the wrongs for which the legislative redress has been provided.

I pick as a specimen the most recent law that has sprung from the Federal hopper for controlling business. It is the most far-reaching example of all attempts to run business by Government commission. I refer to the Trade Commission act, which became a law September 26, 1914. It is not yet in actual operation, because the commission has not been appointed.

Nor can the act be characterized as a partisan measure. All of the political parties were hungry for it.

The national Democratic platform of 1912 declared "We favor the declaration by law of the conditions upon which corporations shall be permitted to engage in interstate trade."

The Republican platform of the same year, not to be outdone, demanded a trade commission so as to place "in the hands of an administrative board many of the functions now necessarily exercised by the courts. This will promote promptness in the administration of the laws and avoid delays and technicalities incident to court procedure."

The phrase "avoid delays and technicalities incident to court procedure" must have been inserted in the platform by a legal jester—a Mark Twain barrister, perhaps.

The Progressive platform of the same year was equally outspoken, and demanded:

"A strong Federal administration commission of high standing, which shall maintain permanent active supervision over industrial corporations engaged in interstate commerce."

So far, therefore, as politics goes, the Federal Trade Commission is of trinity origin.

It appoints a commission of five men, with a salary of $10,000 each a year, not more than three to be members of the same political party. To this commission has been given the greatest commercial power ever before intrusted to a governmental body.

(1) It is empowered and directed to prevent persons, partnerships, or corporations (other than banks and common carriers) "from using unfair methods of competition in commerce."

(2) It is given the broadest and most sweeping inquisitorial powers, including the right and duty to investigate the organization, business, conduct, practices, and management of those engaged in interstate trade.

(3) It is given the power to require under oath annual and special reports and answers in writing to specific questions, which answers shall furnish to the commission all information that it may require as to the organization, business, conduct, practices, and management of those engaged in commerce; and the commission is given the right to copy the documentary evidence of anyone being investigated, and to require, by subpœna, the attendance of witnesses and the production of evidence.

(4) The commission may have hearings in Washington or in any other part of the United States. Witnesses are required to attend, no matter at what distance they live, and to bring with them their books and papers.

As near as statistics can be obtained, it is estimated that there are about 300,000 corporations engaged in commerce within the meaning of the Trade Commission act. It is, however, not merely over corporations that the commission is given authority. The individuals who have not heretofore taken corporate form have not escaped, for, by section 5, it is provided that—

"The commission is hereby empowered and directed to prevent persons, partnerships, or corporations (except banks and common carriers subject to the acts to regulate commerce) from using unfair methods of competition in commerce."

Statistics at hand indicate that over one-half million individuals, partnerships, and corporations are, by this new act, made the wards of five commissioners, and every line of business is brought under their supervising and managerial direction and control. Can five human beings be found, even though three are Democrats and two Republicans, equal to this task?

The Interstate Commerce Commission was established in 1888. It has seven members, and a vast number of employees and assistants. Its decisions already cover 32 volumes of printed reports, and during the last fiscal year the commission passed upon over 15,000 cases and complaints. Its work has become so tremendous that the investigations and hearings are now being conducted almost entirely by either an individual commissioner or by an assistant. That commission is greatly in arrears, although its members are hard worked. The Interstate Commerce Commission is confined exclusively to carriers. What shall be said of the Trade Commission, whose functions will extend into and over every avenue and line of industry other than that of banks and carriers? All of the myriad diversified commercial pursuits fall within the jurisdiction of that body. It must hear testimony, make findings and reports, and then its decision is without final binding force. It must be reported to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, and that court has the right to rescind, change, or modify the rulings of the Trade Commission. Before that court all parties are entitled to their day, to hearings, and to arguments, and the decision of that court is subject to review by the Supreme Court. How many thousands of clerks and assistants this new commission will need employ I shall not predict. Nor am I able to measure the load and expenses that will fall on those who come before the commission. Great corporations can stand such outlays, but individuals, partnerships, and the average industrial corporations will find the burden and cost a heavy one.

Severe penalties are prescribed by the act. Refusal to appear and testify and produce documents and papers subjects the offender to a fine of from $1,000 to $5,000, or imprisonment for one year, or both. And the findings of the commission, when approved by the circuit court of appeals, are enforceable by contempt orders.

What shall be said of the most fundamental of its functions—the power to prevent "unfair methods of competition"? The term is indefinable. During the hundreds of years that the common law has prevailed no court or legislative body has been able to frame a definition of it. But the five commissioners are now clothed with the power and the duty to pass upon every possible state of facts within every line of trade and industry. Banks and carriers have their separate commissions. In the language of a recent report to Congress:

"It is impossible to frame definitions which embrace all unfair practices. There is no limit to human inventiveness in this field. Even if all known unfair practices were specifically defined and prohibited, it would be at once necessary to begin over again."

Need I ask, after this short reference to the act, whether, in the language of one of the platforms, it will "promote promptness in the administration of the laws and avoid delays and technicalities incident to court procedure"?

The merchants and manufacturers of this country must be let alone, or industry and trade will be run by the Government, and the economic and political results will be injurious alike to employer and wage earner. The success of the former is necessary to the life and prosperity of the latter.

The cure for prevailing conditions is homeopathic. Create combinations in restraint of legislation. Educate the people, beginning with the children in the common schools, to know that legislation can not create or change the constitution of man; that there are certain things that the law can not accomplish, no matter how drastic and minute its provisions; that it can not successfully run shops and factories by law, commissions, or investigations. Economic life will not yield to legislative medicine.

This can be done if only the men who do things in their offices and factories will earnestly cooperate and help, and if the all-powerful press will take hold and pound and preach until the doctrine is part of our political existence.

Our legislatures, instead of meeting annually or biennially, should have sessions not oftener than every four years, with the right of the President or governor to call a special session to meet a particular emergency. With less frequent sessions more attention can and will be paid to the quality and character of the men elected.

Reduce the number of legislators. There are 51 senators and 153 members in the Illinois House. This number is at least twice too many. There are 531 Members in the United States House and Senate; this number is too large.

Then, again, out of the 531 national legislators 302 are lawyers, or nearly 60 per cent, and of the Illinois legislators a large majority are lawyers. I favor less lawyers and more business men. Lawyers as a class can no more make laws to prosperously run your business than you are able to frame a code of court procedure.

The United States is, above all countries, one of commerce and business. Its origin, its history, and its people spell industry. Commercial development and success mean progress and betterment for all the people. To manage the business of this country by legislation or commission seriously injures commercial, mercantile, and agricultural pursuits, and will dry up the springs upon which labor must depend for improvement and progress.

For a change I would like to see successful, broad-gauged merchants and manufacturers nominated for high office. The time is ripe for the attempt. The fundamental principles of constitutional law are settled. There is, therefore, no longer the same force in the contention that the chief executive officials should be lawyers. Let the vast industrial interests of this country nominate representative manufacturers and merchants. It is not at all certain that the great body of wage earners—and they are a reading, thoughtful, and thinking class—will not cooperate. You can then show the world the difference between the rule of the professional politician and your own. To me the proposal does not seem too Utopian. Mightier oaks have grown from smaller acorns.

JOURNAL OF LEGISLATIVE DAY OF JANUARY 26, 1915.

Mr. ROOT. Mr. President, some time ago—it seems a long while—upon my request a portion of the Journal of the calendar day of the 29th of January and some unascertained legislative day was reserved from the approval of the Senate and printed for examination. It has been examined, and I think sufficiently states all of that part of the proceedings of the night of January 29 which ought to be preserved. Accordingly I move that the Journal of the 29th of January be now approved.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it will be approved.

CONFIRMATION OF ARMY PROMOTIONS.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, there are some nominations that were sent in only a few moments ago by the President. The President is now in his room near the Senate Chamber, and I have just consulted him. He does not think it important that the Senate should act upon those nominations if other business would be interfered with, and hence, unless some Senator thinks to the contrary, I will not move an executive session.

I am going to take the judgment of Senators now as to the propriety of taking an adjournment at this moment, say until 10 minutes or 5 minutes past 11 o'clock, so that the Journal may be acted upon and approved. Then we can go on with any legislative business that may remain.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. Mr. President, may I interrupt the Senator for just a moment?

Mr. STONE. Certainly.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN. In connection with the nominations which were made by the President and sent to the Senate this morning, amongst others were the promotions authorized by a bill passed by both House and Senate, promoting Col. George W. Goethals, Corps of Engineers, to be major general with rank from March 4, 1915; Col. Harry F. Hodges, Corps of Engineers, to be brigadier general with rank from March 4, 1915; Lieut. Col. William L. Sibert, Corps of Engineers, to be brigadier general with rank from March 4, 1915; and Brig. Gen. William C. Gorgas to be Surgeon General, with rank of major general, with rank from March 4, 1915. I desire to request that they be confirmed, without reference to the committee, as in open session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection? The Chair hears none, and the nominations are confirmed.

Mr. STONE. Now, Mr. President, I move that the Senate adjourn until 5 minutes after 11 o'clock of this day.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 10 o'clock and 55 minutes a. m., Thursday, March 4, 1915) the Senate adjourned until 11 o'clock and 5 minutes a. m. of the same day.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WEDNESDAY, March 3, 1915.

(Legislative day of Tuesday, March 2, 1915.)

The recess having expired, the House (at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes a. m.) resumed its session.

The SPEAKER. The House will be in order. The Clerk will call the Unanimous Consent Calendar.

POST-OFFICE BUILDING, WILDWOOD, N. J.

The first business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 20243) to acquire a site and erect a building thereon for the use of the United States post office at Wildwood, N. J.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. MANN. I object.

RECLAMATION OF CERTAIN ARID LANDS, NEVADA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 21377) to encourage the reclamation of certain arid lands in the State of Nevada, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, what is the number of the bill?

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 21377.

Mr. MANN. I object.

CORRECTION OF STATEMENT.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for one minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent to address the House for one minute. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, on the first day of last month I addressed the House relative to some matters pertaining to the District of Columbia.

During the course of my remarks I said:

Not long ago the Washington Star said editorially that Squire Dent's compensation should be large, because he, while auditor, could not practice law. The editor of the Star seems to have overlooked the fact that the auditor was then practicing law for one of the owners of the Star in the case of Gaddis v. Noyes. It is also true that the auditor uses his public office in practicing law.

Mr. Speaker, at the time I made that statement I entertained not the slightest doubt in my own mind that I had seen in the Star the statement to the effect that Auditor Dent was not engaged in the practice of law.

While my statement that he was actually engaged in the practice was correct, yet it develops that a contrary statement was not made by the Star.

Having had my attention invited to that particular part of what I said I have sent to the Congressional Library and had the files of the Star thoroughly gone through, with the result that there can not be found in the Star the statement that Auditor Dent was not engaged in the practice of law.

I am not now able to recall where I saw that statement, but I am entirely satisfied that it was not made in the Star; and, in justice to the editor of the Star, I now wish to make correction of what I said upon the former occasion.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD an address by ex-President Taft, on neutrality, and also a letter from Prof. Francke, of Harvard University, on the same subject.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEPHENS] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing an address by ex-President Taft, and also one by Prof. Francke on the subject of neutrality. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bill of the following title, had insisted upon its amendments, asked a conference upon said bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. ASHURST, Mr. MYERS, and Mr. CLAPP as the conferees on the part of the Senate:

An act (H. R. 20150) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments the bill (H. R. 16136) to authorize exploration for and disposition of coal, phosphate, oil, gas, potassium, or sodium, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House to the bill (H. R. 16510) to provide for recognizing the services of certain officers of the Army and Navy, late members of the Isthmian Canal Commission, to extend to them the thanks of Congress, to authorize their promotion, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bill of the following title:

An act (H. R. 21121) to extend the time for constructing a bridge across the Missouri River near Kansas City, Mo., authorized by an act approved June 17, 1914.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed with amendments bill of the following title, had insisted upon its amendments, asked a conference with the House on said bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. FLETCHER, Mr. RANSDELL, and Mr. NELSON as the conferees on the part of the Senate:

An act (H. R. 20189) making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the President had approved and signed bills and joint resolution of the following titles:

January 28, 1915:

H. R. 19076. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911.

February 15, 1915:

H. R. 19424. An act to extend the time for the completion of the municipal bridge at St. Louis, Mo.;

H. R. 20818. An act to authorize the Brunot Island Bridge Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the back channel of the Ohio River; and

H. R. 20933. An act extending the time for completion of the bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn., authorized by an act entitled "An act to authorize the Arkansas & Memphis Railway Bridge & Terminal Co. to construct, maintain, and operate a bridge across the Mississippi River at Memphis, Tenn.," approved August 23, 1912.

February 17, 1915:

CONVEYING THE APPRECIATION OF CONGRESS.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to discharge the Committee on Foreign Affairs from consideration of Senate joint resolution No. 191. The House has reported a resolution to the same effect.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to discharge the Committee on Foreign Affairs from the consideration of the resolution, which the Clerk will report, and immediately consider the same.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the thanks of Congress be, and they are hereby, presented to their excellencies Señor Domicio da Gama, Señor Rómulo S. Naón, and Señor Eduardo Suárez for their generous services as mediators in the controversy between the Government of the United States of America and the leaders of the warring parties in the Republic of Mexico.

SEC. 2. That the President of the United States is hereby authorized and requested to cause to be made and presented to their excellencies Señor Domicio da Gama, Señor Rómulo S. Naón, and Señor Eduardo Suárez suitable gold medals, appropriately inscribed, which shall express the high estimation in which Congress holds the services of these distinguished statesmen, and the Republics which they represent, in the promotion of peace and order in the American continent.

SEC. 3. That the sum of $3,000, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the purchase or manufacture of said medals is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to know what is conveyed to a man to whom the thanks of Congress are tendered in this way? What rights does he secure? Here are three gentlemen whom you propose to thank by an act of Congress. What special privileges do they have as the result of that act?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. They do not acquire any rights, except that they receive the thanks of Congress.

Mr. MOORE. Are they not given the freedom of the floor of the House of Representatives?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes.

The SPEAKER. They are thanking Congress instead of Congress thanking them.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. It does give them the right to the floor if Congress thanks them by name.

Mr. MOORE. We did this yesterday in two or three cases. Will the gentleman from Virginia give us some special reason why Congress should take this unusual step?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Because these gentlemen devoted a good part of a whole summer in an earnest, unselfish, and splendid effort to restore peaceful relations in the neighboring Republic of Mexico and to adjust any misunderstanding between this country and Mexico.

Mr. MOORE. Did they do that at the request of the House, or any other legislative body in the United States?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. They did not; but they did it at the initiative, as I understood at the time, of these gentlemen themselves. They spent a great deal of time and labor and unselfish devotion to this effort to accomplish the purpose that everybody in this country was very much interested in and had deeply at heart.

Mr. MOORE. These were the gentlemen who assembled at Niagara Falls for the purpose of negotiating, if possible, for peace in Mexico?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. MOORE. Did they accomplish what they went for?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. That is a matter of opinion. They did not restore peace in Mexico. They accomplished a great deal, and a great deal for which we ought to be very thankful to them, and this resolution but expresses those thanks. But whether they accomplished their purpose or failed, they made the effort, an unselfish and a laborious effort, and would still be entitled to our gratitude.

Mr. MOORE. Did they meet at their own suggestion or at the suggestion of the President?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. My understanding at the time was that the suggestion came from one of these gentlemen, and it was very gladly accepted by the executive department of the Government.

Mr. MOORE. It was at their own suggestion?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. It was at their initiative that the effort to bring about a better condition of affairs was undertaken.

Mr. MOORE. Did the Government contribute to the expenses of those negotiations?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. The Government contributed to some of the expenses. We had representatives before the mediators.

Mr. MOORE. The Government did contribute to this conference, the purpose of which was to bring about peace in Mexico, which was not accomplished?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. MOORE. Does the gentleman think we ought to begin to give votes of thanks to gentlemen who perform voluntary, or even paid, service? Yesterday we thanked some gentlemen for having performed paid services for the United States. Does the gentleman think we ought to give them the privileges of the floor of the House of Representatives as frequently as it now appears we propose to do, two propositions of this kind coming along in two days?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. These gentlemen, of course, rendered no paid service.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman will yield, as long as these gentlemen are representatives of foreign countries they have the privileges of the floor now, under the rules of the House.

Mr. MOORE. And this would give them that privilege after their services as representatives of foreign countries cease.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The joint resolution was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. FLOOD of Virginia, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PRIVATE CLAIMS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 13722) to relieve Congress from the adjudication of private claims against the Government.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

INTERNATIONAL ENGINEERING CONGRESS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the joint resolution (H. J. Res. 307) authorizing the President to extend invitations to other nations to appoint delegates or representatives to the International Engineering Congress to be held at San Francisco, Cal., September 20 to 25, inclusive, 1915.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Resolved, etc., That the President is hereby authorized to extend invitations to other nations to appoint delegates or representatives to the International Engineering Congress to be held at San Francisco, Cal., September 20 to 25, inclusive, 1915: Provided, That no appropriation shall be granted for the expenses of delegates or for other expenses incurred in connection with the said congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

Subsequently—

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, we have passed House joint resolution 307. As that carried in the Diplomatic and Consular appropriation bill I ask unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which it was passed, and that the joint resolution lie on the table. It will save work for the clerks.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to reconsider the vote by which House joint resolution 307 was passed and that the joint resolution lie on the table. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

POST OFFICE, GARDEN CITY, KANS.

Mr. NEELEY of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 7188) to increase the limit of cost of the United States post-office building at Garden City, Kans.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the limit of cost of the United States post-office building at Garden City, Kans., be, and the same is hereby, increased $6,050, or so much thereof as may be necessary to meet the additional cost of construction of said building in order to make the building more substantial and fireproof, as estimated by the contractor for additional fireproof construction and other betterments.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. CLARK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it may be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent that the bill be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. NEELEY of Kansas, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

CERTAIN TOWN SITES IN MONTANA.

Mr. PLATT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (S. 4180) to validate title to certain town sites in the State of Montana, which bill is identical with H. R. 20498, and to consider the bill in the House as in Committee of the Whole and pass it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill which the Clerk will report.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to accept for surface rights only Northern Pacific lieu-land selection heretofore made and designated as Glasgow, Mont., land office, serial No. 021480, for the following-described land: South half of the southeast quarter of section 3, in township 35 north, of range 49 east, Montana meridian; south half of the northeast quarter of section 9, in township 35 north, of range 50 east, Montana meridian; northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 17, in township 35 north, of range 51 east, Montana meridian; and issue patents thereto, which patents shall contain a reservation to the United States of all the coal in said lands, as provided by section 3 of the act of June 22, 1910 (36 Stat., p. 584).

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was ordered to a third reading, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

UNALLOTTED LANDS OF CREEK INDIANS.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass House joint resolution 380, withholding from allotment the unallotted or public domain of the Creek Nation or Tribe of Indians, and providing for the sale thereof, and for other purposes, with an amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I suggest to the gentleman that he ask unanimous consent first. It will save time.

Mr. MURRAY. I know there will be objection to that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma moves to suspend the rules and pass House joint resolution 380 with amendments which will be read into it as a part of it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the unallotted land or public domain of the Creek Nation or Tribe of Indians, including any land the title to which has been or may be recovered for the Creek Nation in any pending or other suit or otherwise, be, and the same is hereby, withheld from allotment to members of said nation or tribe, and that the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized, in his discretion, to cause such land to be sold or leased for the benefit of the Creek Nation or Tribe of Indians under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, the proceeds of such sale or lease to be paid into the Treasury of the United States to the credit of said Creek Nation: Provided, That the Secretary of the Interior is hereby authorized to pay each and every citizen of the Creek Nation who has not been allotted lands in said nation and who were duly, legally, and properly enrolled prior to the enrollment of the list included in Senate Document No. 478, Sixty-third Congress, second session, the sum of $1,040, in lieu of an allotment of land in said nation. Said sum of $1,040 to be paid to each and every person out of any funds in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Muskogee (Creek) Nation.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I demand a second.

Mr. MURRAY. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas objects, and the Chair will appoint the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MURRAY] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] as tellers.

The House divided; and the tellers reported that there were 52 ayes and 6 noes.

So a second was ordered.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, the legislative bill is here, and I ask that it be taken up now without affecting the status of this bill.

LEGISLATIVE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the bill H. R. 19909, the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation bill, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina presents the conference report on the legislative appropriation bill. The Chair desires to say that gentlemen having these quick-action bills ought to have the bills at hand, with an engrossed copy, if possible, where they can lay their hands on it. There are 100 or 200 bills lying around, and it takes the Clerk a good while to hunt them up. In the second place, when there is a motion to suspend the rules and privileged matters come in the Chair will stop what is going on and take up the privileged matter. The gentleman from South Carolina asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The conference report is as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1510).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19909) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendment numbered 35.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 18, and 64, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 21: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 21, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter inserted by said amendment insert the following: "Legislative Reference: To enable the Librarian of Congress to employ competent persons to gather, classify, and make available in translations, indexes, digests, compilations, and bulletins, and otherwise, data for or bearing upon legislation, and to render such data serviceable to Congress and committees and Members thereof, $25,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 41: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 41, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$30,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 63: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 63, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the amount stricken out by said amendment, and on page 55 of the bill, after line 26, insert the following: "For additional amount required for salaries and expenses of collectors of internal revenue, deputy collectors, surveyors, clerks, messengers, and janitors in internal-revenue offices until December 31, 1915, $315,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 65: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 65, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Strike out of lines 17, 18, 19, and 20 of the matter inserted by said amendment the following: "not to exceed $4 per diem in lieu of subsistence to employees while officially engaged away from their designated posts of duty, being for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916," and insert in lieu thereof the following: "per diem in lieu of subsistence pursuant to section 13 of the sundry civil appropriation act approved August 1, 1914"; and the Senate agree to the same.

JOSEPH T. JOHNSON,
JOSEPH W. BYRNS,
WILLIAM M. CALDER,
Managers on the part of the House.

THOMAS S. MARTIN,
LEE S. OVERMAN,
J. H. GALLINGER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The Clerk read the statement, as follows:

STATEMENT.

The managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on certain amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19909) making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year 1916, submit the following written statement in explanation of the effect of the action agreed upon and recommended by the conference committee in the accompanying conference report as to each of the said amendments, namely:

Nos. 1, 2, and 18: Appropriates for mileage of Senators, Representatives, Delegates, and Commissioners in accordance with existing law and as proposed by the Senate.

No. 21: Appropriates $25,000, as proposed by the Senate, for the legislative reference service of the Library of Congress, and strikes out the proposed reappropriation of the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the current year and the authority to acquire material, and for other expenses incidental to the work.

No. 35: Strikes out the appropriation of $160,000, proposed by the Senate, for expenses incident to the formal opening of the Panama Canal.

No. 41: Appropriates $30,000, instead of $75,000, as proposed by the Senate, for emergency clerical services in the Department of State.

Nos. 63, 64, and 65, relating to the Internal-Revenue Service: Appropriates $315,000 additional for salaries and expenses of collectors of internal revenue, deputy collectors, surveyors, clerks, messengers, and janitors in internal-revenue offices for service until December 31, 1915, on account of the war-revenue act; appropriates $2,200,000, as proposed by the Senate, instead of $2,600,000, as proposed by the House, for salaries and expenses of revenue agents, fees and expenses of gaugers, and salaries and expenses of storekeepers and storekeepers gaugers; inserts the provision, proposed by the Senate, with reference to gauging, branding, marking, and stamping by United States gaugers of rectified spirits; and appropriates $292,000, as proposed by the Senate, for expenses under the act of December 17, 1914, restricting the sale of opium.

JOSEPH T. JOHNSON,
JOSEPH W. BYRNS,
WILLIAM M. CALDER,
Managers on the part of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print in the RECORD some figures on the bill.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, permission will be granted.

There was no objection.

The figures are as follows:

Amount of bill as passed Senate	$37,211,503.50
Amount of bill as passed House	36,454,633.50

UNALLOTTED LANDS OF THE CREEK INDIANS.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Speaker, this resolution in brief is a resolution to provide for the withdrawal for allotment of about 2,800 acres of land of the Creek Nation, and pay these individuals, there being only five, $1,040 in lieu of the allotment. The Creek treaty provided that each and every citizen should have $1,040 worth of property. These lands are well worth $30,000,000.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURRAY. I can not yield, I have but a few minutes.

Mr. CAMPBELL. The gentleman said that the resolution provided for a payment of $1,040. I thought it was only $800.

Mr. MURRAY. But I have put an amendment into my motion. The Creek treaty provided that each member of the tribe should receive $1,040 worth of property. We provide that they shall be paid this money, and withdraw the remaining lands, worth $30,000,000, and distribute the proceeds equally among the members of the Creek tribe. Mind you, there are a great many of the tribe that have only received $800 and no land. We enrolled by an amendment in the Indian bill last Congress several hundred members and gave them $800. The treaty stipulates $1,040, and the Government has agreed that they shall be equalized up to $1,040, so that if the Government does not exhaust that equalization there will be a claim against the Government amounting to about $3,000,000. If these lands can be withdrawn there will be a sufficient amount to equalize all the allotments and discharge the obligation of the Government and give a payment of something like $200 in addition to all the Indians.

It is one of those resolutions that there is only one side to except the side of the oil men, who feel that they can get a better deal through the probate court than they can with the department, if it is withdrawn, where it will have to go. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. WATSON].

Mr. WATSON. Mr. Speaker, this question is not one which should be rushed through in the closing hours of a legislative session. It is a quesiton of law and not a question of public policy. If there were time left to debate it upon its merits there would be no danger of its passing this House or Congress. It is a question, Mr. Speaker, between the cupidity of a whole tribe of Indians on the one side and the legal rights of five members of that tribe on the other. This proposition has the indorsement of the attorney of the Creek Nation, because he, not unnaturally perhaps, desires to achieve pecuniary benefits for his clients. It very naturally has the indorsement of the Representative of that community in Congress, because it is a much easier matter for the gentleman to consult the interest of 18,711 people than to hear the small voice of a few defenseless people who are about to be stripped of their legal rights.

Every member of the Creek Nation, which I understand numbers 18,715, has been allotted his part of the public domain. Only five individuals of that nation remain to be allotted their share of the tribal land. Some of these have not only received land of the value of $1,040, as suggested by the gentleman from Oklahoma but 160 acres, their distributive share of land, upon which minerals and oil were known to exist or have been since discovered, and thus many thousands of dollars have gone into the coffers of individuals beyond their just proportion of the communal property.

Now it so happens, after these people have gotten not only the 160 acres of land upon which oil has been discovered and which they do not now propose to disgorge, when they find that oil has been discovered on the lands of these other defenseless people, they want to come in and share in the enhanced value of their land.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say to this House that this bill is nothing in the world but an attempt to postpone the settlement of a lawsuit which has been in the courts for some time past. That litigation was approaching its conclusion. To my mind, as a lawyer, there was but one issue to ensue, and that was the full establishment of the legal rights of these people. It is sought through this joint resolution, at the eleventh hour, to complicate the issues of this litigation and force these unfortunate people into the courts for perhaps three or five years to establish their legal rights.

I repeat, it is an effort on the part of the proponents of this measure simply to postpone the settlement of an ordinary lawsuit by means of a joint resolution, to be pushed through both Houses of Congress in its closing hours.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WATSON. Yes.

Mr. NORTON. Does the gentleman maintain that the passage of this resolution will deprive anyone out there of vested rights?

Mr. WATSON. I would say to the gentleman, Mr. Speaker, that it is impossible for any resolution of Congress to deprive these people of their vested legal rights.

Mr. NORTON. What legal rights will it take from them?

Mr. WATSON. I would say, furthermore, to the gentleman that it is impossible for this resolution to vest the Creek Nation with any legal rights which it does not now possess. The only practical effect of this resolution is to tell the Secretary of the Interior that he may not now issue the patents which the courts will ultimately compel him to issue in this case.

Mr. NORTON. Simply withdrawing these lands, as we are doing every day.

Mr. WATSON. Mr. Speaker, if the Secretary of the Interior has the legal right to withdraw these lands from allotment, he has the right without any resolution of Congress; so that, this resolution will confer no legal rights upon anybody, and, as a matter of law, it will deprive nobody of legal rights, but it will be a direction to a Cabinet officer of the Government to withhold patents which otherwise would issue until the resolution in its legal aspects could be adjudicated in the courts, which would require from three to five years of time. If the proposition were to enrich 5 people at the expense of 18,000, no Member of Congress would symphathize with or support it; and likewise I want to say that no man ought to consent to rob 5 people for the benefit of 18,000.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from North Dakota [Mr. NORTON].

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, this is a very simple proposition. In the Creek Nation in Oklahoma there now remains, in addition to some 2,000 acres of land of more or less value, five tracts of land that are of very great value on account of the oil discoveries made on these lands within the past two years. In 1901 an act of Congress (31 Stat. L., 861) was passed providing that all the land belonging to the Creek Nation should be divided or allotted among the citizens of the tribe so that each citizen should receive 160 acres of land of an appraised value not to exceed $1,040. The land was appraised and each enrolled citizen of the tribe was allotted 160 acres of land. It was further provided that if an enrolled citizen took land of a greater appraised value than $1,040 he paid into the tribal treasury the amount of its value in excess of $1,040.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Oh, no.

Mr. NORTON. Yes; such, I understand, was the regulations governing the allotment in case the citizen took land of a greater appraised value than $1,040. If the citizen took land of less value than that——

Mr. MURRAY. No; they did not let him take any of excess value.

Mr. MILLER. They did not have any of excess value.

Mr. NORTON. That is probably true. There was no 160-acre tract of land of greater appraised value than $1,040. The maximum price at which the land was appraised was $6.50 an acre.

Mr. MILLER. That was the first agreement, but there was a subsequent modification so that if a man received a tract of land of value greater than that he did not have to pay the tribe.

Mr. NORTON. There was no 160-acre allotment of greater appraised value than $1,040, but it was later provided that if an allottee received land of less appraised value than $1,040 the difference would be paid to him in cash by the Creek Nation. Up to the present time, as I understand, where citizens of the Creek Nation have received an allotment of land of less value than $800 they have all been paid the difference between the value of the land and $800. The available funds of the Creek Nation have not been sufficient to pay to those citizens who received land of an appraised value of less than $1,040 the difference between $1,040 and the appraised value of their allotments. The opposition to this resolution comes chiefly from attorneys and others interested in the claims of five Creek citizens who, since oil was discovered on and in the vicinity of these five particular allotments in contest, have been endeavoring to acquire title to the same. It is generally conceded that four of these five citizens are, under existing law, entitled to allotments of land in the Creek Nation. In the case of the other citizen, David Bowlegs, it is maintained by the Government that he is the same identical person as Davis Bowlegs. The mother of the real David Bowlegs on July 18, 1907, made affidavit that David Bowlegs died about September, 1903. If his death occurred at such time as it seems it did, David Bowlegs would not be entitled to any allotment. Millard Sanders, Jack Elton Wilson, Quenton Garrett, Lula Walcott, and David Bowlegs are the five Creek citizens who, through the aid of a multitude of attorneys and assignees, are endeavoring to secure allotment and title to these lands of known value for their oil deposits. It might here be well to make clear to the House that Millard Sanders, Jack Elton Wilson, Quenton Garrett, and Lula Walcott had, some years ago, filed allotments on other lands in the Creek Nation.

These first allotments taken by them were contested by other citizens of the tribe and their rights to these allotments were either lost through contest or through their failure to defend to a final determination the contest actions brought against them. Now, this resolution merely purposes to withdraw from allotment these valuable oil lands that are estimated to be worth from $5,000,000 to $30,000,000 and to give to each of these five citizens the sum of $1,040 in lieu of any equitable right whatever they may still have on allotment of land belonging to the Creek Nation. This, in my judgment, is more than a fair proposition to these five citizens and is giving to the Creek Nation the protection of law to which it is entitled. The fact that a considerable amount of these valuable oil lands have in the past been allotted to other citizens of the Creek Nation is no reason whatever why this Government, with the knowledge that is now before it, should allot land of a known value of millions of dollars to these five citizens or to any other citizens of the Creek Nation who may later make claim, and who may now, under existing law, be entitled to allotments. This resolution will not take from any of these five citizens any vested rights they may have in these lands. The question of title to these lands is now in heterogeneous litigation, and the passage of this resolution would not, in my best judgment, delay the final outcome of this litigation a single hour. Anyone who opposes the passage of this resolution on the ground that it would involve the interests of these five citizens in more litigation and delay for a long time the final determination of their rights, does so merely to becloud the matter and to gain sympathy for his cause. Unless this Congress passes this resolution now it will permit a great injustice to be done the Creek Nation. This Congress is the guardian of the Creek Nation and owes it as a duty to the Creek Nation to withdraw these valuable lands from allotment and to conserve them for the benefit of all the people of the tribe. Since the introduction of this resolution by Representative MURRAY every possible obstacle that could be thought of by the attorneys representing the oil interests of Oklahoma have been raised here in Washington to defeat the resolution. Pitted against some of the great oil companies and their attorneys, the Creek Nation, in this case, through its attorney, is waging a most trying, difficult, and an unequal struggle. In all justice the Congress should come to the rescue of the Creek Nation by passing this resolution so that the Creek Nation may not be deprived of its remaining unallotted valuable oil lands.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from North Dakota has expired.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. MILLER].

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, if this were a proposition to withdraw the surplus lands of the Creek Nation and conserve them for that nation, every Member of this House would be for it, no man stronger than myself; but it is not that at all. It is to take from five members of the Creek Nation, four of whom are admittedly entitled to an allotment, one other undoubtedly entitled to an allotment, the allotments which they have selected and to deprive them of their patrimony. There are two reasons why I am opposed to this resolution. The first is that, in my judgment, it is illegal. When an Indian belonging to the Creek Tribe receives a patent to his allotment, his rights are fixed, and no act of this body can deprive him of them. When he has made application for allotment and has received a certificate of allotment, his rights are fixed and you can not take them from him. When he has made the application for an allotment, thereby having performed all under the law that he is required to perform, his rights, in my opinion, have become vested, and we find the courts have so held. So that the passage of this resolution will create no end of litigation, providing fat fees for lawyers, and the real purpose is to deprive five Indians of their patrimony.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose of the resolution is to deprive five Indians of the Creek Nation of their proportionate share of the tribal property. All of the Creek Indians have been allotted except these five. Nobody else on the face of the earth can be allotted. Therefore it is wholly unnecessary to pass a resolution withdrawing the lands in excess of these five allotments from allotment, because the Secretary of the Interior could not allot them if he wanted to do so. There is no one to receive them; they belong to the tribe; and, therefore, it is clear that the purpose here is to take from these five men that to which, in my judgment, they are entitled.

Now, gentlemen will say that they offer to pay them $1,040, and they will say that that is the maximum amount which those who receive allotments receive. Never was a more unfair statement made in the face of intelligent men. This value, of course, was fictitious. Those figures are fictitious. Those were the fictitious valuations placed upon the allotments. The standard allotment was $1,040, but the minute the allotment was received it could have been sold for many times that amount; many and many a man could have sold his allotment for $16,000 or more. Further, hundreds, perhaps thousands, of the Creeks have allotments rich in oil, worth fully as much as any of them. And I find that the Secretary of the Interior has recently contributed an article to the National Geographic Magazine, in which he holds up to the admiring gaze of the American people how thousands of these Creek Indians have been made rich because oil has been found on their allotments. He mentioned one who received $94,000 in royalties alone last year; another received $90,000, and so on down the list. Why favor them and rob these five? If there were other desirable agricultural lands that might be allotted to these five, there would be some defense to this scheme, but it is proposed to deprive them of any and all allotment.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MILLER. I can not yield. One thousand and forty dollars is ridiculous. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MURRAY] has stated that $800 was an amount paid recently to a large number of the Creek citizens. That is, in one sense, true, but unfair. Who were they? They were "newborns," who have no rights at all except as we gave them rights. These five Indians are not "newborns," but agreement Indians whose rights were fixed by the treaties of 1901 and 1902.

Mr. BUTLER. Can not the courts settle these cases in an orderly way?

Mr. MILLER. I think so.

Mr. MURRAY. How about 52 on the Pollock roll?

Mr MILLER. I am not going to enter a controversy with the gentleman on a question that has no bearing here to-day. He knows those sums are purely fictitious, as far as the real value of the agreement Indians allotment is concerned.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. SPARKMAN] is recognized.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take up the bill H. R. 20189, the river and harbor bill, and concur in the Senate amendments.

Mr. MANN. To do what?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I ask unanimous consent to take up the river and harbor bill and concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 20189. An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert the following: "That the sum of $25,000,000 be, and the same hereby is, appropriated, out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be immediately available and to be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War and the supervision of the Chief of Engineers, for the preservation and maintenance of existing river and harbor works, and for the prosecution of such projects heretofore authorized as may be most desirable in the interests of commerce and navigation, and most economical and advantageous in the execution of the work: Provided, That allotments from the amount hereby appropriated shall be made by the Secretary of War upon the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers: Provided further, That allotments for the Mississippi River from the Head of Passes to the mouth of the Ohio River shall be expended under the direction of the Secretary of War in accordance with the plans, specifications, and recommendations of the Mississippi River Commission as approved by the Chief of Engineers: And provided further, That at the beginning of the next session of Congress a special report shall be made to Congress by the Secretary of War showing the amount allotted under this appropriation to each work of improvement."

The Secretary of War may, upon the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, transfer funds heretofore appropriated or authorized for any river or harbor improvement and which will probably not be required for that improvement prior to June 30, 1916, to any other river or harbor improvement for which funds may be needed prior to June 30, 1916: Provided, That the funds so transferred shall be subject to the same limitation as that imposed upon the original $25,000,000, namely, to be expended only for the preservation and maintenance of existing river and harbor works, and for the prosecution of such projects heretofore authorized as may be most desirable in the interests of commerce and navigation, and most economical and advantageous in the execution of the work: And provided further, That the funds so transferred shall as far as practicable be limited to projects in the same or adjacent districts, and shall be limited to an aggregate of $5,000,000.

SEC. 2. That the following modifications are authorized in projects heretofore adopted, to wit:

Malden River, Mass.: The funds now on hand and available for completing the plan of improvement authorized by the river and harbor act approved July 25, 1912, are hereby made available for any modified plan of improvement which may be recommended by the Chief of Engineers and approved by the Secretary of War: Provided, That any increase in cost involved in the execution of said modified plan shall be paid for by local interests and involve no further appropriation by the United States for the prosecution or completion of said improvement; that the riparian owners shall give proper permits to dump spoil on their lands and shall release the United States from all claims for damages by settling or caving of banks into the dredged channel; and that the State shall lower the obstructing sewer and pledge itself to maintain the new channel depth.

Harbor at Newport, R. I.: The unexpended balance of appropriations made and authorized by the river and harbor act approved March 2, 1907, for dredging to depths of 13 and 18 feet, is hereby made available for completing the work of dredging to a depth of 18 feet authorized by the river and harbor act approved June 25, 1910.

Providence River and Harbor, R. I.: That the second proviso in the paragraph of the river and harbor act approved March 4, 1913, providing for the improvement of Providence River and Harbor, R. I., be modified in accordance with recommendation in the report in Rivers and Harbors Committee Document No. 9, Sixty-third Congress, second session, to read as follows: "Provided further, That no work in the harbor proper north of Fields Point shall be done until the Secretary of War is satisfied that the State and the city have completed their proposed expenditures in the combined Providence and Pawtucket Harbors up to at least $2,000,000 for public terminals or other permanent public harbor improvements, or shall have given to the Secretary of War assurance satisfactory to him that the expenditure of the $2,000,000 aforesaid will be completed within a time satisfactory to him and not later than three years from the passage of this amendment."

Hudson River Channel, New York Harbor, N. Y.: Of the amount heretofore appropriated or authorized the unused balance of the estimate for removing the shoal off Hamburg Avenue, Hoboken, to a depth of 40 feet may be applied to such further dredging to that depth as may be required for the safe maneuvering of the deep-draft vessels using that part of the harbor.

Harbor at New York: So much as may be necessary of any appropriation or apportionment made for specific portions of New York Harbor and its immediate tributaries may be allotted by the Secretary of War for the maintenance of these waterways by the collection and removal of drift.

Harlem River, N. Y.: The Secretary of War is authorized and directed to cede to the State of New York all the lands heretofore acquired by the United States in the bed of that part of the Harlem River lying outside of the channel lines proposed for the Harlem River improvement in project No. 3, printed in House Document No. 557, Sixty-second Congress, second session, to a new bulkhead line to be established by the Secretary of War along the lines of said channel according to the project: Provided, That the cession hereby authorized and made shall take effect only upon the cession to the United States by the State of New York of the land and land under water with any improvements thereon lying between the channel lines proposed in said project: Provided further, That possession of the land hereby authorized to be ceded by the United States to the State of New York shall not be surrendered to said State until and only when the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army shall have certified that the new channel is open for navigation and that the land ceded is no longer necessary for the right of way of the Harlem River Ship Canal.

St. Jones River, Del.: The provisos attached to the items making appropriation for the improvement of St. Jones River, Del., in the river and harbor acts of June 25, 1910, and February 27, 1911, are hereby modified to read as follows: Provided, That no part of said amount shall be expended for the excavation of any cut-off until a satisfactory title to the land required for that cut-off shall have been transferred to the United States, free of cost, and the United States shall have been released from all claims for damages arising from the proposed diversion of the stream.

Inland waterway between Rehoboth Bay and Delaware Bay, Del.: The Secretary of War is hereby authorized to secure the condemnation of a right of way through the tracks of the Delaware, Maryland & Virginia Railway Co. for said inland waterway where the line of said waterway intersects said railroad tracks, and any funds appropriated or allotted for improving said waterway are hereby made available for paying the award that may be made in said proceedings.

Pascagoula Harbor, Miss.: The paragraph in the river and harbor act, approved March 4, 1913, providing for the improvement of harbor at Pascagoula, Miss., is hereby amended to read as follows: "Pascagoula Harbor, Miss.: For maintenance of improvement of channel at the mouths of Pascagoula and Dog Rivers, and improving channel through Horn Island Pass, Mississippi Sound, Pascagoula River, and Dog River, in accordance with the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers and the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors in report dated February 10, 1914, and printed in Rivers and Harbors Committee Document No. 12, Sixty-third Congress, second session, $110,000: Provided, That local interests shall furnish space for public wharves, both at Moss Point and at Pascagoula, 800 feet in length and of such width as may be satisfactory to the Secretary of War."

The Sabine-Neches Canal, Tex., from the Port Arthur Ship Canal to the mouth of Sabine River, the Neches River up to the town of Beaumont, and the Sabine River up to the town of Orange, as provided for in the river and harbor act of February 27, 1911:

That the channels which the Beaumont navigation district, or other local interests, and the Orange navigation district, or other local interests, are required, by the aforesaid act, to maintain for a term of three years free of cost to the United States are hereby defined as, respectively, the channel from the mouth of the Neches River up to Beaumont, Tex., and the channel from the mouth of the Neches River up to Orange, Tex.: Provided, That nothing herein shall be construed as relieving said Beaumont navigation district of its obligation to provide for the operation and maintenance of the guard lock without cost to the United States as required by said river and harbor act of February 27, 1911.

Cumberland River above Nashville, Tenn.: The balances remaining unexpended from the appropriations made for the construction of locks and dams heretofore authorized, and no longer needed for said purpose, are hereby made available for maintenance of improvement by open-channel work on that part of the river above Nashville.

St. Marys River at the falls, Mich.: That so much as may be necessary of the unexpended balance of appropriations heretofore made for the construction of the new third lock may, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, be applied to the deepening and enlargement of the tailrace of the United States power plant, in order to increase the capacity of said plant.

Reservoirs at the headwaters of the Mississippi River: That the provisions in the river and harbor acts of June 25, 1910, and February 27, 1911, authorizing and making appropriations for the construction of a canal between Lake Winnibigoshish and Leech Lake, are hereby repealed.

Swinomish Slough, Wash.: That for the purpose of aiding in the improvement and maintenance of the channel across Padilla Bay, and securing the cooperation of local interests therein, the Secretary of War may authorize said local interests to construct a system of dikes and dredge along the said channel, and in connection therewith to close the adjacent streams known as Indian Slough and Telegraph Slough, all in accordance with such plans as may be approved by him on the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers: Provided, That no expense shall be incurred by the United States on account of said improvement.

SEC. 3. That where separate works or items are consolidated in this or subsequent river and harbor acts and an aggregate amount is appropriated therefor, any balances remaining to the credit of the separate works or items may be transferred to the credit of the corresponding aggregate amounts appropriated for the consolidated items, and the amounts appropriated or transferred shall, unless otherwise expressed, be expended in securing maintenance and improvement according to the respective projects adopted by Congress, after giving due regard to the respective needs of traffic. The allotments to the respective works consolidated shall be made by the Secretary of War upon recommendations by the Chief of Engineers. In case such works or items are consolidated and separate amounts are given with each project, the amounts so named shall be expended upon such separate projects unless, in the discretion of the Secretary of War, another allotment or division should be made of the same. Any balances remaining to the credit of the consolidated items shall be carried to the credit of the respective aggregate amounts appropriated for the consolidated items.

SEC. 4. That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized to receive from private parties such funds as may be contributed by them to be expended in connection with funds appropriated by the United States for any authorized work of public improvement of rivers and harbors whenever such work and expenditure may be considered by the Chief of Engineers as advantageous to the interests of navigation: Provided, That when contributions heretofore or hereafter made by local interests for river and harbor improvements, in accordance with specific requirements or under general authority of Congress, are in excess of the actual cost of the work contemplated and properly chargeable to such contributions, such excess contributions may, with the approval of the Secretary of War, be returned to the proper representatives of the contributing interests, unless the provision of law under which the contribution is made requires that the entire contribution be retained by the United States.

SEC. 5. That in the preparation of projects under this and subsequent river and harbor acts, unless otherwise expressed, the channel depths referred to shall be understood to signify the depth at mean low water in tidal waters tributary to the Atlantic and Gulf coasts and at mean lower low water in tidal waters tributary to the Pacific coast and the mean depth for a continuous period of 15 days of the lowest water in the navigation season of any year in rivers and nontidal channels, and the channel dimensions specified shall be understood to admit of such increase at the entrances, bends, sidings, and turning places as may be necessary to allow of the free movement of boats.

SEC. 6. That the act of Congress approved March 4, 1909, providing that all tugboats using the Potomac River, where the same is spanned by the new railway and new highway bridges, be equipped with devices for lowering their smokestacks, is hereby amended to include "power boats," meaning any boat, vessel, or craft propelled by machinery, whether the machinery be only principal or auxiliary power of propulsion; and the provisions and requirements of the said act are hereby made applicable to "power boats" as herein defined.

SEC. 7. That the Secretary of War is hereby authorized, empowered, and directed to define and establish anchorage grounds for vessels in all harbors, rivers, bays, and other navigable waters of the United States whenever it is manifest to the said Secretary that the maritime or commercial interests of the United States require such anchorage grounds for safe navigation and the establishment of such anchorage grounds shall have been recommended by the Chief of Engineers, and to adopt suitable rules and regulations in relation thereto; and such rules and regulations shall be enforced by the Revenue-Cutter Service under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury: Provided, That at ports or places where there is no revenue cutter available such rules and regulations may be enforced by the Chief of Engineers under the direction of the Secretary of War. In the event of the violation of any such rules and regulations by the owner, master, or person in charge of any vessel, such owner, master, or person in charge of such vessel shall be liable to a penalty of $100; and the said vessel may be holden for the payment of such penalty, and may be seized and proceeded against summarily by libel for the recovery of the same in any United States district court for the district within which such vessel may be and in the name of the officer designated by the Secretary of War.

SEC. 8. That section 5 of the river and harbor act approved July 25, 1912, as amended by the river and harbor act approved March 4, 1913, be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows:

"SEC. 5. That the Secretary of War is authorized and directed to have prepared and transmitted to Congress at the earliest practicable date a compilation of preliminary examinations, surveys, projects, and appropriations for works of river and harbor improvement similar in general form and subject matter to that which was prepared in accordance with section 13 of the river and harbor act approved June 13, 1902, and printed in House Document No. 421, Fifty-seventh Congress, second session: Provided, That the report to be prepared in accordance with this provision shall be a revised edition of the report printed in the document above mentioned, extended to the end of the Sixty-third Congress."

SEC. 9. That the limit of time fixed by the river and harbor act of June 13, 1902, for the removal of a temporary dam and the construction of a lock in Bayou Lafourche, La., by the Atchafalaya Basin and Lafourche Basin Levee Boards of the State of Louisiana, is hereby extended to July 1, 1917.

SEC. 10. That the provisions of section 5 of the legislative, executive, and judicial appropriation act approved July 16, 1914, shall not be construed as applying to the purchase, maintenance, and repair of motor boats, trucks, and other vehicles needed in carrying out the various projects adopted by Congress for the improvement, preservation, and protection of rivers and harbors.

SEC. 11. That the Mississippi River Commission shall ascertain and report as far as possible what amounts have been contributed or are now being contributed by districts or localities on the Mississippi River benefited by the construction of levees or other improvements, the amount of bonds issued by such localities, the amount of bonds outstanding, the taxable value of the lands and other property within the levee and other districts issuing bonds; also whether there are any such districts or localities upon said river or near to it in a situation to be benefited by the improvement of said river, which are making no contributions toward the improvement thereof.

SEC. 12. That the provision in the river and harbor act of June 25, 1910, as given in volume 2 of the Compilation of Laws relating to the Improvement of Rivers and Harbors, published in 1913, pages 1420 and 1421, and beginning with the words "For the construction of the waterway from Rockport, Ill., by way of the Desplaines and Illinois Rivers, to the mouth of said Illinois River, $1,000,000," and ending with the words "reports herein called for, shall be submitted to the Chief of Engineers not later than November 1, 1910, reviewed by the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, and submitted to Congress not later than the first Monday in December, 1910," be, and the same is hereby, repealed, and the amount remaining unexpended thereon shall be covered back into the Treasury.

SEC. 13. That Swan Creek, a stream lying within the limits of the city of Toledo, State of Ohio, is hereby declared to be not a navigable waterway of the United States within the meaning of the laws enacted by Congress for the preservation and protection of such waterways, and the consent of Congress is hereby given for the filling in of said creek by the local authorities.

SEC. 14. That the following projects now under improvement shall be reexamined, in accordance with the law for the original examination of rivers and harbors, with a view to obtaining reports whether the adopted projects shall be modified or improvements abandoned:

Inland waterway from Norfolk to Beaufort Inlet, N. C.
Coosa River, Ga. and Ala.
St. Lucie Inlet, Fla.
Brazos River, Tex., from Old Washington to Waco.
Red River, La., Ark., Tex., and Okla.
Ouachita River, Ark. and La.
Arkansas River, Ark. and Okla.
Tennessee River, Tenn., Ala., and Ky.
Fox River, Wis.
Missouri River, Mo., mouth to Kansas City.

And the Chief of Engineers is directed to make a report upon any other projects, river or harbor, the further improvement of which under present conditions is undesirable, or in which modifications of the plans or projects should be made.

SEC. 15. The Secretary of War is hereby authorized and directed to cause preliminary examinations and surveys to be made at the following-named localities, and a sufficient sum to pay the cost thereof, as well as those included in section 14, may be allotted from the amount provided in this act: Provided, That allotments of such amounts as may be necessary may be made toward the completion of examinations and surveys heretofore authorized and for such other contingent expenses as are usually paid from the appropriation for "Examinations, surveys, and contingencies," to wit:

Youghiogheny River, up to West Newton.
Jonesport Harbor, Me., including Moosabec Bar.
Monhegan Harbor, Me.
Mouth of Cape Neddick River, York, Me.
York Harbor, Me.
Machias River, Me.
South Bristol Harbor, Me.
Isle au Haut Harbor, Me.
Hendricks Harbor, Me.
Portland Harbor, Me., including the obstruction known as Witch Rock.
Gotts Island Channel, Me.
Belfast Harbor, Me.
Indian Creek, Vinal Haven, Me.
Portsmouth Harbor, N. H.
Merrimac River, from Lowell, Mass., to Manchester, N. H.
Lynn Harbor, Mass.
Mystic River, Mass., from the mouth of Island End River to Woburn, or as far as practicable.
Mystic River, Mass., below the Island End River, with a view to widening the channel.
Onset Bay, Mass., for the deepening and widening of the existing channel from Onset to the vicinity of Wickets Island, for the construction of an anchorage basin in Onset Bay, and for the construction of a channel between Wickets Island and Onset Island to the Cape Cod Canal channel above Monument Beach.

During the reading,

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I submit the conference report on the Post Office appropriation bill (H. R. 19906), and ask for its present consideration.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. STAFFORD. A conference report being under consideration——

The SPEAKER. There is no conference report under consideration.

Mr. SPARKMAN. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. SPARKMAN. I desire to know how the gentleman from Tennessee gets in.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee gets in because he has a conference report.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, it will take only a minute, as the gentleman from Tennessee wants to get back to conference.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a reading of the conference report.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The conference report was read, as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1513).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19906), making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference, beg to report to their respective Houses as follows: That they have come to no agreement upon the amendments of the Senate.

JOHN A. MOON,
D. E. FINLEY,
MARTIN B. MADDEN,
Managers on the part of the House.
J. H. BANKHEAD,
CLAUDE A. SWANSON,
BOIES PENROSE,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, while the report shows a total disagreement on Senate amendments, I think it is proper to say to the House we will likely agree upon all the amendments as soon as the Senate can have an opportunity to vote upon some on which it desires to vote, and for that reason the conference comes in the shape in which it was read. I move that the House further insist on its disagreement to Senate amendments and ask for a further conference.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee moves that the House further insist on its disagreement to Senate amendments and ask for a conference. Is there objection. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The SPEAKER announced the following conferees: Mr. MOON, Mr. FINLEY, and Mr. MADDEN.

The SPEAKER. The Chair announces that copies of these Senate amendments can be procured here now. They could not be gotten this morning.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Crockett, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to bills of the following titles:

S. 7597. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and of wars other than the Civil War, and to certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors;

S. 7212. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and of wars other than the Civil War, and to certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors;

S. 7509. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and of wars other than the Civil War, and to certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors;

S. 6981. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and of wars other than the Civil War, and to certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors;

S. 7566. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors; and

S. 7598. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 7682. An act to repeal sections 35 to 49, inclusive, of the act of June 30, 1898, concerning mixed flour, as amended by act of April 12, 1902.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, in order that there may be no confusion in the future, I ask unanimous consent that when there is other intervening business pending gentlemen having charge of appropriation bills may take them up as a matter of right and suspend action on pending legislation until the appropriation bills and conference reports are disposed of.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, what does the gentleman mean by saying "as a matter of right"?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I mean to lay aside as a matter of privilege.

Mr. MANN. I know, but take the Indian bill, and the gentleman would have to ask unanimous consent, anyhow. Of course unanimous-consent requests are in order at any time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My idea was that we can run along with business such as that pending before the House, and give it a free latitude if there is an understanding that it shall be laid aside under this rule I am proposing whenever a conference report or appropriation bill is prepared to come before the House.

Mr. MANN. It is done by unanimous consent, and a conference report has the privilege.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. You can not lay aside bills that are pending, without unanimous consent. It might save some trouble in the future of one man holding up a proposition if he wants to do so, if we agreed to this now. And it gives more latitude in the House to proceed with other business.

Mr. MANN. I do not know that I have any objection, but the Indian appropriation bill is the only appropriation bill which has not been sent to conference. I do not know whether it will be sent to conference by unanimous consent or not. I would not want to settle that question in this way.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. That is not the request. I am not asking unanimous consent to give the right to anything, but simply unanimous consent to lay aside other pending legislation.

Mr. MANN. It will have to be done by unanimous consent, anyhow.

The SPEAKER. What is the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. My request was that when a conference report or an appropriation bill comes before the House it shall immediately have the right of way over any other pending legislation, not to interfere with the usual requests for unanimous consent, but that it may be brought up for consideration and without objection.

Mr. MANN. A conference report has that right now.

The SPEAKER. We have three things pyramided here now. First, the gentleman from Oklahoma has a measure pending on a motion to suspend the rules. We are about half done with that. Then the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SPARKMAN] came in with the river and harbor bill, and then a conference report came in, so that we have all three of them pending at once. But the Chair will put the request of the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. MANN. I do not think it is necessary, and I hope the gentleman will withdraw his request.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If there is objection, I will withdraw it.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A message, in writing, from the President of the United States, was communicated to the House of Representatives by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the reports of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to bills of the following titles:

H. R. 21089. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 20643. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; and

H. R. 21218. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors.

PORTO RICO (H. DOC. NO. 1662).

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States:

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

As required by section 32 of the act of Congress approved April 12, 1900, entitled "An act temporarily to provide revenues and a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes," I transmit herewith certified copies of franchises granted by the Executive Council of Porto Rico, which are described in the accompanying letter from the Secretary of War transmitting them to me.

WOODROW WILSON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, March 3, 1915.

The SPEAKER. The message and documents will be referred to the Committee on Insular Affairs and the message will be ordered printed.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Clerk resumed and completed the reading of the Senate amendment to the river and harbor appropriation bill, as set forth above.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the consideration of the Senate amendment to the river and harbor bill may be laid aside temporarily.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that the consideration of the river and harbor bill Senate amendment be laid aside temporarily. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

UNALLOTTED LANDS OF CREEK INDIANS.

The SPEAKER. The pending question is the motion to suspend the rules and pass House joint resolution 380, the motion of the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MURRAY].

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Speaker, I yield one minute to my colleague [Mr. FERRIS].

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, the Murray resolution is a department resolution asking to withdraw about 2,800 acres of land in the Cushing oil field of Oklahoma, so that it may be reserved for the Creek Tribe of Indians of the Creek Nation. Certain citizens down there are trying to have $25,000,000 or $30,000,000 worth of oil land allotted to four or five allottees. It should not be done. The department does not want it done. The department was before the committee protesting and asking that it be not done. If the resolution of my colleague [Mr. MURRAY] does not pass, under the general allotment act the department will be forced to allot these lands to four or five individual Indian allottees, four of whom are negroes, as I am informed. If this resolution does pass, the money from this oil field may be preserved for the entire tribe. Any man who has looked into this question carefully will understand that there is a wrong side and a right side to this question, and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MURRAY] is trying to carry out in good faith what the department thinks ought to be done, and what the men who know the most about it know ought to be done. There ought not to be a dissenting vote on this proposition.

The passage of the resolution saves these valuable lands for the tribe. Its failure may mean their loss. It is desired by the department in the strongest terms. It is absolutely what ought to be done. I ask the House to adopt the Murray amendment.

Mr. MURRAY. Will the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] consume some of his time?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS].

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. Speaker, if the House will bear with me I will undertake to make a brief statement of the facts in this case, for the facts of the case constitute the merits of the opposition to the pending resolution. This resolution is intended, so far as it can operate to that effect, to prevent five citizens of the Creek Indian Tribe from taking their allotments in kind, in the tribal property. Why should this House undertake to do anything of this sort? There are in the Creek Tribe 18,716 members. Of that number, 18,711 have already received their allotments in the tribal property.

Mr. MURRAY. The gentleman does not state that as a fact, does he?

Mr. SAUNDERS. I take it from the report.

Mr. MURRAY. Fifty-eight full bloods last winter were given $800 each.

Mr. SAUNDERS. I only know what is contained in the report. I have not gone outside of the report submitted by members of the committee. That report is to the effect that there are 18,716 members of the Creek Tribe. I do not know what proportion of these members are full bloods, or what proportion are quarter bloods, or bloods of other degrees. But the gentleman's suggestion is not an argument in favor of this resolution. There are varying degrees of blood among the members of all of the Indian tribes, but that does not affect their citizenship, or right to allotment. The fact remains according to the report that 18,711 members of the Creek Tribe have received their allotments in the tribal property.

It is claimed that this residual land may be more valuable than some that has already been allotted. That may be true. I have some knowledge from service on the Indian Committee of the allotments of the Creek property, and I know that many of the allotments heretofore made, are of immensely greater value than the valuation placed on the same for the purposes of division.

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SAUNDERS. I am sorry that I can not yield. I have only a few minutes left. But this resolution is not intended to correct the inequalities of existing allotments. On the contrary, it perpetuates the present injustice. The very people who have heretofore received allotments that have proved to be as valuable as the proposed allotments in the residual tribal land, will not only hold onto those allotments carrying as they do a value much in excess of the appraised valuation, but will actually come into participation in the distribution of the proceeds of the land to be sold under this resolution. Such a thing should not be allowed. There is no justice in it.

Why should the five remaining members of the tribe who have sought in good faith to exercise the right heretofore enjoyed by thousands of their brethren, and secure allotments in the tribal property, precisely as those allotments have been extended to others, be denied the enjoyment of that right, whether the allotments proposed to be taken, are more valuable than some, or less valuable than others that have been heretofore made?

This is an effort by law to prevent something being done by these tribal members, which has already been done in thousands of instances, that is so far as this resolution can operate to secure such a result.

Permit me to call the attention of the House to one further fact, on the law side of this situation. Should this resolution be adopted, it will not operate of course to deprive the five persons in interest of any vested rights. That can not be done. But the resolution may in one view of the case deprive these parties of the opportunity to secure allotments. These particular tribal members have sought in good faith to secure their allotments. They became involved in litigation in respect of their first selections and the court in the result ruled in favor of other Creek claimants. Thereupon they made another selection in the lands now in controversy, in the effort to secure allotments. The people who won out in the first litigation, secured lands that are stated to be immensely valuable. Having lost out in the first selection, these claimants are now involved in litigation over their second selection. That litigation may be decided in one of two ways. First the court may brush aside the prior claimants, and hold that the five tribal members in question are entitled to the selections which they have made. In that event, this resolution, even if adopted, will not operate to disturb them, or oust them of their established rights. On the other hand, the court may hold that while the incumbrance on this residual land is not sufficient to hinder the same from being allotted, yet the steps taken by the five would-be allottees have not been technically conformable to law, so that they are not entitled to patents for the allotments which they have selected. This decision would leave the applicants free to make their selections in the same land, or any other tribal land. But at this point the resolution, if adopted would come into operation, and require all of these residual lands to be sold, without regard to any members of the tribe desiring to secure allotments. Hence these members would have the right to allotments, but no land in which the allotments could be taken. They would be thereby deprived of the exercise of a right enjoyed by thousands of their brethren. This is the effect intended by this resolution under the circumstances indicated. Why should this step be taken by the House? Why should we take this right from the five remaining members of this tribe, four of whom are minors? Possibly this fact of minority may explain the reason why these parties have heretofore had so much difficulty in securing their allotments.

Mr. BUTLER. If these five people against whom this contention is made have rights in the court, can not the court settle those rights without our interference?

Mr. SAUNDERS. Certainly, but the courts may hold that the present applications are not in form, and that new applications must be made. In that event this resolution if agreed to, will take from these parties the opportunity to take their allotments in land. That is what this resolution is intended to do, manifestly unjust as it is.

Mr. CAMPBELL. If there were in the Creek Nation to-day 50 allotments worth a million dollars apiece, would the gentleman be in favor of turning over the 50 allotments to 50 Creek Indians?

Mr. SAUNDERS. Why not? The 18,711 have received their allotments aggregating in value many millions of dollars. They do not propose to disgorge anything. Why should they be allowed to hinder the remaining members from exercising the right which the law has given to all the members, and which has been heretofore exercised to the very great advantage of the other allottees? I understand that the estimate of value placed on these residual lands, is grossly exaggerated.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Virginia has expired.

VALIDATION OF CERTAIN TOWN SITES IN THE STATE OF MONTANA.

The SPEAKER. There was a Senate bill (No. 4180) passed a little while ago relating to town sites in the State of Montana, and there is an identical bill on the House Calendar (H. R. 20498) to validate title to certain town sites in the State of Montana. Without objection, the House bill will be laid on the table.

There was no objection.

RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. SPARKMAN] asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the river and harbor bill (H. R. 20189) with Senate amendments, and moves to concur in the Senate amendments. Is there objection?

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I desire to ask the gentleman from Florida about some of these provisions. The Senate put in a provision undertaking to declare nonnavigable Swan Creek, which runs through the city of Toledo. My understanding is that a bill for that purpose has been pending before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, that there have been filed a great many protests against it, and that there is considerable opposition to such an enactment. I would like to know if the gentleman's committee has considered the matter or knows anything about it, or whether it is one of the terms made by which the bill can get through Congress with the permission of certain Senators.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I really knew nothing about Swan Creek until I saw it in the first Senate print. I then made a hurried investigation of the amendment now before us and ascertained that there was at least one person objecting to the proposition to declare it nonnavigable, while many people directly interested seem to favor its discontinuance as a navigable stream. I am rather under the impression from what I have learned that it ought to be done, and that no great harm will be done thereby. I will say that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SHERWOOD] is no doubt thoroughly familiar with the subject, and in case unanimous consent is given he can well explain the matter. Indeed I will now ask that he be permitted to do so, and at this time.

Mr. SHERLEY. I am willing to hear the explanation of the gentleman from Ohio, but I am not willing to waive my rights by giving unanimous consent first. I want to call attention to a number of things.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman from Kentucky yield for a question?

Mr. SHERLEY. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Does not the gentleman think that it is entirely proper and duly courteous for the Senate to strike out all after the enacting clause, strike out every item that the House has inserted, and then insert an item which has no relation to the bill, because it is in Ohio?

Mr. SHERLEY. That is just the point. I think this is the best illustration of Government by permission of one man that the Congress has ever seen. I would rather see river and harbor bills fail forever than to permit any one Senator to arrogate to himself the right to determine what shall be in those bills, and to serve notice on Congress that we are to accept what he sees fit, and particularly to have put into a bill a matter that is local to himself.

Mr. MANN. Of course, I did not have any Senator in mind.

Mr. SHERLEY. Well, I am trying to keep within the rules myself. [Laughter.]

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I will say that if Gen. SHERWOOD would like to make an explanation I for one would like to hear him, because I think he can throw much light on the question.

Mr. SHERWOOD. How much time will the gentleman yield me?

Mr. WHITACRE. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I understand unanimous consent is asked that Gen. SHERWOOD may speak?

Mr. FOSTER. Oh, no.

The SPEAKER. He has the right to speak whenever the time comes.

Mr. WHITACRE. I understood that unanimous consent was asked.

The SPEAKER. Did anyone ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. SHERWOOD] should speak?

Mr. WHITACRE. That is what I understood.

Mr. SPARKMAN. No.

Mr. FOSTER. He is rising to speak under a reservation of a right to object to the request of the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I have just requested him to answer the question propounded to me by the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY].

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY] is entirely mistaken about one Senator trying to dictate to the Congress of the United States. This amendment did not originate with the Senator from Ohio. The action originated with the engineers of the War Department. I have here a map prepared by a competent engineer of the city of Toledo, Mr. Sherman, showing Swan Creek, which is marked in red ink. That territory there [pointing to the map] represents a portion of the city of Toledo, with a population in that particular district of about 40,000. The sewage of these 40,000 people has been drained into that creek. During the summer season, when the creek is low (it is a slow and tortuous stream), the current is insufficient to carry away the sewage and it emits poisonous vapors, and the city board of health of the city of Toledo and the State board of health of the State of Ohio, after a thorough investigation, have declared Swan Creek to be a nuisance and a menace to the public health of the city of Toledo.

In a modest way for the last 10 years I have been trying to represent that district in Congress, and I ought to know, as I have lived in Toledo for half a century, something about the conditions there. I slept on the ground as a private soldier in 1861 of what is now the most thickly settled portion of the city of Toledo. The city of Toledo asked the War Department to make a thorough investigation, and that department sent one of the most competent engineers and he made a thorough investigation and made a report that Swan Creek was not a navigable stream, and, further, that it was a menace to the public health of Toledo. That report was made to the War Department, and the Secretary of War approved it and wrote a letter, which I have in my possession, recommending this legislation. This bill that the gentleman from Kentucky thinks was prepared by an Ohio Senator was prepared by the engineers of the War Department.

Mr. SHERLEY. If the gentleman will yield there, I did not say——

Mr. SHERWOOD. And I have the letter of the Secretary of War recommending it.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I did not say that it was prepared by any particular person; but all of us know the condition that has confronted this Congress for two years past, whereby under the peculiar rules that obtain in another body it is within the power of an individual Member to make terms upon which legislation for the Nation shall be enacted, and it is an outrage to the rights of the American people. [Applause.] And here was an illustration of a matter that never would have gotten in if somebody else had wanted it instead of particular individuals who were making terms as to what should be passed in the nature of a river and harbor bill.

Mr. SHERWOOD. The gentleman from Kentucky, in order to punish a United States Senator, is proposing to punish the whole city of Toledo of 200,000 people?

Mr. SHERLEY. I am not proposing to punish anybody, but I am proposing that a bill which has been in the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, with opposition to it, and which has not been reported out, shall not be put on a river and harbor bill as a rider without some explanation of why it is done.

Mr. SHERWOOD. And I am giving the explanation.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. What is the attitude of the city council of the city of Toledo in reference to this?

Mr. SHERWOOD. Here is another proposition entirely separate. The Government of the United States simply declares by this amendment, which was prepared in the War Department, that this is not a navigable stream, and that it is turned over to the city of Toledo. The opposition about which the gentleman talks is on an elimination scheme. There are three or four schemes proposed, whether to straighten out Swan Creek and make it a covered instead of an open sewer or to eliminate the stream and divert it upstream to the Maumee River. The people of the city of Toledo are divided upon that proposition, and there is where these protests come from. It never has been a navigable stream for 50 years, and the Government has never recognized it as a navigable stream and never will. The Government never spent a dollar on it. It is a menace to the public health of the city of Toledo, and there ought not to be a bit of opposition to this amendment, no matter where it originates. The Congress of the United States is made up of 435 Members, and are they going to punish the city of Toledo in order to get even with a Senator at the other end of the Capitol? Is that to be the policy of this Congress?

Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. SHERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. I am advised that every member of the city council of Toledo is opposed to this.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Oh, no; they are opposed to the elimination of Swan Creek.

Mr. GORDON. They are opposed to it simply because they oppose the preliminary action of declaring it to be a nonnavigable stream, because that will enable some railroad company to condemn it as a right of way.

Mr. SHERWOOD. There is nothing to that at all, so far as I know.

Mr. GORDON. If it is a public nuisance the city board of health or the State board of health could abolish it.

Mr. SHERWOOD. How could they abolish it, when it is now under Government control? Let me explain to the gentleman. The council of Toledo may be opposed to this elimination scheme. This bill only allows the city of Toledo to take what action they see fit. It does not prescribe any policy whatever.

Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. SHERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. GORDON. Is it not a fact that the city of Toledo has invested over $100,000 in docks along this waterway?

Mr. SHERWOOD. I do not know. Perhaps they have.

Mr. GORDON. Which they want to abandon——

Mr. SHERWOOD. If the city of Toledo has invested $100,000, the city of Toledo will not destroy its own property. The city of Toledo has docks, of course, and if the city of Toledo were allowed to take its own action, do you suppose it would destroy its own property? That proposition is simply preposterous.

Mr. BATHRICK. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. BATHRICK. I understand that the city of Toledo is not divided on the proposition of this stream being declared by the Government nonnavigable.

Mr. SHERWOOD. That is my understanding.

Mr. BATHRICK. But what they shall do with it afterwards?

Mr. SHERWOOD. What they shall do with it afterwards the Government of the United States will have nothing whatever to do, because it is turned over to the control of the city of Toledo on the recommendation of the Secretary of War.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH. If it is not a navigable stream, why are the docks built there?

Mr. SHERWOOD. They were not built by the Government. They are a private enterprise there. They built some docks here [indicating]. There is about 7 or 8 feet of water up here. I do not know what they built the docks for.

Mr. SAMUEL W. SMITH. There are about 1,000 feet of docks, are they not?

Mr. SHERWOOD. I do not know whether there is or not. I think not, but that has not a thing to do with the question.

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. SHERLEY. Is it not true that the city of Toledo owns 1,000 feet of wharfage on Swan Creek?

Mr. SHERWOOD. I do not know whether they do or not.

Mr. SHERLEY. There is information to that effect from the city of Toledo.

Mr. SHERWOOD. The docks are turned over to the city of Toledo, to do with as they see fit, but that has nothing to do with this question at all.

Mr. WHITACRE. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. SHERWOOD. Certainly.

Mr. WHITACRE. Is it not true that docks are being used there on that creek every day of the year?

Mr. SHERWOOD. No; I do not think so.

Mr. WHITACRE. Then you are not advised of the situation?

Mr. SHERWOOD. I have a statement here of the city engineer. By the way, there is a petition filed containing over 6,000 names in favor of this action, which induced the War Department to make an investigation. The question of docks has nothing to do with the question. If the city has docks, this amendment does not interfere with them. They can do as they see fit with them. There is no vitality to that question of the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WHITACRE]. The only question is this: Is this a navigable stream? The War Department says it is not, and they officially declare it is not a navigable stream.

I submit an editorial of the Toledo Blade of February 22, the oldest daily in northwestern Ohio and a paper of large circulation and influence. This editorial is a fair statement of public opinion in Toledo on the so-called Burton amendment to the river and harbor bill. It will be seen by this editorial that no elimination scheme is involved in the amendment. It is a simple proposition, as I have stated and repeated, to give the city of Toledo control over a creek within its own boundary:

CITY CONTROL OF SWAN CREEK.

Senator BURTON has offered an amendment to the rivers and harbors bill calling for the release of the Government control over the navigation of Swan Creek at Toledo.

The amendment is, of course, in the interest of the movement to cut a new channel for the lower part of Swan Creek. Until the Government withdraws its proprietorship in the stream and the State permits an alteration in the course of the canal, nothing at all can be done toward carrying out the elimination project.

Whether the scheme is to be adopted or not makes no difference to Toledo as to the desirability of the final passage of Mr. BURTON'S amendment. We believe it would be a distinct advantage to the city to have the stream under its own control. There is no need of the jealous Government surveillance of a waterway of so small a size. So long as it is used for any purposes of navigation, the city will continue to swing the bridges, provide the lights, and do whatever other things it has to do under Federal command. Should elimination be decided on, the first necessary step will have been taken. Should the scheme fail to go through, affairs with Swan Creek will continue without any change whatever, so far as its use as a waterway is concerned. There are many things that might be done to and for Swan Creek besides eliminating it. If some day it should be expedient for the city to undertake one of these improvements, it will be a great saving in time, a considerable saving in red tape, to go ahead with it without first consulting the desires and accommodating ourselves to the moods of the powers at Washington.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the regular order.

Mr. SHERLEY. If we can not have this matter discussed, I will object. I want to tell the gentleman from Alabama——

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SPARKMAN]?

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. WHITACRE. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Arkansas rise?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. I rise for the purpose of reserving the right to object.

The SPEAKER. Objection has already been made.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, inasmuch as I have been so interrupted, I want to say to the gentleman from Kentucky——

Mr. COOPER. Regular order, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. It has already been objected to.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is a suspension pending, and that that is not in order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MURRAY] is recognized.

UNALLOTTED LANDS OF CREEK INDIANS.

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Kansas, inasmuch as he has only two speakers and I have only two, to yield to one of them now and proceed.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON].

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SHERWOOD. I want to print editorials from all the papers——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman can put what he pleases in his remarks.

The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] is recognized.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the passage of this resolution at this time. It is in thorough keeping with the history of the Oklahoma delegation in Congress when it comes to asking for legislation for one of the tribes that lives in that State. It is in thorough keeping with the history of the Creek Nation and other Indian nations when they want to enrich their own coffers and their own tribe at the expense of a few individual members of the tribe. It is in thorough keeping with the history of attorneys who represent tribes in trying to do some spectacular thing in order to increase their salary or obtain some contingent fee they might get under contract from the tribe. What is proposed to do here? I know nothing about the facts except as revealed in the minority views and in the report of the committee, but I glean the facts to be that it is proposed to take the allotment of five poor individual Creek Indians, because perchance the value of their allotment has increased to a very large extent, in order that the funds may go into the coffers of the Creek Nation and enrich the nation. The whole scheme is gotten up at the instance of the attorney for the Creek Nation and is without warrant so far as we are concerned here. Here is what the attorney for the Creek Nation says, and this is what started the wheels of legislation moving here to deprive these five allottees of their allotment. He says:

> I am seriously of the opinion that it is entirely within the discretion, if not the plain duty, of the Secretary to reserve these lands, by reason of their great value, from general allotment under present laws; but this resolution is intended to, and I think will, remove any doubt as to this question.

And that is from a letter to Mr. C. D. CARTER, a Representative of this body.

But this resolution is intended to, and I think will, remove any doubt as to the question. Here is the attorney for the Creek Nation saying that under present laws you already have the right to withhold these lands from allotment. And yet they come here and ask you to vote upon a complicated matter like this, a question that has been litigated in the courts for a long time, and is still in litigation. I will tell you what is the matter.

Mr. COOPER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I can not yield. I have only three minutes. I will tell you what is the matter. There are over 18,000 members of the Creek Nation. A great many of them vote out there. They have more political influence than the five little fellows here that they desire to hold the allotment from. [Applause.]

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Speaker, I will ask to be notified when I have occupied three minutes.

If the two gentlemen from Virginia who have spoken here were not lawyers I would have a reason to believe that they were honestly mistaken; but these men are lawyers, and they know that no resolution of this Congress can affect a lawsuit. They are trying to deceive enough to have one-third of this House defeat this resolution, knowing that it requires two-thirds to carry it.

This resolution does not seek to take a dollar away from anybody. It is true that 18,000 members of the tribe have received allotments, part of them in land and part of them in money. The act passed last year enrolled several hundred, and they were given $800 each, and not a foot of land. Fifty-two of them, known as the Pollock roll, were full bloods, and they were so ignorant that they did not know how to allot, and there were many of them old men.

Yet these gentlemen here stand up and talk in favor of a lot of oil men who sit in this gallery, trying to gobble up these five allotments, worth millions. A few days ago you saw an unsigned circular which was sent out by them on this floor. That was gotten up by some oil men in my State. This is not a question whether these five persons, four of them negroes and one Indian, shall have this land. These oil men are the ones in interest, and not the five individuals. There is only one side to this question. After a hearing covering weeks the House committee favored it, the Senate committee favored it, every Member of our delegation favored it; and in reply to the suggestion as to votes, there are not 100 Creek votes in my district, but the stockholders of these oil companies live in my district and they are more powerful than the Indians. But I would not be right or do right if I did not stand here against these rich oil fellows who are trying to rob the tribe of their patrimony. I say again, if you do not pass this resolution now, it will be too late hereafter. You have got to pass it now to give the Secretary authority to withdraw the land, and if you do not do it now it will be too late. If you do not do it, this Government will have to appropriate $3,000,000 later to make that equalization between $800 and $1,040. We propose to give them the $1,040 out of this oil property. We gave those who were enrolled last winter only $800 apiece. We are going to give them the allotment that we gave the others. It is up to you gentlemen. Do you want to stand on the side of a lot of oil grafters who sit in this gallery with their attorneys, or do you want to sit on the side of this Government and on the side of the Creek Indians, who are entitled to this property as against five individuals and their lessees and assigns? [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's three minutes are up.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, speaking of oil grafters, the Black Panther Oil Co., which has a lease approved by the court on the most valuable allotment involved in this resolution and is backing this resolution, which holds a lease that enables them to charge up all the expenses against the ultimate owner of the land, has all others beaten in the grafting business. Mr. Speaker, if I had as rotten a proposition as this resolution, I would call it up in the last hours of the session of Congress, when there is no opportunity to discuss it on the floor of the House.

Mr. BUTLER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Briefly; yes.

Mr. BUTLER. Is there not somewhere on this earth some power that will prevent the Indian being robbed?

Mr. CAMPBELL. A vote "no" on this resolution will help to prevent it. The fact is that the Black Panther Oil Co. has a lease now on the most valuable of this land, and the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. BURKE], together with other gentlemen and myself, signed a letter of protest to the Secretary of the Interior urging him to take the necessary action to cancel that lease. That is the rottenness in this whole business. The other side of it is a bold attempt to prevent five Creek citizens from having their selections matured into title, just as all other Creek citizens have done to the number of 18,711. These five are the only ones left, and the lands proposed to be withdrawn——

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I can not yield.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman declines to yield.

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman ought to yield.

Mr. CAMPBELL. The land proposed to be withdrawn is the only land upon which they can now allot that is worth anything.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. CAMPBELL. I have only four minutes.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. If there is so much corruption on either side, is it not rather dangerous for a man to vote either way?

Mr. CAMPBELL. Why, certainly; but "no" is the safe vote. We spent many weeks in hearings on this matter, and it is now asked that the House of Representatives, with less than a quorum present, pass upon a matter that the gentleman from Oklahoma says involves $30,000,000, after 40 minutes' discussion, giving no man an opportunity of getting at the real facts in the case.

Mr. Speaker, it is dangerous to legislate upon so important a matter under suspension of the rules in the last hours of Congress, and I repeat that if one has something indefensible it is wise to wait, as has the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MURRAY], and call it up in the closing hours of an expiring Congress. The resolution should not pass.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. MURRAY. I yield the remaining time to the gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. BURKE].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Dakota [Mr. BURKE] is recognized for nine minutes.

[Mr. BURKE of South Dakota addressed the House. See Appendix.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from North Dakota has expired. All time has expired.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, in view of the fact that there is an amendment proposed to this joint resolution which has never been printed, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be again reported.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the joint resolution.

There was no objection, and the Clerk again reported the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the joint resolution as amended.

The question was taken.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 122, noes 52.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I demand tellers.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas demands tellers. As many as are in favor of ordering tellers will rise and stand until counted. [After counting.] Thirty-five, not a sufficient number, and tellers are refused.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I think we ought to have a quorum present when considering a matter involving $30,000,000.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman said he thought there ought to be a quorum present. Does that mean that he makes the point of no quorum on the vote?

The SPEAKER. The Chair so construed it. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and twenty-four Members present—a quorum.

So, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the joint resolution was passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carr, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20975) making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 20189, the river and harbor appropriation bill, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida moves to suspend the rules and take from the Speaker's table the river and harbor appropriation bill, with a Senate amendment thereto, and concur in the Senate amendment. Is a second demanded?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida asks unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the gentleman from Florida is entitled to 20 minutes and the gentleman from Arkansas to 20 minutes.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I had hoped that we would not so soon after the last session of Congress be confronted with a proposition appropriating a lump sum for the improvement of our rivers and harbors, but we again have before us, by way of amendment to the bill for that purpose, just such a proposition, along with several others, some of which I approve and some I dislike. But the more important feature is the lump-sum appropriation. The question now is, What are we going to do with the amendment? To my way of looking at the matter there is only one thing for us to do, if we are going to take care of the various projects now under way during the next 16 months, and until another bill can be passed, and that is to adopt this motion; at least, that is the only safe course. I have no idea that we can amend this bill so as to meet the divergent views of the various objectors here and at the other end of the Capitol. I know there are quite a number here who do not favor the Senate amendment and none perhaps like it as a whole. I have several objections to it myself. One is that it contains a lump sum, to be turned over to the War Department for distribution and allotment as the Secretary of War, acting under the advice of the Chief Engineer, may see proper. I do not regard that a wise plan for the improvement of our rivers and harbors. I expressed my objections fully to such legislation when the 1914 bill came back from the Senate and was before this House; hence it is unnecessary that I should repeat them here.

Then there are other objections to the measure. I would not, if I were framing this bill, without further information on the subject, insert the Swan Creek proposition. Certainly I would not have favored such a provision if it had come before me with only the information I had before hearing the remarks of the gentleman from Ohio, Gen. SHERWOOD. I am not sure that I would have done so in any event. Most assuredly——

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPARKMAN. Just one moment. Most assuredly I would not have desired to insert that, or any other provision of no more value to the country at large than is that, in a bill of such great importance to the people and run the risk as we are now doing of defeating the whole measure.

Mr. COOPER. What is the Swan Creek proposition?

Mr. SPARKMAN. It is a proposition to declare nonnavigable a little creek that runs into the Maumee River at Toledo.

Mr. COOPER. That is in Ohio?

Mr. SPARKMAN. Yes.

Mr. COOPER. That is where Senator BURTON lives?

Mr. SPARKMAN. Yes.

Mr. COOPER. At least, he lives in the State of Ohio?

Mr. SPARKMAN. Then there are some other provisions in the amendment to which I would object, and which I would not insert in a bill of this kind. But, Mr. Speaker, I shall not take up the time of the House in a detailed statement of all of the objections I have to this particular amendment.

What I wish to say now is that, in my judgment, we would get nowhere by carrying this bill to conference, and by so doing we would run the risk—a very serious one, too—in my judgment, of defeating the whole measure. So, if we are going to make certain of having legislation at this session to take care of great works of river and harbor improvement throughout the country, then my judgment is we should vote to suspend the rules and concur in the Senate amendment.

Mr. JACOWAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPARKMAN. In a moment.

I think, Mr. Speaker, it is of the highest importance that this bill should be passed appropriating even this sum of money. In fact, I think it should be more. But it is the best we can do, and the engineers will no doubt allot and expend the money judiciously.

Mr. SHERLEY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SPARKMAN. Yes.

Mr. SHERLEY. Who advises the gentleman that we can only have this particular bill or no bill?

Mr. SPARKMAN. Oh, I got that impression from what I know of conditions at the other end of this Capitol.

Mr. SHERLEY. Have we got to accept this rider in order to get the concurrence of Senators to pass a national rivers and harbors bill? Are those the terms that are made?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I am afraid so; at least I am afraid we will have to accept it if we get a bill.

Mr. SHERLEY. What do you think of the House accepting conditions so humiliating?

Mr. SPARKMAN. As far as I am concerned, I may say that I have often had to accept things here that I did not want to accept. I did not want to accept this bill, but in order to take care of these great works I am willing to swallow my pride, at least for this time, and pass this bill. I think it of the highest importance that this work should go on.

Mr. JACOWAY. On page 14, section 15, it says:

That the following projects now under improvement shall be reexamined—

And so forth.

And it names among those the Red River, the Ouachita, and the Arkansas. I wanted to ask the gentleman if any improvement will be carried on on these rivers while these three examinations are being made?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I would answer "yes," in my opinion.

Mr. GOULDEN. Will the gentleman from Florida yield?

Mr. SPARKMAN. Certainly.

Mr. GOULDEN. I want to ask the gentleman if this bill as it comes from the Senate, amended by that body, does not contain all the surveys, resurveys, and matters of that kind of very great importance to the entire country, especially to our constituents?

Mr. SPARKMAN. It contains, as I understand it, all the surveys that were in the bill when it passed through the House and quite a number in addition.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield? This bill was debated in the House for four days, as I recall, and gone over item by item, and for the second time another body has turned down the work of the House and presents a stand-and-deliver proposition. They say, "You take what we offer you or you get nothing." That is the situation to-day, is it not?

Mr. SPARKMAN. That is about it as I view the situation.

Mr. MOORE. Now, it is the second time it has occurred. Does the gentleman see any relief for the Members of the House of Representatives who are the spokesmen for a great people on a measure like this?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I should say that at the next session if we should pass a river and harbor bill through this body I shall look for better results, inasmuch as it will be a long session, at which we will, I trust, have more time.

Mr. DUPRÉ. Will the gentleman from Florida state whether the chief obstructionist in the Senate to legislation of this character will be a Member of the next Congress?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I can not say as to that, but conditions for fair consideration are always better at a long than at a short session.

Mr. GALLAGHER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. SPARKMAN. I yield to my colleague on the committee [Mr. GALLAGHER].

Mr. GALLAGHER. I would like to ask the chairman of the committee if he knows from what source the suggestion was made to take away the million dollars that was appropriated for the Lakes-to-the-Gulf matter?

Mr. SPARKMAN. I do not know. I do not believe it came from the engineers.

Mr. Speaker, no one can condemn these lump-sum appropriations for river and harbor improvement too strongly to suit me. The selection of projects upon which money is to be expended and the allotment of amounts from time to time to carry them to completion are functions the people have delegated to us, and we should not, save on rare and exceptional occasions, delegate them to others. But this I regard an exceptional occasion, as this seems to be the only way we can avoid great loss and damage to the people, the shippers, and the commerce of the country. There are hundreds of projects already completed and needing maintenance; hundreds more under way which would be greatly damaged if work upon them should cease for any considerable length of time before they are finished. In addition to all this, any long delay in the completion of these great works will entail heavy loss to the commerce of the country awaiting the development of these waterways in order to make use of them. There is therefore every reason why this amendment, objectionable though it is in some of its important features, should be adopted, and I hope the motion will prevail.

Mr. Speaker, how much time have I used?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has used 11 minutes. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. GOODWIN] is entitled to 20 minutes.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I should like to be notified when I have used three minutes.

I will say at the outset that I am not an opponent of river legislation. I think I am an enthusiast on that question. However, I do want something like sane and reasonable legislation, and I like to have it diffused throughout the length and breadth of the country.

I do not want this bill defeated. If I may be selfish enough to refer to my district I will say that the Mississippi River borders it on the east and the Red River borders it on the west, and through the heart of it runs the Ouachita River, upon which a system of locks and dams is being constructed now. But on page 15, lines 4, 5, and 6, among other items in the bill, the Arkansas, the Red, and Ouachita Rivers are to be finally chloroformed, and, sir, I am afraid those projects are to be discontinued and a resurvey made with a view of either "modifying or discontinuing" them. I apprehend that the result will be that after four or five years a report may be made, and then when a report is made, it may be an adverse report, and in the meantime we would not receive any river legislation pertaining to those streams. In other words, the Ouachita River project, which is about 55 per cent complete as to its system of locks and dams, would be abandoned and not receive one dollar of appropriations for the next four or five years. The great Red River, with a country as fertile as the Valley of the Nile, would receive no river appropriations, and the Arkansas River, second only to the Mississippi, as large, if not larger, than the great Ohio itself, would be abandoned in the meantime. That river runs through the center of my State, and traverses a very fertile country indeed.

As I stated in the outset, I am not opposed to the bill, but I would like to have these lines stricken from the bill when referred to conference, because I know full well that in the next four or five years no appropriations whatever will be received by those streams.

Permit me to quote, Mr. Chairman, section 15, that the House may see the blow that is aimed at three of the principal rivers in my State. I quote as follows:

SEC. 15. That the following projects now under improvement shall be reexamined, in accordance with the law for the original examination of rivers and harbors, with a view to obtaining reports whether the adopted projects shall be modified or the improvement abandoned:

Then follow lines 4, 5, and 6, the Red River, the Ouachita River, and the Arkansas River. That means, Mr. Chairman, the final abandonment, I am afraid, of these three great rivers from further improvement, because in all probability three or four years would elapse before a report would be obtained upon these projects as touching their modification or abandonment.

In other words, sir, the projects already begun on these rivers shall be either modified or wholly abandoned. If modified, it will mean to diminish the assistance now being given or to be entirely abandoned. I submit, Mr. Chairman, it is not fair to discriminate against these important rivers in my State, which are capable of being made great carriers of commerce and as competitors in freight rates against the railroad companies of my section of the country. So I favor, Mr. Chairman, this bill going back to conference that the committees of the two Houses may get together and strike out at least a part of section 15 and restore these rivers to their normal attitude; that is to say, that they may hereafter be treated by Congress as they deserve to be treated and as other rivers of the country are treated.

What is the present attitude, Mr. Chairman, of the annual rivers and harbors bill? The one that we passed through this House several weeks ago, however imperfect it may have been, has been overhauled, it seems, by one Senator at the other end of this Capitol, and we have before us a substitute for the House bill carrying $25,000,000 in appropriations and leaving it to the Board of Engineers to distribute over the country. In addition to that, many worthy items have been stricken from the House bill, including the rivers of my State, above referred to, and now we are told, sir, by the chairman of the committee that it means this substitute or no legislation at all. In other words, Mr. Chairman, 100,000,000 American people are to be dominated and controlled by one man as to rivers and harbors appropriations. And it is said that inasmuch as Congress adjourns within the next 24 hours we must take this substitute or nothing. I do not believe it, Mr. Chairman. I believe this matter might be worked out in conference by both sides, giving and taking if necessary.

The legislation here for the past few days has been anything but commendable to the American Congress. The annual appropriations of $1,000,000,000 must be made and agreed upon by the two Houses before we adjourn, and all of them within two or three days. If this House stands for anything at all, it should stand for its own rights and proper dignity. We should not be appended as a kite to the coat tail of any one man or any set of men, but should in a courageous, sensible, dignified way assert our rights in the premises. I am a better friend to rivers and harbors legislation when I desire that all legitimate streams should be cared for, without discrimination, than those who seek to grab, if possible, all the Government funds and stick them here and there over the country in their respective districts, regardless of worth and merit to the items they affect. So I repeat in conclusion, sir, that I am for this bill, but I do not want those great rivers in my State hamstrung and chiseled out of their just deserts at the closing session of a busy Congress, with a threat that we must swallow this injustice, whether it be palatable or not.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. I yield eight minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. SHERLEY].

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, this House has to decide whether it proposes to keep its self-respect and be a part of the lawmaking body of America or not, and it has to decide it without any more yielding in the hope that next time the demand will not be made. I am not going to discuss the merits of the river and harbor bill that passed this House, but I am going to say a few plain words about the rights of the House.

The House passed a river and harbor bill and it went to the Senate. It comes back here now with all the House bill stricken out, and arbitrary power over $30,000,000 given the Army engineers, and with such provisions as happen to suit two or three Members of that body, and could only come back because it did suit them, and we are told that unless we accept their exact viewpoint upon what shall be done for 90,000,000 of people, no legislation can be had. I am interested in river and harbor legislation. My district is vitally interested in it, but I would rather see river and harbor bills fail forever than lose all of my self-respect and to have the House of Representatives made a negligible factor in legislation for the people of America. [Applause.]

Not only is that true, but here is an illustration of the most vicious piece of one-man domination that I have ever known in my 12 years' service here. There is put on this bill as a rider a proposition over which the River and Harbor Committee has no jurisdiction, and which has been pending before the Interstate and Foreign Committee for months, with the protests of a great portion of the city and community affected. For the last half hour I have read some papers in connection with the protest against declaring Swan Creek nonnavigable. It runs through the city of Toledo. I do not think there should be any man reading those protests willing to pass the bill without any real consideration of it at this time.

Charges are made that the closing of this creek will deny certain water facilities to one railroad and that others will have thereby a monopoly in water terminals. Three times the matter has gone to the Toledo council, and three times the proposal that lies back of this has been rejected. Brand Whitlock, as mayor of that town, appointed a special commission to look into it, and they rejected the proposal. Now, the distinguished gentleman representing that district [Mr. SHERWOOD] says that they simply want to take away the Federal Government's jurisdiction and then the merits of these various controversies can be settled by the State of Ohio and the city of Toledo. But there are rights involved that are bigger than the city or the State.

That is not all. The city of Toledo has recently built docks right on Swan Creek. It is navigable for 3 miles, and on it are a number of wharves and terminal facilities that are of great value to the people there.

Now, what has happened? Think of the humiliation of it! Do you suppose that any other rider affecting any other city in this Union could have been put on this river and harbor bill in the Senate? Not for a minute. But it is one of the terms upon which we are to accept a river and harbor bill. We are practically told that unless we take this rider and the bill written as one man says we are to have no river and harbor bill. Why did the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ADAMSON] have this bill before his committee for months if there was no question about the merits of it? He is not a man who neglects his duty as to legislation pending there. I hold in my hand the protests against the scheme. I hold photographs certified to as being accurate pictures of the water facilities that are on Swan Creek now. I say to you that Congress can not afford, in the interest of common honesty, to pass this rider without an investigation. This House had no chance to consider it. The gentleman says you can not get a bill otherwise. I do not believe that, but if I did believe it I would be willing to say "no bill"; and I am just as much interested in river and harbor matters as any man on this floor. The gentleman from Florida could either have made a motion to send the bill to conference and try it out or he could have made a motion to concur with certain amendments, but he surrenders his case before the fight begins. He runs up the white flag of surrender without ever undertaking to fight. Of course we can not get the Senate to make concessions as long as we lie down the moment they ask us to.

Mr. GORDON. We can not get anything.

Mr. SHERLEY. This is no little matter. When I went after this Swan Creek item in the first instance it was because I did not like the violation of all precedent in putting it onto the bill as a rider, for until the bill came up a few moments ago I never had heard of Swan Creek. Since then I have had a chance to examine into it, and I will put some of these protests in the RECORD. I say to you, measuring my words, I would not be responsible—I would not take the responsibility—for legislating that proposition into law, because in doing it I believe I would be lending myself to a scheme that will not bear daylight. I may be mistaken as to that fact, but you can not know and neither can I know, in the few minutes that are given us to consider it; and when men can not know whether there is something wrong it is a good time to wait until they can know. I repeat, here are the protests which have been filed before Mr. Adamson's committee. The original bill was passed through the Senate by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] without these men having a chance to protest. As they state in their correspondence, the first they knew of it was when the news carried the fact that the Senate had passed the bill declaring Swan Creek nonnavigable.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's time has expired.

Mr. SHERLEY. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SHERLEY. Under leave to extend, I submit the following among many protests now on file in the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce of the House.

[Protest against Senate bill 6113, passed Aug. 25, 1914, addressed to Hon. WILLIAM C. ADAMSON, chairman Foreign and Interstate Commerce Committee, and members of said committee, of House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.]

DEAR SIRS: We hand you herewith a protest against Senate bill (S. 6113) to authorize the closing to navigation of Swan Creek, in the city of Toledo, Ohio.

1. We wish to show that no public official for the city of Toledo or the State of Ohio is asking or urging the aforesaid legislation.

2. That said Swan Creek is considered a navigable stream from its mouth at the Maumee River for a distance southwesterly of 3 miles and is now used extensively for shipping and wharfing. That it has for a great distance a depth of 15 feet of water. We, the undersigned, all being property holders on said Swan Creek and the Miami & Erie Canal, using said creek and docks in the peaceful conduct of our business, and also waters from said Miami & Erie Canal for the conduct of our milling business, and all of us and our predecessors have used same for a period of 70 years. We are owners of several boats that ply regularly upon said Swan Creek during season of navigation, operating upon the Great Lakes, handling many thousands of tons of cargo. For many years the docks of Swan Creek were used as the center of the lumber and coal yards, but in recent years the shipping and docks have been employed in the handing of 80 per cent of the builders' supplies for the great city of Toledo.

Under separate cover we offer you photographs and affidavits to show the extent of such traffic on said stream. These vessels are regularly employed in said traffic we represent, it being one of the largest single traffic units in the city of Toledo. The dock properties in the city of Toledo along the Maumee River are practically all in the hands of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., New York Central Railway Co., Toledo & Ohio Central Railroad Co., Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad Co., Hocking Valley Railroad Co., Wabash Railroad Co., Michigan Central Railroad Co., and the Terminal Railroad Co., as well as the utility corporations of the city of Toledo; so that the kind of water traffic in which we are engaged is now restricted to the banks of Swan Creek, and with the rapid growth of the city of Toledo the use of this body of water becomes more apparent, being the poor man's home against the railroad companies and public-utility corporations having taken possession of practically all the available dock property on the Maumee River.

The abandonment of Swan Creek would cause a great hardship and financial loss upon all those who are now peacefully plying their business upon said creek. Reviewing this elimination still further, you must keep in mind these facts, that the State of Ohio has a greater interest in Swan Creek than any of the undersigned interests in same. The Miami & Erie Canal, one of the branches of the canal system in the State of Ohio, locks into Swan Creek by a set of two locks marked on maps accompanying this protest at a point that is about 1 mile from the mouth of said stream, these locks being the eastern terminus of said canal connecting it with the Great Lakes and the Atlantic Ocean. The State of Ohio for many years maintained a towing path along said Swan Creek to the point of its mouth at the Maumee River. We also hand you reference to case No. 3731, common pleas court, Toledo, Ohio, from records county clerk of Lucas County, Ohio.

[State of Ohio v. Charles Carpenter. Record, vol. 17, p. 616, filed Apr. 29, 1859.]

The common pleas court of Lucas County in said case No. 3731, which action was confirmed and approved by the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio, which is reported in the Twelfth Ohio State under title of Charles Carpenter v. State of Ohio, this case having gone up to the supreme court on error.

The court held that the State of Ohio never appropriated Swan Creek as a part of the present Miami & Erie Canal; that Swan Creek was a navigable stream open to the commerce of the world. But that the State of Ohio did acquire a fee simple title to 10 feet of land along the southerly bank of Swan Creek for a towing path. From the foregoing facts it will be readily understood that Swan Creek became the terminus of the Miami & Erie Canal and connected it with the Great Lakes from Toledo, Ohio, to Cincinnati, Ohio, on the Ohio River.

We have in Toledo an organization known as the Swan Creek Elimination League, who have carried on for the past four years a campaign to eliminate said stream. This league has been supplied with large sums of money from various sources. They have advertised most extensively in all of our daily papers, also by special circulars, sectional meetings in our city, and through this agitation have engaged the service of men at compensation to secure names to a petition asking the common council of the city of Toledo and the State and Federal legislative bodies to eliminate this waterway. This petition was presented to the common council in the year of 1911 under what is known as the Brand Whitlock administration. This council, after hearing all arguments and accepting said petitions, appointed an engineer of standing to make extensive maps and survey of this Swan Creek Valley, and the mayor, Brand Whitlock, also appointed a commission to investigate the conditions and report upon improvements in Swan Creek and Ten Mile Creek and their valleys. After many public hearings and a report from the said committee the council of the city of Toledo, both in 1912 and 1913, rejected the request of said petitioners. In the year of 1914 the city of Toledo moved into public office an entire new administration, including the mayor and common council, and again this league offered their project to this new common council, and more public hearings were held, and again within this year of 1914 this project was rejected by the present common council. During all of these periods these maps and orators appeared before the Business Men's Club of the city of Toledo, the largest public commerce club of our city, and this club refused to indorse this project. It was then taken before the central labor body of the city of Toledo, and through the Tugmen's Union, one of the branches of the Central Labor Union, resolutions were adopted opposing the elimination of Swan Creek, and the Toledo Tugmen's Protective Association issued a booklet, which we offer you as Exhibit No. 1, entitled "Swan Creek, its use and abuse."

The commission appointed by former Mayor Brand Whitlock, who is now United States minister to Belgium, made the following report: "That it was opposed to the elimination of Swan Creek—

"1. Because no general benefit would follow the large expense involved.

"2. The stream is valuable for navigation purposes, and great benefits would result by proper improvement.

"3. The stream could not only be made useful for business purposes but an interesting feature of the city.

"4. The cost of elimination would eventually become a very great sum involving the expenditure of millions of dollars."

The commission further recommends a system of intercepting sewers and the appointment of a commission to make a comprehensive study of the best system for improving the low territory and marshy lands not sufficiently improved. Also, by the elimination of sewage matter, the water of the creek would become comparatively pure and inoffensive, leaving the physical improvement of the stream a matter of mechanical construction.

There is not a single newspaper of standing in Toledo advocating this elimination, and all items appearing in favor of this elimination are marked paid advertisements, and the News-Bee, of Toledo, having the largest circulation in our city, refused to accept paid advertisements.

In the year of 1913 this league had pending before the Legislature of the State of Ohio an act to vacate Swan Creek and the Miami & Erie Canal, but this act was also defeated by a large majority at that time. A commission was appointed by a resolution of the Ohio Legislature in the year of 1913 for the purpose of investigating all of the canals of the State of Ohio. Said legislative committee visited Toledo in the year 1913, making an extensive survey and giving a public hearing upon the elimination of Swan Creek and the Miami & Erie Canal, and after careful deliberation this committee filed its report against said elimination. Said report is now a matter of record at Columbus, Ohio. The commission recommended that the proposal of certain Toledo citizens be held in abeyance in view of the commission's own report for a barge canal from the Ohio River at Cincinnati, Ohio, to Lake Erie at Toledo, and also in view of the proposition of a deep waterway from Toledo, Ohio, to Chicago, Ill., by way of Defiance and Fort Wayne, Ind.

In view of the foregoing facts and reports you will note that the State of Ohio should be considered the most important factor in conjunction with those who are now using Swan Creek for the conduct of their business.

At an open meeting held in Toledo, Ohio, on June 3, 1913, in council chamber by Maj. Bromwell, chief engineer, for the Federal Government in our district with offices at Cleveland, Ohio, another extensive hearing was given on the question of Swan Creek elimination. But up to date no report has been furnished the city of Toledo from the War Department, but it was considered that Maj. Brownwell felt that the question should be settled by the State of Ohio and the city of Toledo before the Federal Government should take any action.

Nineteen large sewers empty into Swan Creek which has caused great pollution of its waters, and the State board of public health have ordered that a trunk sewer be located along said creek to carry said sewage to Maumee Bay. Legislation is now pending in city council to carry out this mandatory order from the State board of public health.

It is our impression that Senator BURTON was misled by the gentlemen who delivered this extensive petition and requesting the passage of an act (S. 6113), by not giving him all of the preceding facts leading up to their request, and without further investigation he presented this act for its passage. We had no hearing or opportunity for protest and no knowledge of its consideration until after such time when the public press carried it as a news item. This league have at all times been able to employ eminent counsel, who have made splendid arguments, and with unlimited capital for their campaign has enabled them to go from one legislative body to another, and when final hearing has been given they have at all times lost their point. The superintendent of public works, John W. Miller, for the State of Ohio, who is also the chief engineer under the laws of the State of Ohio and who has charge of all of the canals of our State, has never approved these projects and should be called as a witness before your committee and no action should be taken by your honorable committee without his consent or approval. Mr. Miller would be the most available man to bring before your committee to give you an unbiased opinion on the matter of Swan Creek and the Miami & Erie Canal.

Under Exhibit No. 2 we offer an ordinance, being a certified copy of council proceedings, city of Toledo, December 9, 1912, to provide for the issuing of bonds of the city of Toledo for the purpose of opening and extending Superior Street from Swan Creek to Clayton Street by curving both St. Clair Street and Superior Street in one street, extending from the cut-off to Clayton Street, in the city of Toledo, Ohio. This bond issue was for the sum of $114,000 and was expended during the year 1914 by the city of Toledo to straighten Swan Creek at a certain point on St. Clair Street, as shown by maps on Exhibit No. 3, transferring a bridge from a northerly point on St. Clair Street to this new cut-off, dredging the Creek to a uniform depth of 15 to 16 feet of water, and building a municipal dock 900 feet in length on both sides of said creek, which is also shown on maps under Exhibit No. 3 as well as by photographs of same. This improvement removes certain undesirable features of said creek and improved its navigation by the change of eliminating part of the bend of Swan Creek and cutting a new channel as shown on Exhibit No. 3, the city of Toledo saved an additional expense of building a new bridge for Superior Street extended and also Short Street extended, and also removed the waste lands within this territory.

You will notice that not a single public officer of the State of Ohio or the city of Toledo will ask or are asking for the passage of this act (S. 6113), which should condemn it without any further argument. This league should have hesitated before going before your honorable body asking for this legislation until such time when our home State and home city took action upon this matter.

Under Exhibit No. 2 we also offer you resolution authorizing and directing the director of public service to enter into a contract or lease with the board of public works of the State of Ohio in relation to the abandonment of the part of the Miami & Erie Canal, known as Swan Creek, and the construction of a side cut from the easterly bank of Swan Creek to the abandoned side cut on the easterly side of St. Clair Street. This contract was entered into between the city of Toledo and the State of Ohio, and said improvements have been made under this contract. The chief engineer for the United States Government also gave his consent and approval for this improvement, so that all of his details have been excuted in proper manner. Under Exhibit No. 2 we also offer you a history of the Miami & Erie Canal as located within the city of Toledo. Under Exhibit No. 3 we offer you map showing proposed plan for changing Swan Creek and also abandonment of same, a detail sketch of Toledo side cut, a comprehensive plan for the diversion of Swan Creek, and the making of all necessary improvements with bridges, streets, and docks. Exhibit No. 3 also contains a map of the city of Toledo, a map in detail covering the special section of the city of Toledo covered by Swan Creek and Miami & Erie Canal, and also showing a map of Lucas County, Ohio, showing that Swan Creek originates in Henry and Fulton Counties, Ohio, and is at least 25 miles in length. If Swan Creek was eliminated at its present mouth, it would be necessary to divert this stream at some other point southwesterly from the city of Toledo, and this again would entail the building of many new bridges and also a river bed to drain the Swan Creek Valley watershed to the Maumee River. From every economic and business viewpoint you will note that this plan would be impractical and visionary.

We might say in conclusion that many of those that are promoting this league expect to gain some financial benefit by the change of the Summit Street location, and it is also common gossip that the railroad companies who are under cover have some plan through this diversion that they anticipate completing.

We, the undersigned, offer the foregoing brief as matters of record and fact pertaining to our conduct of business upon Swan Creek, the use of waters upon the Miami & Erie Canal, and all procedures and hearings that have been held in the past before the Common Council of the City of Toledo and its public officers, the members of the Legislature of the State of Ohio, the committee representing the members of the Legislature of the State of Ohio, the chief engineer of the State of Ohio, and all such public organizations as have heard this question discussed; that these statements and records are true and accurate, to the best of our belief and understanding.

TOLEDO, OHIO, December 23, 1914.

We, the undersigned, officers of the W. O. Holst Builders' Supply Co., a corporation under the State laws of Ohio, located in the city of Toledo, Ohio, make the following statement:

1. That we employ two boats in the conduct of our business during the season of navigation, who regularly travel the Great Lakes and also enter the Canadian waters for the purpose of delivering sand and other material to our docks.

2. That during the season of 1914 we handled 46,300 tons of sand on our docks, situated on Swan Creek, near Erie Street.

3. We hereby attach Exhibits A, B, and C, which are true photographs of recent date of our docks on Swan Creek, as now located, near Erie Street, said dock being 500 feet, more or less. Exhibit C is one of the boats regularly used in transporting our sand.

STATE OF OHIO, Lucas County, ss:

I, William O. Holst, being first duly sworn, on my oath say that the foregoing statement has been made by myself from the records of the books of the W. O. Holst Builders' Supply Co., at Toledo, Ohio, and the same are true and accurate, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

By W. O. HOLST, President.
W. O. HOLST.

Sworn to and subscribed in my presence this 26th day of December, 1914.

[SEAL.] LEVERETT OLCOTT ROWLEY,
Notary Public, Lucas County, Ohio.

TOLEDO, OHIO, December 23, 1914.

We, the undersigned, officers of the Toledo Builders' Supply Co., a corporation under the State laws of Ohio, located in the city of Toledo, Ohio, make the following statement:

1. That we employ three boats in the conduct of our business, registered under the following names: Walter D., 250 tons; Laura D., 220 tons; Dussault, 78 tons.

2. These boats during the season of navigation regularly travel the Great Lakes and also enter the Canadian waters for the purpose of transporting and delivering sand and other material to our dock.

3. That during this season of 1914 we built a new dock on Swan Creek 400 feet in length, so as to more conveniently handle our products. We were enabled to make this latter improvement on account of the improvement made by the city of Toledo in straightening this channel and dredging Swan Creek to uniform depth of 15 to 16 feet at its lowermost point near the Maumee River.

4. During the season of 1914 we handled 16,300 tons of sand on our small dock on Swan Creek, but on account of our new equipment we will be able to handle 100,000 tons during the season of 1915. We have been forced to handle much of our product on other docks on account of lack of facility.

5. We hereby attach Exhibits A and B, which are true photographs of recent date of our docks on Swan Creek as now located near St. Clair Street, giving us approximately 650 feet of dock frontage upon Swan Creek.

STATE OF OHIO, Lucas County, ss:

I, A. R. Kuhlman, being first duly sworn, on my oath say that the foregoing statement has been made by myself from the records of the books of the Toledo Builders' Supply Co. at Toledo, Ohio, and the same are true and accurate to the best of my knowledge and belief.

A. R. KUHLMAN.

Sworn to and subscribed in my presence this 26th day of December, 1914.

[SEAL.] LEVERETT ALCOTT ROWLEY,
Notary Public, Lucas County, Ohio.

[A. R. Kuhlman, chairman protest convention, Toledo, Ohio, secretary and treasurer Toledo Builders' Supply Co., Toledo, Ohio.]

Protest against Senate bill S. 6113, passed August 25, 1914, addressed to Hon. WILLIAM C. ADAMSON, chairman Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, and members of said committee of House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIRS: We hand you herewith a protest against Senate bill (S. 6113) an act to authorize the closing to navigation of Swan Creek, in the city of Toledo, Ohio.

1. We wish to show that no public official for the city of Toledo or the State of Ohio is asking or urging the aforesaid legislation.

2. That said Swan Creek is considered a navigable stream from its mouth at the Maumee River for a distance southwesterly of 3 miles and is now used extensively for shipping and wharfing. That it has for a great distance a depth of 15 feet of water. We, the undersigned, all being property holders on said Swan Creek and the Miame & Erie Canal, using said creek and docks in the peaceful conduct of our business and also waters from said Miame & Erie Canal for the conduct of our milling business, and all of us and our predecessors have used same for a period of 70 years. We are owners of several boats that ply regularly upon said Swan Creek during season of navigation, operating upon the Great Lakes, handling many thousands of tons of cargo. For many years the docks of Swan Creek were used as the center of the lumber and coal yards, but in recent years the shipping and docks have been employed in the handling of 80 per cent of the builders' supplies for the great city of Toledo.

Under separate cover we offer you photographs and affidavits to show the extent of such traffic on said stream. These vessels are regularly employed in said traffic we represent, it being one of the largest single traffic units in the city of Toledo. The dock properties in the city of Toledo along the Maumee River are practically all in the hands of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., New York Central Railway Co., Toledo & Ohio Central Railroad Co., Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad Co., Hocking Valley Railroad Co., Wabash Railroad Co., Michigan Central Railroad Co., and the Terminal Railroad Co., as well as the utility corporations of the city of Toledo. So that the kind of water traffic in which we are engaged is now restricted to the banks of Swan Creek, and with the rapid growth of the city of Toledo the use of this body of water becomes more apparent, being the poor man's home, against the railroad companies, and public utility corporations having taken possession of practically all the available dock property on the Maumee River.

The abandonment of Swan Creek would cause a great hardship and financial loss upon all those who are now peacefully plying their business upon said creek. Reviewing this elimination still further, you must keep in mind these facts: That the State of Ohio has a greater interest in Swan Creek than any of the undersigned interests in same. The Miami & Erie Canal, one of the branches of the canal system in the State of Ohio, locks into Swan Creek by a set of five locks, marked on maps accompanying this protest, at a point that is about 1 mile from the mouth of said stream, these locks being the eastern terminus of said canal, connecting it with the Great Lakes and the Atlantic Ocean. The State of Ohio for many years maintained a towing path along said Swan Creek to the point of its mouth at the Maumee River. We also hand you reference to case No. 3731, common pleas court, Toledo, Ohio, from records county clerk of Lucas County, Ohio.

[State of Ohio v. Charles Carpenter. Record, vol. 17, p. 616, filed Apr. 29, 1859.]

The Common Pleas Court of Lucas County in said case, No. 3731, which action was confirmed and approved by the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio, which is reported in the 12th Ohio State, under title of Charles Carpenter v. State of Ohio, this case having gone up to the supreme court on error.

The court held that the State of Ohio never appropriated Swan Creek as a part of the present Miami & Erie Canal; that Swan Creek was a navigable stream open to the commerce of the world; but that the State of Ohio did acquire a fee simple title to 10 feet of land along the southerly bank of Swan Creek for a towing path. From the foregoing facts it will be readily understood that Swan Creek became the terminus of the Miami & Erie Canal and connected it with the Great Lakes, from Toledo, Ohio, to Cincinnati, Ohio, on the Ohio River.

We have in Toledo an organization known as the Swan Creek Elimination League, who have carried on for the past four years a campaign to eliminate said stream. This league has been supplied with large sums of money from various sources. They have advertised most extensively in all of our daily papers, also by special circulars, sectional meetings in our city, and through this agitation have engaged the service of men at compensation to secure names to a petition asking the common council of the city of Toledo and the State and Federal legislative bodies to eliminate this waterway. This petition was presented to the common council of Toledo, Ohio, in the year of 1911, under what is now known as the Brand Whitlock administration. This council, after hearing all arguments and accepting said petitions, appointed an engineer of standing to make extensive maps and survey of this Swan Creek Valley, and the mayor, Brand Whitlock, also appointed a commission to investigate the conditions and report upon improvements in Swan Creek and Tenmile Creek and their valleys. After many public hearings and a report from the said committee, the council of the city of Toledo, both in 1912 and 1913, rejected the request of said petitioners.

In the year of 1914 the city of Toledo moved into public office an entire new administration, including the mayor and common council, and again this league offered their project to this new common council, and more public hearings were held, and again within this year of 1914 this project was rejected by the present common council. During all of these periods these maps and orators appeared before the Business Men's Club of the city of Toledo, the largest public commerce club of our city, and this club refused to indorse this project. It was then taken before the central labor body of the city of Toledo, and through the Tugmen's Union, one of the branches of the Central Labor Union, resolutions were adopted opposing the elimination of Swan Creek, and the Toledo Tugmen's Protective Association issued a booklet, which we offer you as Exhibit No. 1, entitled "Swan Creek: Its Use and Abuse."

The commission appointed by former Mayor Brand Whitlock, who is now United States minister to Belgium, made the following report:

That it was opposed to the elimination of Swan Creek—

1. Because no general benefit would follow the large expense involved.

2. The stream is valuable for navigation purposes, and great benefits would result by proper improvement.

3. The stream could not only be made useful for business purposes, but an interesting feature of the city.

4. The cost of elimination would eventually become a very great sum, involving the expenditure of millions of dollars.

The commission further recommends a system of intercepting sewers and the appointment of a commission to make a comprehensive study of the best system for improving the low territory and marshy lands not sufficiently improved. Also by the elimination of sewage matter the water of the creek would become comparatively pure and inoffensive, leaving the physical improvement of the stream a matter of mechanical construction.

There is not a single newspaper of standing in Toledo advocating this elimination, and all items appearing in favor of this elimination are marked "Paid advertisements," and the News-Bee, of Toledo, having the largest circulation in our city, refused to accept paid advertisements.

In the year of 1913 this league had pending before the legislature of the State of Ohio an act to vacate Swan Creek and the Miami & Erie Canal, but this act was also defeated by a large majority at that time. A commission was appointed by a resolution of the Ohio Legislature in the year of 1913 for the purpose of investigating all of the canals of the State of Ohio. Said legislative committee visited Toledo in the year 1913, making an extensive survey and giving a public hearing upon the elimination of Swan Creek and the Miami & Erie Canal, and after careful deliberation this committee filed its report against said elimination. Said report is now a matter of record at Columbus, Ohio. The commission recommended that the proposal of certain Toledo citizens be held in abeyance in view of the commission's own report for a barge canal from the Ohio River at Cincinnati, Ohio, to Lake Erie at Toledo, and also in view of the proposition of a deep waterway from Toledo, Ohio, to Chicago, Ill., by way of Defiance and Fort Wayne, Ind.

In view of the foregoing facts and reports you will note that the State of Ohio should be considered the most important factor in conjunction with those who are now using Swan Creek for the conduct of their business.

At an open meeting held in Toledo, Ohio, on June 3, 1913, in council chamber, by Maj. Bromwell, chief engineer for the Federal Government in our district, with offices at Cleveland, Ohio, another extensive hearing was given on the question of Swan Creek elimination. But up to date no report has been furnished the city of Toledo from the War Department, but it was considered that Maj. Bromwell felt that the question should be settled by the State of Ohio and the city of Toledo before the Federal Government should take any action.

Nineteen large sewers empty into Swan Creek, which has caused great pollution of its waters, and the State board of public health have ordered that a trunk sewer be located along said creek to carry said sewage to Maumee Bay. Legislation is now pending in city council to carry out this mandatory order from the State board of public health.

It is our impression that Senator BURTON was misled by the gentlemen who delivered this extensive petition and requested the passage of an act, S. 6113, by not giving him all of the preceding facts leading up to their request, and without further investigation he presented this act for its passage. We had no hearing or opportunity for protest and no knowledge of its consideration until after such time when the public press carried it as a news item. This league have at all times been able to employ eminent counsel, who have made splendid arguments, and unlimited capital for their campaign has enabled them to go from one legislative body to another, and when final hearing has been given they have at all times lost their point. The superintendent of public works, John W. Miller, for the State of Ohio, who is also the chief engineer under the laws of the State of Ohio and who has charge of all of the canals of our State, has never approved these projects, and should be called as a witness before your committee, and no action should be taken by your honorable committee without his consent or approval. Mr. Miller would be the most available man to bring before your committee to give you an unbiased opinion on the matter of Swan Creek and the Miami & Erie Canal.

Under Exhibit No. 2 we offer an ordinance, being a certified copy of council proceedings, city of Toledo, December 9, 1912, to provide for the issuing of bonds of the city of Toledo for the purpose of opening and extending Superior Street from Swan Creek to Clayton Street by curving both St. Clair Street and Superior Street in one street, extending from the cut-off to Clayton Street, in the city of Toledo, Ohio. This bond issue was for the sum of $114,000 and was expended during the year of 1914 by the city of Toledo to straighten Swan Creek at a certain point on St. Clair Street, as shown by maps on Exhibit No. 3, transferring a bridge from a northerly point on St. Clair Street to this new cut-off, dredging the creek to a uniform depth of 15 to 18 feet of water, and building a municipal dock 900 feet in length on both sides of said creek, which is also shown on maps under Exhibit No. 3 as well as by photographs of same. This improvement removed certain undesirable features of said creek and improved its navigation by the change of eliminating part of the bend of Swan Creek and cutting a new channel, as shown on Exhibit No. 3. The city of Toledo saved an additional expense of building a new bridge for Superior Street extended and also Short Street extended and also removed the waste lands within this territory.

You will notice that not a single public officer of the State of Ohio or the city of Toledo will ask or are asking for the passage of this act, S. 6113, which should condemn it without any further argument. This league should have hesitated before going before your honorable body asking for this legislation until such time when our home State and home city took action upon this matter.

Under Exhibit No. 2 we also offer you resolution authorizing and directing the director of public service to enter into a contract or lease with the board of public work of the State of Ohio in relation to the abandonment of the part of the Miami & Erie Canal known as Swan Creek and the construction of a side cut from the easterly bank of Swan Creek to the abandoned side cut on the easterly side of St. Clair Street.

This contract was entered into between the city of Toledo and the State of Ohio and said improvements have been made under this contract. The chief engineer for the United States Government also gave his consent and approval for this improvement, so that all of his details have been executed in proper manner. Under Exhibit No. 2 we also offer you a history of the Miami & Erie Canal as located within the city of Toledo. Under Exhibit No. 3 we offer you map showing proposed plan for changing Swan Creek and also abandonment of same, a detail sketch of Toledo side cut, a comprehensive plan for the diversion of Swan Creek, and the making of all necessary improvements with bridges, streets, and docks. Exhibit No. 3 also contains a map of the city of Toledo, a map in detail covering the special section of the city of Toledo covered by Swan Creek and Miami & Erie Canal, and also showing a map of Lucas County, Ohio, showing that Swan Creek originates in Henry and Fulton Counties, Ohio, and is at least 25 miles in length. If Swan Creek was eliminated at its present mouth it would be necessary to divert this stream at some other point southwesterly from the city of Toledo, and this again would entail the building of many new bridges and also a river bed to drain the Swan Creek Valley watershed to the Maumee River. From every economic and business viewpoint you will note that this plan would be impractical and visionary.

We might say in conclusion that many of those that are promoting this league expect to gain some financial benefit by the change of the Summit Street location, and it is also common gossip that the railroad companies, who are under cover, have some plan through this diversion that they anticipate completing.

We, the undersigned, offer the foregoing brief as matters of records and facts pertaining to our conduct of business upon Swan Creek, the use of waters upon the Miami & Erie Canal, and all procedures and hearings that have been held in the past before the common council of the city of Toledo and its public officers, the members of the Legislature of the State of Ohio, the committee representing the members of the Legislature of the State of Ohio, the chief engineer of the State of Ohio, and all such public organizations as have heard this question discussed; that these statements and records are true and accurate to the best of our belief and understanding.

TOLEDO, OHIO, December 23, 1914.

We, the undersigned, officers of the Toledo Grain & Milling Co., a corporation under the State laws of Ohio, located in the city of Toledo, Ohio, make the following statement, to wit:

The Toledo Grain & Milling Co., which is located on the Miami & Erie Canal at Locks 3, 4, and 5, just above where the canal empties into Swan Creek, has a mill and storage elevator which is dependent upon this creek for its power in the conduct of the aforesaid business. This company has a lease from the State of Ohio for water power from this canal, calling for 4,800 cubic feet of water per minute at wier at Lock 6, sufficient to give them 150 horsepower. This water passes through their water wheels, then into the levels below, and thence into Swan Creek. Our lease does not expire until December 31, 1942, or 28 years. This company's mill has a capacity of 500 barrels of flour, 200 tons of meal, chop, and feed per day, also has a grain-storage capacity of 200,000 bushels. Should Swan Creek be declared not navigable and closed for all navigation, as per bill S. 6113, before your honorable body, the next step would be taken to ask the State of Ohio to relinquish their rights to the canal terminal, and thereby damage this growing and thriving industry without an adequate compensation for damages.

In the year of 1907 the State of Ohio, at tremendous cost, built five new locks, locking the water from the Miami & Erie Canal into Swan Creek. These locks are built of concrete and very permanent construction. This present milling property and their predecessors have occupied this property for the conduct of their business since the year of 1848.

(Exhibits A and B are true photographs of recent date of our mills located on the Miami & Erie Canal.)

STATE OF OHIO, Lucas County, ss:

I, D. W. Camp, being first duly sworn, on my oath say that the foregoing statement has been made by myself from the records of the books of the Toledo Grain & Milling Co., and also from common knowledge of conditions affecting the Miami & Erie Canal and Swan Creek, and the same are true and accurate to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Whereas every nation in the world is trying to increase its waterways and dockage, in the knowledge that water transportation is the cheapest known transportation, and believing that the surest and speediest way to develop the resources of our city and the growth of the community and promote prosperity to every interest is to improve all our waterways as fast and as far as we can; and

Whereas there is some discussion with reference to the elimination of that part of Swan Creek which is now navigable and is being used by many industries for dock purposes: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, members of the Toledo Produce Exchange, are opposed to the elimination of Swan Creek and the loss of any of its dock properties by the diversion of this stream; and further be it

Resolved, That we would favor the deepening and straightening of the present stream, thereby increasing its present usefulness.

I, Archibald Gassaway, secretary of the Toledo Produce Exchange of the city of Toledo, hereby certify the foregoing to be a true copy of a resolution passed by the Toledo Produce Exchange on the 2d day of June, 1913, the original of which is on file in the office of said exchange at Toledo, Ohio.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto subscribed my name and affixed the seal of the said exchange the day and date above written.

We the undersigned officers of the Ohio Builders' Supply Co., a corporation under the State laws of Ohio, located in the city of Toledo, Ohio, make the following statement:

1. That the boats of the Doville Lake Sand & Gravel Co., of Toledo, Ohio, regularly during the season of navigation deliver at our dock the necessary sand and other material for the conduct of our business.

2. That during the season of 1914 we handled over our docks 19,277 tons of sand and gravel from the Great Lakes and the Canadian waters.

3. We hereby attach Exhibits A, B, and C, which represent a true photograph of our dock located on Swan Creek at Toledo, Ohio.

LEVERETT ALCOTT ROWLEY,
Notary Public, Lucas County, Ohio.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. WHITACRE].

Mr. WHITACRE. Mr. Speaker, the Chinese have no monopoly on tricks that are vain; and the remark made by the gentleman from Kansas here a few minutes ago—that when you have something rotten and want to get it through, bring it in in the last hours—applies to this.

Mr. GORDON. Riders on appropriation bills.

Mr. WHITACRE. Bring it in in the last hours and shut off all debate; shut the mouths of everybody who has anything to say about it. This proposition to declare this creek nonnavigable is rotten from top to bottom. The purpose of it is to take away the private property of a few private citizens in order to enhance the value of the private property of a few other private citizens.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITACRE. No; I can not yield; I have only three minutes. You have had your debate and you have cut off all other debate.

Mr. SHERWOOD. If the gentleman wants the truth he will yield.

Mr. WHITACRE. I will yield if the gentleman will give me five minutes of his time.

Mr. SHERWOOD. I can not get any time.

Mr. WHITACRE. Then do not take up my time. This creek is navigable and is used every day in the year except when it is frozen up.

Mr. SHERWOOD. I challenge the gentleman to produce a single vessel that ever sailed up that creek.

Mr. WHITACRE. I can show the gentleman a picture of the creek.

Mr. SHERWOOD. The gentleman can not name a vessel that ever sailed up that creek.

Mr. WHITACRE. I can name lots of them. I will tell you gentlemen what that creek is used for. There are people on the creek who have sand docks, and they supply the city with sand. The sand is taken from up the Maumee River and brought down on sand barges and is unloaded on these docks on Swan Creek and then distributed to all the builders and people of the city who want to build. All the docks on this part of the river [indicating on the map] are taken up and monopolized, and there is no place for these people to unload, except to go way down the river, along here. The purpose is to drive these men out and monopolize the sand business in the hands of a few men who happen to have the luck to get a dock that is along the river here.

Mr. KEY of Ohio. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. WHITACRE. No; I will not yield. I have not the time. If these people are driven out of there, the city of Toledo for all time to come—all the builders—will be compelled to pay an extra cost for their sand. It costs about 25 cents per ton per mile for trucking, and they will have 4 or 5 miles to haul that load of sand, and that is a perpetual burden on all the building operations in the city.

Mr. MOORE. How much water is there in this creek?

Mr. WHITACRE. Twelve to fifteen feet at high water.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield four minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. SMALL].

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Speaker, no Member can more seriously object to the manner in which this bill comes back here than I have, and I doubt if any Member of the House has more grounds for objection for local reasons, and still I am going to vote for the motion to concur in the Senate bill. The only reason I shall do so is the information that comes to us that it is a concurrence with this bill or no river and harbor bill at this session. The failure to pass the bill would be a public calamity. Works in progress would cease, Government plants would deteriorate, and our water-borne commerce would suffer. This bill carries a $25,000,000 appropriation from the Treasury, and $5,000,000 diverted from appropriations heretofore made for various projects and not used, making a total of $30,000,000.

Mr. GORDON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SMALL. No; I can not yield. I wish to present just two propositions, however, as illustrating the inconsistency of the Senate in the manner of presenting this bill to us. The House framed the best bill which it could present after months of patient consideration. All the important projects under construction were provided for by appropriations sufficient to continue work until June 30, 1916. There were evidently objections by some Member or Members of the Senate to items of appropriation in that bill because of lack of merit, and yet every item as reported by the House Committee on Rivers and Harbors and as passed by this House had previously received the unqualified approval of the Army engineers. It is understood that this Senate bill was submitted by the Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON], and that the Senate reluctantly felt constrained to accept it or have the bill as reported by the Senate committee talked to death.

Now, what do we find, in spite of the objections to the items in the bill as passed by the House?

We find the Senate passing a lump appropriation of $30,000,000 to be spent—how? In the discretion of the engineers, and to be allotted by them. Presumably the engineers will make the allotment to the projects selected by your committee and by this House. Could there be an example of greater inconsistency than that which is presented to us? The other body could not accept the House bill, every item of which had been recommended by the Army engineers; and yet they appropriate the lump sum of $30,000,000 to be expended in the discretion of these same Army engineers.

Just one other illustration: This bill provides for the reexamination of certain projects upon which favorable reports have heretofore been made and which have been adopted and appropriations made therefor. Among those projects for which reexamination is provided is a section of the intracoastal waterway from Norfolk, Va., to Beaufort, N. C. If there has been any one project heretofore adopted by Congress which has been surveyed more than any other, it has been this section of the intracoastal waterway. Beginning with 1875, there have been at least five examinations and surveys, every one favorable; and yet this bill provides that there shall be a reexamination. I might advert to other items in the Senate bill which provides for reexamination of other projects, but I cite this simply to show the inconsistency which is back of the Senate bill and upon which it is predicated, and I hope that this will be the last time that the House will be called upon to approve such a bill as this.

Referring again to the intracoastal waterway from Norfolk to Beaufort Inlet, N. C., there have been an unusually large number of examinations and surveys of this inland waterway. In 1875 Congress ordered a survey from the southern end of the Dismal Swamp Canal to the Cape Fear River, and a most valuable report by S. T. Abert was made, which is to be found in the Annual Report of the Chief of Engineers for 1876, page 376.

There were several subsequent reports, but the most important was that authorized in the river and harbor act of June 13, 1902, submitted to Congress February 19, 1904, and is printed as House Document No. 563, Fifty-eighth Congress, second session. This report covers the route from Norfolk, Va., to Beaufort, N. C., Inlet. The authorization was to determine the most advantageous route, with a channel depth of not less than 16 feet, and the law further directed the engineers to include the probable cost of any existing privately-owned waterway which might form a part of the proposed route and which it might be to the interest of the United States to acquire. The special board detailed thereon made an elaborate favorable report. The Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors in reveiwing this report, while conceding the importance of this waterway, stated as their conclusion that the cost of a waterway 16 feet in depth was greater than the resulting benefits would justify and recommended that another survey be had between Norfolk and Beaufort with a view to securing a depth of 10 or 12 feet, as might be most desirable, and they further expressed the opinion that a waterway of this lesser depth would greatly benefit commerce and possess military advantages.

Congress authorized another examination and survey from Norfolk to Beaufort in the river and harbor act of March 3, 1905, with a depth of 10 to 12 feet, and this work was assigned to a special board of engineer officers, and their report, with the concurring approval of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors and the Chief of Engineers, was submitted to Congress on December 3, 1906, and is printed as House Document No. 84, Fifty-ninth Congress, second session. This report contains estimate of cost for a depth of 10 and 12 feet, respectively, but recommended the latter depth. It also recommends the purchase of the Albemarle & Chesapeake Canal as a part of the route, provided the said canal could be purchased by the United States for a sum not exceeding $500,000. This report is altogether favorable to the project.

By the act of March 2, 1907, Congress provided for the construction of one section of this waterway from Norfolk to Beaufort, by making an appropriation for the construction of the Adams Creek Canal connecting Neuse River with Beaufort Inlet, with a channel depth of 10 feet. This canal was so constructed as to admit of dredging it to a greater depth.

In the river and harbor act of March 3, 1909, Congress authorized the survey for a continuous waterway from Boston to Beaufort, with a maximum depth of 25 feet and such lesser depths along any portion as may be found sufficient for commercial, naval, and military purposes. This report was submitted to Congress on January 4, 1912, and is printed as House Document No. 391, Sixty-second Congress, second session. This is an elaborate report and discusses in detail all the intervening links between Boston and Beaufort, including the link from Norfolk to Beaufort. This report recommended the construction of a waterway 12 feet deep between Norfolk and Beaufort at a total cost of $5,400,000, which included $500,000 for the purchase of the existing Albemarle & Chesapeake Canal.

Congress adopted the project from Norfolk to Beaufort in accordance with the report last named in the river and harbor act of 1912, and appropriated $600,000, of which $500,000 was to be used in the purchase of the Albemarle & Chesapeake Canal property. This canal has been purchased and is now the property of the United States.

In the river and harbor act of 1913 an additional appropriation of $800,000 was made for this project. It is understood that contracts have been made which involve the expenditure of substantially all the existing appropriations. The work on this project so far undertaken is on that section between Norfolk and Albemarle Sound.

Out of the lump appropriation contained in the river and harbor act of 1914, no allotment was made for this project for the reason that it was assumed that the existing appropriations would continue the work up to March, 1915.

There has never been an unfavorable report on this inland waterway from Norfolk to Beaufort as to its commercial and military advantages.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, how does the time stand?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GARNER). The gentleman from Florida has five minutes remaining.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GOEKE].

Mr. GOEKE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to say just a few words about the provision in this bill that withdraws jurisdiction of the United States over Swan Creek in the city of Toledo. As far as I am personally concerned, I am content to rest my vote on that proposition upon the advice of my distinguished colleague, Gen. SHERWOOD, who represents that district and city. There is no man in Congress or out of Congress who knows more about the merits of the question than he does, and when he says that the people of Toledo want this bill passed in this form, I believe him. He would not misrepresent the facts. This House can well afford to follow his judgment and vote for the bill. [Applause.]

Mr. SHERWOOD. I would say to the gentleman that every newspaper in Toledo but one, 20 civic societies, every leading business on Summit Street, with 6,000 names in the petition, approve the passage of this bill.

Mr. GORDON. And every city official in Toledo is against it.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOEKE. Yes.

Mr. SHERLEY. There is a protest filed here in which it is stated that in order to get the newspapers to publish this propaganda they had to have paid advertisements.

Mr. SHERWOOD. This is an editorial from the Toledo Blade.

Mr. GOEKE. These protests that the distinguished gentleman from Kentucky produces here—and I have seen them—are furnished by a gentleman named John B. Friend, the paid attorney of the people who are protesting against the passage of this bill.

Mr. WHITACRE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOEKE. Yes.

Mr. WHITACRE. Is there any other paid attorney of the other interest here?

Mr. GOEKE. I have no knowledge of that.

Mr. WHITACRE. I have.

Mr. GOEKE. If the gentleman has he ought to make it known; but I would like to say to my distinguished colleague from Ohio, for whose judgment I have a great deal of respect, that I can not understand why he is meddling in this thing so vociferously this morning. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. SHERWOOD. Selling bricks.

Mr. GORDON. Why was not this sent to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce?

Mr. GOEKE. Mr. Speaker, the only thing that the United States Government and the people of the United States relinquish, if we pass this amendment, is that in the future the Government can not appropriate money to improve this little creek in the city of Toledo that has been a common nuisance for 20 years.

Mr. SHERLEY. Does it not mean that the Federal Government gives up all control of any kind over it?

Mr. GORDON. Certainly.

Mr. GOEKE. And when it does that the only material control it gives up is the right to expend money on that creek—nothing more and nothing less?

Mr. SHERLEY. Is it not true that there are terminal facilities there that one railroad has, and that all of the other railroads have terminal facilities on the Maumee, and that by closing this you cut out competition?

Mr. GOEKE. I want to answer that by saying that if there are any private rights involved in this question the courts of Ohio will see to it that every man's rights are protected.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Ohio has expired.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. FREAR].

Mr. FREAR. Mr. Speaker, for four days I endeavored as best I could in a humble way to try to point out defects in this year's river and harbor bill when it was before the House in January. Now, I have three minutes in which to discuss a $30,000,000 proposition that has not been discussed as to its merits by anyone thus far. You have talked for a half hour on a Swan Creek proposition to vacate a creek. It has been stated here that the House is making itself ridiculous because of action in the other branch of the Capitol. Let me say to you, gentlemen, it may be true. Think of the proposition you have here, voting for $30,000,000 for rivers and harbors and putting that money into the hands of one man, an Army engineer. Never before in the history of this country have you done such a thing, except in the case of a President, and then during war for war purposes. To-day $30,000,000 is the unexpended balance on all projects, or it was on the 1st day of last January. Twenty-five million dollars are appropriated here in a lump sum by this substitute bill, and $5,000,000 more of unexpended balance is added to that for 1915. That makes $30,000,000 more to be expended—how? According to the judgment and the wishes of one man, an Army engineer. Congress has surrendered its representative capacity to one man. I agree with you on that; but we have surrendered to an Army engineer, who determines where this $30,000,000 is to go. Think of the responsibility, when 10 years ago this appropriation was only $10,000,000. Now you are making it $30,000,000, and let me say to you, gentlemen, that with $42,000,000 balance in the Treasury, the lowest balance you have had for years, and that is the report of yesterday, you are now assuming the responsibility of placing $30,000,000 in the hands of the engineers of this country to expend as they see fit—all of that vast amount on one proposition, if they choose. You have lost all control of legislation by this Senate amendment. I desired to offer an amendment to reduce the $30,000,000 substitute to five or ten million dollars, covering the cost of maintenance, and I would have done so, but that privilege under the parliamentary situation has been lost. You say that the engineers are to be trusted. How many projects have been approved by the engineers that have been abandoned—wasted money? Read the RECORD of last night and find a list mentioned in the Senate which have been abandoned after having been commenced by the engineers. How many projects in this House have been defeated that were recommended by the engineers? One of $18,000,000 during the past session. How many projects are land-reclamation projects, water-power projects, or projects for various other special interests? The engineers are to be given the sole right by this bill to expend $30,000,000 of the people's money for the first time in the history of the country, with $30,000,000 of an unexpended balance now on hand. And this vast amount and power is for a river and harbor bill.

Army engineers now pass on all propositions; now they are to legislate by determining where this extravagant, wasteful appropriation shall be expended. Why not abrogate all powers to the Army engineers? What influence may govern their action?

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. COOPER. Mr. Speaker, the attaching of riders to general appropriation bills is a vicious way to legislate. The rider on this appropriation, a rider having nothing to do with appropriations, but declaring a stream to be nonnavigable, is absolutely without excuse and worthy only of condemnation. The question whether this stream should be declared nonnavigable ought not to be here as a rider on an appropriation bill but as a separate proposition, so that it could be decided on its own merits. If it could not pass on its merits, then it ought not to pass at all. A bill to make this stream nonnavigable was introduced in the present House; but numerous and strong protests against the bill came from business men in Toledo, and the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce has never had hearings on it, and, of course, has never reported it to the House. And yet here it is as a rider.

These protests set forth, among other things, that the city of Toledo has just completed a dock 915 feet long on this stream at a total cost of $115,000.

The Clover Leaf Terminal Co. has its only dock on this stream, and the closing of this creek would deprive them of all of the benefits of the river cargo navigation. There is a certain kind of traffic that comes to this railroad, which has its only terminal facilities on the creek.

And if we deprive it of these terminal facilities that particular kind of traffic will go to other railroads. The mayor and all of the officials of the city, so these protests say, have refused to ask for this legislation. And it is most remarkable that it should be here now in the form of a rider upon a river and harbor bill, the River and Harbor Committee of the House not having jurisdiction over bills to declare streams nonnavigable.

But we are asked to vote for this rider and declare a stream in the city of Toledo nonnavigable over the protest of many business men of the city, and without the sanction of the officials of the city or of the State, and, as we know, without the recommendation of our own committee headed by the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ADAMSON]. No committee of the House has even considered the proposition. This method of making laws ought not to be tolerated.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. GOODWIN] has one minute remaining.

Mr. SMALL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection. [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I make the same request.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Arkansas agreed to yield to me.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. TREADWAY. Mr. Speaker, I regret exceedingly as a member of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors to be obliged to vote against the motion of the distinguished chairman. He himself says that he does not believe in the motion he makes, that it is not good legislation for us to abrogate all our rights, as this great legislative body will do, if we accept the amendments. His only reason for the motion he makes is that he feels it will be impossible to secure anything else. Further than that, I want to call attention to the fact that we are confusing the provisions of very important legislation, as most of this debate has been confined to a little stream in Toledo, Ohio. Do not vote on that proposition, gentlemen, but vote on the merits of whether or not we should allow our legislative rights to be abrogated entirely and taken away from us and placed in the hands of one department. Do just the same for the War Department; do it for the Navy Department; do it for all the departments, if you do it for one. Do not let us continue this policy any further.

We were confronted by the same situation at the last session, and then yielded without the least effort to have the method of appropriating for rivers and harbors which has been in vogue for many years continued. What object can there be for the existence of the Committee on Rivers and Harbors if, after months of careful study, their work is to be swept aside and all authority concentrated in the hands of the Chief of Engineers? It is neither fair to the committee nor a proper method of appropriating money. I never have been able to bring myself to support measures in which I did not believe, and I can not do so in this case.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Massachusetts has expired.

[By unanimous consent, Mr. SPARKMAN, Mr. GOEKE, Mr. CARAWAY, Mr. HAMILL, Mr. WHITACRE, Mr. JACOWAY, and Mr. MADDEN were granted leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD on the river and harbor bill.]

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the Murray resolution.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, in the rush last night I forgot to ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the applebox bill. I do it now.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the applebox bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the same bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Florida [Mr. SPARKMAN] is entitled to three minutes.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. RUSSELL].

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. Speaker, I represent a large territory in the heart of the Mississippi Valley and a constituency that is deeply interested in the improvement of the Mississippi River and in the improvement of its levees for the protection of that rich agricultural country against frequent floods from that river. Not only because I live in that valley am I interested in this bill, but because I know that the American people and all of the commercial interests of this country are deeply interested in the improvement of the waterways of the country and in water transportation.

There has been an effort in this House to-day to prejudice this bill because of one-man power, so called, in another branch of the American Congress. I myself am opposed to that sort of dictation as much as any man in this House, but it is a condition that confronts us to-day, and not a theory. The chairman of the Rivers and Harbors Committee [Mr. SPARKMAN], and nearly all of the members of that committee, if not all of them, express themselves as believing that it is this bill to-day or nothing. I know that the opposition say there is an objectionable item in this bill making nonnavigable Swan Creek, in the city of Toledo, Ohio. The body at the other end of this Capitol has as much right to legislate as we have, and I am not yet ready to vote to abolish the United States Senate. They had a right to put that item in this bill, and I understand that the two United States Senators from the State of Ohio, one a Democrat and one a Republican, are both in favor of this proposition.

Mr. GORDON. Who told you that?

Mr. RUSSELL. Gen. SHERWOOD told me that.

Mr. GORDON. I am advised that is not so.

Mr. RUSSELL. The gentleman who represents the Toledo district, and not only represents that district but lives in that city, the grand old man of this House, Gen SHERWOOD [applause], stands here and says that he is willing to take the responsibility of making Swan Creek nonnavigable. If he and the two Senators from Ohio favor this item, why should we from other States object?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SPARKMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. AUSTIN].

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, this House can not afford to stop work on the improvement of the hundreds of waterways in this country for 15 months. We can not afford in the interests of the public service to have the engineering force disorganized and discharged, a trained and experienced force, turned loose in every State of the Union. This is a serious proposition before us. Our responsibility as representatives of the people, as custodians of the interests of the various departments of this Government, should cause us to lay aside all spite and pique at the action of certain Members of the Senate and pass this bill. We might as well fail or refuse to vote the necessary supplies for running the Army or the Navy or the Department of Agriculture. All of these existing projects have been adopted, millions of dollars have been expended on them, and we are confronted now with a cessation of work and an injury to the public works of this country on rivers and harbors which will run into the millions. If this work is not continued—if it is stopped—what has been done will be largely washed away, and we shall be called upon later on to vote thousands and thousands of dollars to repair the great injury to the rivers and harbors because we fail to pass this measure.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. SHERLEY. Division.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky demands a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 104, noes 47.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. RUSSELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and taking this bill from the Speaker's table and concurring in the Senate amendment.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that, in the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds had voted in the affirmative.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 222, nays 99, not voting 102, as follows:

[Roll No. 98.]

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I was in and out of the hall two or three times. I do not know whether I was in the hall when my name was called or not.

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not think the gentleman brings himself within the rule.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

PENSIONS.

Mr. KEY of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I present conference reports on three pension bills, and I ask unanimous consent that the statements be read in lieu of the reports.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio presents conference reports on three pension bills, and asks unanimous consent that the statements of the House conferees be read in lieu of the reports. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the statement of the House conferees on House bill 21089.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1506).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 21089) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 10, 11, 14.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 2, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 12, 13, 15, 16, and 17, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 1: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 1, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of "$17" insert "$12"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 7: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of "$17" insert "$12"; and the Senate agree to the same.

JOHN A. KEY,
WM. H. MURRAY,
SAM R. SELLS,
Managers on the part of the House.

BENJ. F. SHIVELY,
CHARLES F. JOHNSON,
REED SMOOT,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

STATEMENT.

On amendment No. 1 the House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 1, and agrees to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of "$17" insert "$12"; and the Senate agree to the same. It is not believed that the facts of this case justify a higher rate than $12 per month.

On amendment No. 2 the House concurs in the Senate amendment. The allowance of pension in this case is not justified or warranted by the facts presented.

On amendment No. 3 the House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 3 and agrees to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of "$17" insert "$12"; and the Senate agree to the same. From the facts as presented in this case it is not believed that a higher rate than $12 per month is warranted.

On amendment No. 4 the House concurs in the Senate amendment. This is only to change the phraseology.

On amendment No. 5 the House concurs in the Senate amendment. It is not believed that a pension in this case is warranted by the facts presented.

On amendment No. 6 the House concurs in the Senate amendment. It is not believed that the allowance of pension in this case is warranted.

On amendment No. 7 the House recedes from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate No. 7 and agrees to the same with an amendment as follows: Restore the matter stricken out by said amendment with an amendment as follows: In lieu of "$17" insert "$12"; and the Senate agree to the same. A higher rate than $12 per month is not justified by the facts of this case.

On amendment No. 8 the House concurs in the Senate amendment. This is only a change in the service.

On amendment No. 9 the House concurs in the Senate amendment. A higher rate than $12 per month does not appear to be warranted by the facts of this case.

On amendment No. 10 the Senate recedes. By the facts of this case it is believed that a pension is warranted and justified.

On amendment No. 11 the Senate recedes. From the evidence filed in support of this case it is believed that a pension is justified.

On amendment Nos. 12 and 13 the House concurs in the Senate amendments. This is merely a change of phraseology.

On amendment No. 14 the Senate recedes. An allowance of pension at $17 per month appears to be justified by the evidence filed in support of this case.

On amendment No. 15 the House concurs in the Senate amendment. A higher rate than $12 per month is not warranted by the evidence filed in support of this case.

On amendments Nos. 16 and 17 the House concurs in the Senate amendments. This is merely a change in phraseology.

JOHN A. KEY,
WILLIAM H. MURRAY,
SAM R. SELLS,
Managers on the part of the House.

The conference report was agreed to.

The Clerk read the conference report on House bill 20643, as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1505).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. JOHN A. KEY,
WM. H. MURRAY,
SAM R. SELLS,
Managers on the part of the House.

BENJ. F. SHIVELY,
CHARLES F. JOHNSON,
REED SMOOT,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The conference report was agreed to.

The Clerk read the conference report on House bill 21218, as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1512).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 21218) granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 1, 3, and 6.

BENJ. F. SHIVELY,
CHARLES F. JOHNSON,
REED SMOOT,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The conference report was agreed to.

EXPLORATION FOR COAL, PHOSPHATE, ETC.

Mr. FERRIS. I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H. R. 16136) to authorize exploration for and disposition of coal, phosphate, gas, potassium, or sodium, with Senate amendments, and to disagree to the Senate amendments and ask for a conference.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent to take this bill from the Speaker's table, disagree to all of the Senate amendments, and ask for a conference. Is there objection?

There was no objection, and the Speaker appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. FERRIS, Mr. GRAHAM of Illinois, and Mr. LENROOT.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution:

Senate concurrent resolution 38.

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the action of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and of the Vice President of the United States and President of the Senate in signing the enrolled bill (S. 3362) to authorize the Secretary of Commerce, through the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Bureau of Fisheries, to make a survey of natural oyster beds and rocks and barren bottoms contiguous thereto in waters along the coast of and within the State of Texas, be, and is hereby, rescinded, and that in the reenrollment of the bill the words "and directed," in line 4 of the bill, be stricken out and the words "in his discretion" substituted therefor.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committees of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses to bills of the following titles:

H. R. 19909. An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes.

H. R. 20201. An act making appropriations for the diplomatic and consular service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

By unanimous consent, leave was granted to Mr. SMALL to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the naval appropriation bill.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Indian appropriation bill (H. R. 20150), disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Indian appropriation bill (H. R. 20150), disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate. Is there objection?

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the Senate has placed in this Indian appropriation bill 171 amendments, most of which are very important. I will ask the gentleman, ought we not to go into Committee of the Whole, at least to let the membership of the House know something about what we are going to consider and vote on, rather than wait for a conference report, which we must adopt in whole or reject in whole?

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Mississippi well knows what that means. It means, perhaps, that the House would not finish the bill and that we would have no Indian appropriation bill this year, because if we went into the Committee of the Whole to discuss these 171 amendments it would probably keep the House running until adjournment comes to-morrow at noon.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Is it not a fact that a large number of these amendments relate to the placing back in the bill of items for the maintenance of Indian schools, which went out on a point of order?

Mr. FERRIS. I think that is true, but I have not had an opportunity to examine it.

Mr. HARRISON. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 20150, suspend the rules, and disagree to the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma moves to suspend the rules and take from the Speaker's table the Indian appropriation bill, disagree to all the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate. Is a second demanded?

Mr. HARRISON. I demand a second.

Mr. CARTER. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

Mr. HARRISON. I object.

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as tellers the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS] and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON].

The House divided, and the tellers reported that there were 94 ayes and 3 noes.

So a second was ordered.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, I make a point of order that there was not a quorum voting.

Mr. MANN. That is not a good point of order.

The SPEAKER. It does not take a quorum to vote on the question.

Mr. HARRISON. I make the point of order that no quorum is present.

Mr. MANN. That is too late to affect this vote. Other business has intervened. The gentleman first made a point of order that there was not a quorum voting, and it does not require a quorum to vote. Now, it is too late to make a point of order that there is no quorum present and have it affect the vote.

The SPEAKER. Making the point of order that there is no quorum present would not affect the result of this vote. If the gentleman wishes to make the point of order simply to have a quorum, he has that right.

Mr. HARRISON. I make the point of order that no quorum is present.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will count. [After counting.] Two hundred and fifteen Members present, a quorum. The gentleman from Oklahoma has 20 minutes and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] has 20 minutes.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I only desire to make the short statement again that there are 171 different Senate amendments to this bill. It will take the conferees quite a length of time, as the House will understand, to try to come to an agreement with the Senate conferees on these matters, so I am not going to take up the time of the House at this late hour in the day. I will make no further statement, but I will reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HARRISON. Is it in order for me to ask unanimous consent while a motion to suspend the rules is pending? I want to ask the gentleman from Oklahoma if he will not consent, before a vote is taken on the adoption of the conference report in the House, that the conferees will allow us to have a separate vote on amendment 120.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman from Mississippi will yield, that vote, if a separate vote is to be had, should be had now. It will do no good to come in here to-morrow morning and have a separate vote on that amendment, for it will be too late. If the gentleman wants a separate vote, he ought to have it now. We might as well have a half an hour debate on the amendment as to have 40 minutes' debate on this proposition.

Mr. CARTER. I did not quite understand the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman from Oklahoma would ask unanimous consent to disagree to all of the Senate amendments except the one which the gentleman from Mississippi is interested in, and that there be 20 or 30 minutes' debate, I do not think he would meet with any objection.

Mr. CARTER. I have no objection to that.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Let me suggest that that would be a good solution of the matter, if the gentleman from Mississippi will agree to abide by the result of the vote upon that amendment and not continue his obstruction.

Mr. MANN. That will be over with.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. At some later time the gentleman might raise a point of no quorum.

Mr. HARRISON. Of course, Mr. Speaker, I would have to submit to the result of the vote of the House on the question voted on, but I would not like to agree as to any future action.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Inasmuch as we only have 19 or 20 hours left, the gentleman might make an agreement covering that time.

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, it ought to be said by somebody that this amendment, upon which the gentleman wants a separate vote, is not a Mississippi Choctaw amendment. There was no Choctaw amendment.

Mr. CAMPBELL. May I ask what the question involved is in the Senate amendment upon which the gentleman wants a separate vote?

Mr. CARTER. It is reopening the rolls to another set of people who do not claim as Mississippi Choctaws.

Mr. FERRIS. It has been voted on time and time again.

Mr. HARRISON. If it does not apply to the Choctaws, why does the gentleman object to it?

Mr. CARTER. I am as much opposed to opening the rolls to anybody as to the Choctaws when it has been closed by Congress, closed by the commission, and closed by the court. I am in favor of keeping the agreement with the Indians.

Mr. MANN. I hope the gentleman from Oklahoma will make the request to take the bill from the Speaker's table, disagree to all Senate amendments except the one that the gentleman from Mississippi speaks about, and then have an agreement as to time for debate, and have a separate vote on the amendment. I doubt whether the gentleman can carry his motion if he does not do it.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my motion to suspend the rules and ask unanimous consent that a separate vote be had immediately.

Mr. MANN. Why does not the gentleman ask unanimous consent to take the bill from the Speaker's table?

Mr. CARTER. I ask unanimous consent to take the bill from the Speaker's table, disagree to all the amendments except Senate amendment No. 120, and that debate on that be limited to 10 minutes on a side.

Mr. HARRISON. I would like 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that this bill be taken from the Speaker's table, disagree to all Senate amendments except Senate amendment No. 120, and that there shall be 10 minutes debate on a side.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have five minutes.

Mr. CARTER. Then make it 15 minutes on a side.

The SPEAKER. Debate to be 15 minutes on a side, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] to have 10 minutes and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] 5 minutes, and the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER] 15 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, let us have the amendment of the Senate, No. 120, reported.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report Senate amendment No. 120.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 27, line 15, after "Act" insert: , except where contracts have been heretofore approved by the Secretary of the Interior, in accordance with existing law: And provided further, That such contract shall first be approved by the existing Department of the Interior: Provided further, That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to readjudicate those applications for enrollment upon the rolls of the Five Civilized Tribes which were pending unadjudicated in the department on December 1, 1906, and also those which came to said department between said date and the final closing of the rolls on March 4, 1907, and to add to the appropriate rolls the names of those persons shown to be equitably entitled to such enrollment: Provided, That such readjudication shall be made upon the record as it stood on March 4, 1907: And provided further, That upon such enrollment the said Secretary shall pay to each of said enrolled persons, in lieu of an allotment of land, the sum of money directed to be paid to each person enrolled, upon said rolls, by the Act of August 1, 1914.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, this amendment was offered in the Senate this morning by Senator LA FOLLETTE. There has been much discussion in this House and at the other end of the Capitol over this enrollment question. Senator LA FOLLETTE offered this amendment, which in part and to a very large extent will settle the question. The gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. CARTER], I understand, states that this would not affect the Mississippi Choctaws. I have not read the debates of the Senate of this morning, because the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD does not carry them, as the Senate did not adjourn, I think, until about 5 o'clock; yet, in my opinion, this amendment will cover some of the Mississippi Choctaw claimants, for the reason that it says that the Secretary of the Interior is authorized and directed to readjudicate those applications for enrollment upon the rolls of the Five Civilized Tribes, and the Choctaw Tribe is one of the Five Civilized Tribes, which were pending unadjudicated in the department on December 1, 1906, and also those which came to said department between that date and the final closing of the rolls on March 4, 1907. Senator OWEN, from Oklahoma, in a brief that he filed in the Court of Claims, wherein he was suing for his fee as attorney for the Mississippi Choctaw claimants—and this is the milk in the coconut—in speaking of the McKinnon report, said:

In this report the commissioner made a schedule of 1,925 Mississippi Choctaws whom he identified as Mississippi Choctaws entitled to citizenship by treaty rights.

The report declares that the Mississippi Choctaws were poor, ignorant, and helpless. This report in behalf of the full blood Mississippi Choctaw, signed and submitted to the Dawes Commission, was disapproved eight years later by Mr. Hitchcock on March 4, 1907, without notice or warning, so that no person upon this roll ever knew for eight years whether he was so identified as to be entitled to be removed as an identified Mississippi Choctaw.

Finally he said:

The entire schedule was rejected without notice.

Mr. Speaker, there are now on this roll in the Interior Office about 1,100 of these Mississippi Choctaws who went before Commissioner McKinnon, representing the Dawes Commission, and the other commissioners, and identified themselves as Mississippi Choctaws, and they proved themselves entitled to enrollment. They thought they would be enrolled when the final rolls were approved on the 4th of March, 1907, and without reason those men who were properly identified by those commissioners were not placed upon the final rolls of the nation. Their names are there. They are entitled to enrollment, and they in part were the ones that Senator LA FOLLETTE wanted to see enrolled. This Senate amendment does not say they shall be enrolled, but it says that the Secretary of the Interior shall readjudicate those cases and enroll those who, in his opinion, ought to be enrolled. Is there anything unfair in that amendment? Would it not save much time in the future in this House if that question can be settled and this amendment can be concurred in? I submit that this House could do no better service to an outraged and needy people than to adopt this Senate amendment so that at least for a time this question will be settled. [Applause.]

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, this proposition has been discussed by me upon several occasions in the House. I am satisfied that if the House this afternoon understands just what it is proposed in this amendment it will be concurred in. Contrary to the statement that has been made, this proposition has never been voted upon by this House. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] has offered amendments to various appropriation bills relating to the Mississippi Choctaws, but this does not open up that question except as to such Mississippi Choctaws who on December 1, 1906, had applications for enrollment pending before the Secretary of the Interior. My contention has always been with reference to those Choctaws that because of the condition in the Department of the Interior when the statute of limitations of March 4, 1907, applied, the Secretary of the Interior did not and could not consider a very large number of these cases at all, and they were disallowed without consideration. He himself begged of Congress to extend the time for the adjudication of these claims. Congress failed to do so. The Department of the Interior has in a report stated that these same 2,700 cases ought to be reexamined and ought to be readjudicated, and I want to say that this amendment as it comes to us from the Senate does not change the law in any particular. It does not give new rights to a single Choctaw. All in the world that it does is to provide that the Secretary of the Interior as to cases that were pending before him between December 1, 1906, and March 4, 1907, he shall reexamine the cases and readjudicate them. The amendment provides further that there shall be no new evidence taken, but that the readjudication shall be had upon the record then filed with the department.

I want to say to my friends who are opposing this proposition that when you oppose it you either take the position that you are not willing to trust the Secretary of the Interior to do justice to these Indians who had their applications filed, who did everything that the law then existing required them to do, or else you are afraid that if he does so he will find that some of these Choctaws in Oklahoma and some in the State of Mississippi are entitled to be placed upon the rolls, and you will be put in this position, that although there may be some hundreds of Indians entitled to be placed upon the rolls just as much as any Indian in Oklahoma to-day who has received his allotment, yet you do not propose that they shall have their rights.

Now, gentlemen will say that this question has been before the House and voted upon time and time again. I say this proposition has never been before the House. I say further that if we could have had this proposition squarely presented before the House—and it could not be, because it was subject to a point of order—if you could have had this proposition presented to this House when this bill originally passed, if it could have been presented last year, I have not hesitation in saying that this amendment would have been adopted by an overwhelming majority, and, if so, it ought to be concurred in now.

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. HAY]. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, how does the time stand?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Oklahoma has 15 minutes and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] has 6 minutes.

Mr. CARTER. I yield eight minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS].

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Speaker, at every session of Congress and several times every session this old threadbare enrollment question is brought in, and it is asked that it be retried and tried again. No decision will close it; no conclusion of any committee can stop it. The Interior Department can report against it, but still, like Banquo's ghost, with the galleries full of attorneys, who will be enriched if they can get these people enrolled, this question appears on the scene.

I hold in my hand a letter from the Secretary of the Interior, Mr. Lane, under date of January 8, 1915, which says, among other things, that on March 4, 1907, the Congress came along and said that the rolls were forever closed. It deals with Mississippi Choctaw matter in full. He knows what he is talking about. He had the facts before him. It is as follows:

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR ON THE HARRISON BILL (H. R. 12586).

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, January 8, 1915.

MY DEAR MR. STEPHENS: I have the honor to refer herein to a communication of August 12, 1914, from Hon. C. D. Carter, then acting chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives, with which was inclosed a copy of H. R. 12586, entitled "A bill to reopen the rolls of the Choctaw-Chickasaw Tribe and to provide for the awarding of the rights secured to certain persons by the fourteenth article of the treaty of Dancing Rabbit Creek, of date September 27, 1830." He also referred to H. R. 4536 and requested that I consider the two bills together and make a report thereon.

Upon examination of H. R. 4536, I find that said bill is identical with H. R. 19213, introduced by Mr. HARRISON, of Mississippi, in the Sixty-second Congress, second session, upon which last-mentioned bill the department submitted to your committee a report dated July 2, 1912. H. R. 12586, introduced in the present Congress by Mr. HARRISON, is a similar bill to the above-mentioned bills except that in said H. R. 12586 an additional paragraph is included in section 2 to provide for the enrollment of all persons who were identified as Mississippi Choctaws by the Dawes Commission in its report of March 10, 1899, commonly known as the McKennon roll, and of all persons identified as Mississippi Choctaws by the Dawes Commission from March 10, 1899, to March 4, 1907, whose identification was approved by the Secretary of the Interior, but whose names did not appear on the final citizenship rolls of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations.

The claims of Mississippi Choctaw Indians to recognition as citizens of the Choctaw Nation of Oklahoma and to share in the property of said nation are based upon article 14 of the treaty of September 27, 1830, (7 Stat. L., 333.) Pursuant to the terms of the treaty, a large number of Choctaws were transferred from Mississippi to the country west, later known as Indian Territory. These Choctaws who so removed and their descendants now constitute the main body of what is known as the Choctaw Nation. There were, however, a considerable number of Choctaws who remained behind in Mississippi, some of them under the provisions of article 14, above mentioned.

Said article 14 provided that the persons who claimed thereunder should not lose the privilege of a Choctaw citizen, but if they ever removed were not to be entitled to any part of the Choctaw annuity. The Indians who remained behind under the provisions of said article 14 received either land in Mississippi or scrip, which gave the applicants the right to enter public lands in certain Southern States. A part of said scrip, however, was later commuted by a money payment. Some of the fourteenth-article claimants later made their way West and joined the main body of the tribe in the Indian Territory. The Choctaw Council by various acts recognized the right of said absentee Mississippi Choctaws to remove to the nation, and actually invited them to do so.

Under the provisions of the Atoka agreement with the Choctaw and Chickasaw Tribes contained in the act of Congress of June 28, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 495), the supplemental agreement contained in the act of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. L., 641), and later acts of Congress for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of said agreements, the claims of individual Mississippi Choctaw Indians to be identified and to be enrolled as entitled to share in the property of the Choctaw Nation were fully considered by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes and by the department after full hearing, at which the claimants had ample opportunity to present all the evidence which they could procure in support of their claims. Very few claimants were able to prove descent from an ancestor who received or applied for benefits under the provisions of article 14 of the treaty of 1830.

The history of the Dawes Commission enrollment work relative to Mississippi Choctaw claimants is very fully set out in a communication of April 14, 1914, from William O. Beall, at one time secretary of the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes. A copy thereof is inclosed for your information.

For your further information as to the history of the Mississippi Choctaw claims and of the department action in the preparation of the final rolls there is inclosed a copy of department letter of July 2, 1912, to the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs of the House of Representatives.

Judge William H. H. Clayton in his decision in the case of Jack Amos v. The Choctaw Nation, a copy of which may be found in the appendix of the annual report of the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1901, said that no treaty or acts of the Choctaw Council or of any officer of the Choctaw Council since the treaty of 1830 could be cited, or at least he had not found them, whereby any right or privilege had been conferred, granted, or recognized in or to a Mississippi Choctaw so long as he remained away from his people, and that no right was recognized or conferred upon such absent Indian except upon the condition that he should remove to the nation, and the right was not to be consummated or enjoyed until actual removal.

Mississippi Choctaw Indians who, while the opportunity was theirs under the privileges accorded them, refused to emigrate with the tribe to the new country West, and who never shared in the burdens and hardships of the pioneer life incident to the establishment of the new tribal government west of the Mississippi, have at this late date (now that the tribal property of the Choctaw Nation made valuable by the emigrants is being divided per capita among the enrolled recognized citizens of the nation) no equitable right to share in said property.

With respect to the persons who were identified by the Dawes Commission as Mississippi Choctaws under the provisions of the act of Congress of June 28, 1898 (30 Stat. L., 495), but who failed to remove and make settlement in the Choctaw-Chickasaw country, as required by the act of Congress of July 1, 1902 (32 Stat. L., 641, secs. 41, 42, 43, and 44), it may be said that, irrespective of their unfortunate condition of poverty and ignorance, there is no ground, legal or equitable, for holding the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations responsible for the failure of said identified persons to comply with the law as to removal and settlement. No obligation rested upon the United States to provide means for the removal of such Indians.

Referring to the class of claimants whose names were contained in an identification roll submitted by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes on March 10, 1899, but never approved by the Secretary of the Interior, your attention is invited to the fact that the commission soon recognized the inaccuracy and incompleteness of that roll and requested the department to disregard it and to return the same to the commission. In order that there might be no doubt as to the standing of said roll, it was disapproved by the department on March 1, 1907. The larger part of the persons whose names were contained on that disapproved roll were afterwards placed on the approved identification rolls, and those who complied with the law as to removal and settlement were enrolled on the final rolls of Mississippi Choctaw Indians.

In the investigation and examination of Mississippi Choctaw claims made in 1900 and the years following by the Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes every effort that was possible to be made was made by said commission to reach all persons who had any equitable claim to recognition as Mississippi Choctaws, and especially to find those who were full-blood Choctaw Indians.

H. R. 4536 and 12586 in effect provide, so far as the Mississippi Choctaw claimants are concerned, a general reopening of the rolls of the Choctaw Nation, necessitating a review of all the cases which had been adversely decided by the United States courts, the Department of the Interior, and the Choctaw and Chickasaw citizenship court, as well as the consideration of claims not heretofore presented or considered, and empower the Secretary of the Interior to determine the rights of the claimants upon such evidence as may be produced by the applicants, without regard to any adverse judgment or decision heretofore rendered by any court or Commission to the Five Civilized Tribes, or the Department of the Interior, and without regard to any condition or disability heretofore imposed by any act of Congress.

The records of the department show that Mississippi Choctaw claimants have been to an unusual extent the victims of numerous extortionate contracts, and the correspondence in many cases indicates that contracts were obtained through misrepresentations as to the facts, and in some cases that such contracts were obtained from claimants who believed that the persons obtaining the contracts were Government agents. Your attention is invited to the report of Inspector McLaughlin, of this department, which report appears in print in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of July 10, 1914, commencing on page 13022.

Referring to section 9 of said bills, I am of the opinion that, in view of the large amount of tribal property yet to be disposed of and of other matters affecting the tribes, it would be inadvisable to abolish the tribal organization of the Choctaw and Chickasaw Nations at the present time.

In view of the facts as presented to me, I am of the opinion that no legislation should be enacted for the reopening of the rolls of the Choctaw Nation for the benefit of the Mississippi Choctaw claimants.

Very truly, yours,

FRANKLIN K. LANE.

Hon. JOHN H. STEPHENS,
Chairman Committee on Indian Affairs,
House of Representatives.

The resident Indians who have always obeyed their treaties and remained on their lands are entitled to their peace. The Oklahoma Indians should not be subjected to these troublesome and expensive enrollment propositions until the original Indians sent there have all died and passed away. The rolls were wide open for 10 or 12 years prior to March 4, 1907. Each day every citizen who had any right to participate in that property was invited to come there and have their cases tried and in all things adjudicated. The Congress of the United States passed an act creating the Dawes Commission, which was a board of eminent lawyers, and sent to Oklahoma. What for? To settle once and for all this enrollment question. They did settle it. They did close the rolls. They did report to Congress. Congress, acting on their decision, closed the rolls by an affirmative act of Congress.

Mr. CARLIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. I will.

Mr. CARLIN. Why were these Choctaws not enrolled?

Mr. FERRIS. Because they never lived there and are living in Mississippi now. They refused to come and live in Oklahoma in accordance with the terms of their treaty and their patent. The very terms of the patent issued by President Tyler in 1842 prescribed that they must come there, they must live there, and they must remain there. There is not even asserted to be any compliance with these terms.

Now, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] would have this Congress thrown into a filibuster at every session, three or four times. What for? To enroll people who never lived a day in Oklahoma; to enroll a lot of people who do not now live in Oklahoma; to enroll a lot of people who still refuse to live in Oklahoma. Can any thoughtful man who has given careful and painstaking attention to this proposition say that he will go in the face of a decision of Congress, a decision of the Federal court, a decision of the Dawes Commission, a decision of Secretary Lane and his predecessor, Secretary Fisher, and the latter's predecessor, Secretary Ballinger, and the decision of the three Indian Commissioners, and enroll people on our rolls that never lived a day in our State?

How long will the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] champion the rights of a lot of scavenger attorneys who roost in these galleries and who are trying to rob these Oklahoma Indian people? I ask him the question, and I ask him to take his time to answer it.

Mr. HARRISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. I will. I want to see the gentleman's face and observe what a man can mean by persistently carrying on the tactics which he has carried on in this House.

Mr. HARRISON. I wish to say that I will continue to fight for the Mississippi Choctaws just as long as I am continued by my people to be a Representative in this House.

Mr. FERRIS. And he will continue to receive the plaudits of those grafting attorneys who prabably now sit in the gallery, and the gentleman will receive the condemnation of the Indians whose property he is trying to take away.

Mr. HARRISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. I will, with pleasure.

Mr. HARRISON. Does not the gentleman know that in the last Indian appropriation bill we passed a law that said no contract made by any attorney with any Indian claimant was valid unless it was approved first by the Secretary of the Interior, and it is the law now, and consequently they could not be grafters?

Mr. FERRIS. I have a reply to the gentleman's statement that will satisfy him for all time. My reply to-day, and yesterday, and to-morrow, is that attorneys are and will be prosecuting claims for attorney's fees for themselves by reason of the enrollment of those names that were enrolled the last session of Congress. These same attorneys last session came to the Indian Committee and said if the Congress would enroll those few men they would quit this enrollment business. Congress unwisely, as I believe, took the bait and did enroll them, and these attorneys are now hovering around the Indian Office fighting for and trying to secure the fees for their enrollment and the Indian Office is trying to settle it amidst trouble. That is the reason the gentleman from Mississippi is in error about his interruption a moment ago.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. I will.

Mr. NORTON. Is it not a fact that these attorneys are holding up money in the Indian Bureau?

Mr. MURRAY. Eight hundred dollars out of $2,000.

Mr. FERRIS. And the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] is standing here, I believe in error, trying to help them get more fees. It is a shame; it is a disgrace. No man can long sustain himself in such a position; no Congress could sustain itself if it should ever yield to such proposals. Surely this Congress will not go in the face of all law, all treaty stipulation, all decisions of courts, and every precedent on the subject that any man or set of men can marshal forward.

Mr. HARRISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. With pleasure.

Mr. HARRISON. I read a moment ago from the brief, that the distinguished Senator from Oklahoma, a statement——

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman has often read that before.

Mr. HARRISON. Of some services as attorney for Indian claimants for which he was asking for practically a million dollars as a fee.

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman has read it before and has read it so many times that it is stale. I will take a moment to explain what that is. The Senator from Oklahoma, long before he was a Senator, used to represent the Choctaw Indians, but he represented the Choctaw Indians who had removed to Oklahoma. All of this was before the rolls were closed, and many of them were enrolled, many of them were entitled to enrollment. The Indians whose cause the gentleman from Mississippi is championing now do not live in Oklahoma, and they never have lived there. They do not desire to live there. There is a group of attorneys, with contracts, whose names I could recite, that are trying to enrich their pocketbooks, and the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] sits here and introduces their bills for them.

The files of the Indian Committee show, and the record shows, that one of these attorneys drew the bill that the gentleman introduced, and that statement is in his own testimony.

Mr. HARRISON. The gentleman is mistaken about that.

Mr. FERRIS. No; I am not.

Mr. HARRISON. Oh, yes. The record does not show that.

Mr. FERRIS. Let me ask the gentleman a question then. I will make him my own witness. He is a pretty good witness. Did the gentleman, in answer to a question before the House Subcommittee on Indian Affairs, say that Cantrill and Crews drew the first bill that he introduced?

Mr. HARRISON. I stated that the first real information I had about the facts concerning those claims was when some attorney came to me and showed me a bill and stated the facts to me as he understood them, and I then thoroughly and carefully investigated the matter, came to the conclusion that they had rights and their cause was just, and then redrafted the bill, and introduced that bill which I redrafted, and in that bill I included a provision that no attorney should get over a certain amount, and that the amount of fee an attorney might obtain should be left to the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior. I would not have countenanced a bill unless such a provision relative to attorneys' fees had been included.

Mr. FERRIS. I have examined the bill, and it is the most loosely drawn attorney-fee bill that was ever introduced in this House. Now, let me say, in explanation of the earnest and vehement remarks to which you have listened, that I belong to the delegation of eight members from a new State. Our burdens are many and heavy. We have in our State one-third of all the Indian population in this Republic. It is a heavy draft on our popularity if we have any; it is a heavy draft on our earnestness and our ability, if we have any, to try to defend and keep straight these Indian affairs, and it is too much to sit in idle submission and allow any member of this House, whether it be my beloved friend from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] or anybody else, constantly to try to violate, debase, and destroy treaty relations between the Oklahoma Indians and the Federal Government.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. CARTER. Does the gentleman desire more time?

Mr. FERRIS. No; I think that will be enough.

Mr. CARTER. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. MURRAY].

Mr. MURRAY. Mr. Speaker, with reference to the statement made by the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] about the law, that law provided that no Indian should employ an attorney without having the employment approved by the Secretary of the Interior, but it said nothing about a United States citizen. When a man is not on the rolls he is a United States citizen, and he can employ anybody he pleases, and it is no violation of the law. These applicants can employ all the attorneys they want to. In my district there is a man by the name of R. E. Brines, who was recently appointed by the court to be the guardian of some Indians who were enrolled in the last Congress. We gave those Indians $2,080 as their share in lieu of land. Mr. Brines made a contract with attorneys for 40 per cent, so he wrote me, but he said that prior to that time others had made contracts, and that now there were claims for 125 per cent of their allotments, and that he can not get a dollar, because it is held up. He made contracts for 40 per cent, and yet there is outstanding a total of 125 per cent, or one-fourth more in fees than the Indian gets.

I know one man in my county who ought to be enrolled, and I wrote him that I would be very glad to get him enrolled, but that the outstanding attorneys' fees amounted to so much that he would get nothing, and that under those circumstances I would never favor his getting an allotment, but that whenever he made a reasonable arrangement with these attorneys, so that he would get something out of it, then I would favor his enrollment, but never before.

The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HARRISON] uses the statute limiting the tribe and limiting the Indians, but which does not limit the claimants. You mark what I tell you. If you enroll these Indians under any other condition than a hard and fast limitation, the Indians will not get anything, even if they get on the roll. Besides, this is nothing but a readjudication of a question that has been decided and settled, and there is no more merit in it now than when the House voted against it before.

Mr. CARTER. I ask that the gentleman from Mississippi use the remainder of his time. I will conclude in one more speech.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, there is one peculiar thing about the Oklahoma delegation. If there is one State in this Union that ought to know how attorneys can graft upon the Indians, it is Oklahoma, because the history of that State is black with the way the Indian has been treated. You will remember that it was not long ago that the firm of McMurray, Mansfield & Cornish got $750,000 for representing this Choctaw Tribe—for what? In part for trying to keep from the rolls these unfortunate Choctaws who live in Mississippi. There was a scandal involved in that contract. They were representing the tribe then.

It has not always been dishonorable for Indians living in Oklahoma or elsewhere who thought they had rights to enrollment to employ lawyers. I suspect that gentlemen who now represent some Oklahoma districts in Congress formerly represented as attorneys some claimants for enrollment. Of course, that was when they were engaged in the practice of the law and before they came here. I do know that one man who to-day stands as high in the estimation of the people of Oklahoma as any other man, if not higher—Mr. OWEN, who is now a distinguished Senator from Oklahoma—once represented Choctaw Indian claimants. He filed a suit for his fee. I read from that brief that he himself filed, that he himself wrote, in which he was trying to obtain practically a million-dollar fee for representing these unfortunate Mississippi Choctaws. Was it dishonorable then? Should suspicion be cast upon Senator OWEN because he represented as attorney these people? I say when the time comes when the House of Representatives of the United States of America can not write into a bill provisions that give to a needy and oppressed people some rights, and at the same time limit the amount of attorney fees that can be paid by them, then we have become an incompetent legislative body. The bill that I introduced in behalf of these people was but following the line of procedure that Representatives in Congress from Mississippi have followed heretofore.

Distinguished Senators to-day in the other end of the Capitol have fought time and again in behalf of these Mississippi Choctaws. They have rights; those rights should be protected; and the Otey contract bugaboo will not influence any fair-minded Member of this House. The gentleman from Oklahoma knows that under the present law the Secretary of the Interior will control absolutely the fee question.

I am opposed to sending a bill of this importance to conference with a provision that would, to some extent, at least, help the Mississippi Choctaws and would thereby deprive the Oklahoma Choctaws of some funds, when at least one Member from Oklahoma, and a very influential Member, too, is to be on the conference committee. [Applause.]

Mr. FERRIS. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HARRISON. I yield to the gentleman.

Mr. FERRIS. Was there a single member of the Indian Affairs Committee who voted for that bill?

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Mississippi has expired.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, this matter has been settled by the courts, on one occasion going as high as the Supreme Court of the United States. It was settled by a commission appointed and directed by a specific law to settle. It was afterwards the subject of an agreement with the Choctaws and Chickasaws in Oklahoma and was again settled. It was decided and agreed that no man should be permitted to share in the tribal estate of the Oklahoma Indians unless he established a residence in good faith on the reservation. Let me say that the native Choctaws in Oklahoma who lived there were required to be on the reservation June 28, 1898, or they were eternally and forever barred from any participation in the estate, and some can not participate in it now.

But the Mississippi Choctaws were given, by agreement, until July 1, 1903, five years after the native Choctaws had to settle on the reservation. By a subsequent act they were given until March 4, 1907, to settle on the reservation, and nobody knows it any better than the gentleman from Mississippi. I notice that the gentleman from Mississippi when dealing with facts never states them if it in the least injures his case.

Now, since the decision was made in 1902, since the rolls were opened as of date of March 4, 1902, this matter has been settled three times by the present Congress. It was settled three times last year upon three distinct occasions, two by roll-call votes, and in each instance the proposition of the gentleman from Mississippi was defeated.

Mr. HARRISON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. For a very brief question.

Mr. HARRISON. Did not the Sixty-second Congress on two separate votes in this House adopt my contention?

Mr. CARTER. This House never adopted any contention of the gentleman from Mississippi on the Mississippi Choctaw question, and he knows it, and why he should ask this misleading question I can not imagine.

Mr. HARRISON. The gentleman from Oklahoma is trespassing upon the proprieties of the House. I do not want the gentleman from Oklahoma to say that I have misstated the facts.

Mr. CARTER. If the gentleman will state his question briefly, I will answer.

Mr. HARRISON. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. CARTER. I yield, and do not take all of my time.

Mr. HARRISON. Does not the gentleman know that on a vote whether or not this per capita payment was to be made, in the second session of the Sixty-second Congress and the third session of the Sixty-second Congress, it was knocked out?

Mr. CARTER. I know that on a teller vote without a roll call, and one instance in the Sixty-second Congress, the House did vote to eliminate this payment; that was two years ago.

Mr. FERRIS. That was not a vote to enroll the Mississippi Choctaws.

Mr. HARRISON. I did not state that it was.

Mr. CARTER. It was on a question of delaying these payments. At the last minute the proposition came up, somewhat similar to this, and the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi had it eliminated by a vote of 25 to 15. I say the general proposition has been settled again and again and yet he comes here—although he speaks of the Oklahoma Members using unfair methods—he comes here in the closing hours of a Congress and raises this question, makes a point of no quorum, offers every kind of dilatory tactics, so that nothing will be done with the bill; hoping to defeat the payment of the claims of the Indians and violate the agreement of the Federal Government.

Mr. HARRISON. Mr. Speaker, I move to concur in Senate amendment 120.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi moves to concur in Senate amendment No. 120.

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that amendment 120 may be again reported.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will again report Senate amendment 120.

The Clerk read the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to Senate amendment 120.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. HARRISON) there were—ayes 44, noes 69.

So the motion to concur in Senate amendment 120 was rejected.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I move to agree to the conference asked for by the Senate.

The motion was agreed to.

The SPEAKER appointed as conferees on the part of the House Mr. CARTER, Mr. HAYDEN, and Mr. BURKE of South Dakota.

SURVEY OF NATURAL OYSTER BEDS, STATE OF TEXAS.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I call up concurrent resolution 38, correcting an error in the bill S. 3362.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That the action of the Speaker of the House of Representatives and the Vice President of the United States and President of the Senate in signing enrolled bill S. 3362, authorizing the Secretary of Commerce, through the Coast and Geodetic Survey and Bureau of Fisheries, to make a survey of the natural oyster beds, bars and rocks, and barren bottoms contiguous thereto in the waters along the coast of and within the State of Texas be, and is hereby, rescinded, and that in the reenrollment of the bill the words "and directed," in line 4 of the bill, be stricken out and the words "in his discretion" substituted therefor.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the conference report on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20347) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill H. R. 20347, the Army appropriation bill, and ask unanimous consent that the statement may be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia calls up the conference report on the Army appropriation bill and asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the statement.

The Clerk read the statement of the conferees.

The conference report is as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on amendment numbered 107 of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20347) making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, having met, after full and free conference, have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from amendment numbered 107.

JAMES HAY,
S. H. DENT, JR.,
JULIUS KAHN,
Managers on the part of the House.

GEO. E. CHAMBERLAIN,
DUNCAN U. FLETCHER,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HAY, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

PATENTS TO CERTAIN LANDS IN UTAH.

Mr. JOHNSON of Utah. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 7362) authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to patent certain lands to the State of Utah and to accomplish relinquishment from the State of Utah of certain other lands in lieu thereof, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Interior be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to patent to the State of Utah the following-described lands situated in the State of Utah, to wit:

Provided, That said patent shall not issue until the State of Utah shall have filed an unconditional relinquishment of all the lands covered by Utah segregation list No. 2, as well as a proper release of any interest or claim which the State of Utah may have or assert in or to the lands offered in exchange for those herein proposed to be patented.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded? [After a pause.] No second being demanded the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken, and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the bill (H. R. 21139), similar to the Senate bill, be laid on the table.

The SPEAKER. Without objection it will be so ordered.

There was no objection.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent leave was granted to Mr. SMITH of Maryland to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Mary Mueller (H. R. 17379), second session, Sixty-third Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

Also, the papers in the case of the bill (H. R. 20336) for pension to Mrs. Ida V. Stephens, Sixty-second Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

Also, to Mr. KAHN, to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, papers in the case of Mary A. Brown (H. R. 1261), first session, Sixty-third Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

SHIPMENTS IN INTERSTATE COMMERCE.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill, S. 4522, to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission," approved June 29, 1906, as amended, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That so much of section 7 of an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission," approved June 29, 1906, as reads as follows, to wit:

"That any common carrier, railroad, or transportation company receiving property for transportation from a point in one State to a point in another State shall issue a receipt or a bill of lading therefor, and shall be liable to the lawful holder thereof for any loss, damage, or injury to such property caused by it or by any common carrier, railroad, or transportation company to which such property may be delivered, or over whose line or lines such property may pass, and no contract, receipt, rule, or regulation shall exempt such common carrier, railroad, or transportation company from the liability hereby imposed: Provided, That nothing in this section shall deprive any holder of such receipt or bill of lading of any remedy or right of action which he has under existing law," be, and the same is hereby, amended so as to read as follows, to wit:

"That any common carrier, railroad, or transportation company subject to the provisions of this act, receiving property for transportation from a point in one State or Territory or the District of Columbia to a point in another State, Territory, or District of Columbia, or from any point in the United States to a point in an adjacent foreign country shall issue a receipt or bill of lading therefor, and shall be liable to the lawful holder thereof for any loss, damage, or injury to such property caused by it or by any common carrier, railroad, or transportation company to which such property may be delivered or over whose line or lines such property may pass, within the United States or within an adjacent foreign country when transported on a through bill of lading, and no contract, receipt, rule, regulation, or other limitation of any character whatsoever, shall exempt such common carrier, railroad, or transportation company from the liability hereby imposed; and any such common carrier, railroad, or transportation company so receiving property for transportation from a point in one State, Territory, or the District of Columbia to a point in another State or Territory, or from a point in a State or Territory to a point in the District of Columbia, or from any point in the United States to a point in an adjacent foreign country, or for transportation wholly within a Territory shall be liable to the lawful holder of said receipt or bill of lading or to any party entitled to recover thereon, whether such receipt or bill of lading has been issued or not, for the full actual loss, damage, or injury to any such property caused by it or by any common carrier, railroad, or transportation company to which such property may be delivered or over whose line or lines such property may pass within the United States or within an adjacent foreign country when transported on a through bill of lading, notwithstanding any limitation of liability or limitation of the amount of recovery or representation or agreement as to value in any such receipt or bill of lading, or in any contract, rule, regulation, or in any tariff filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission; and any such limitation, without respect to the manner or form in which it is sought to be made, is hereby declared to be unlawful and void: Provided, however, That if the goods are hidden from view by wrapping, boxing, or other means, and the carrier is not notified as to the character of the goods, the carrier may require the shipper to specifically state in writing the value of the goods, and the carrier shall not be liable beyond the amount so specifically stated, in which case the Interstate Commerce Commission may establish and maintain rates for transportation, dependent upon the value of the property shipped as specifically stated in writing by the shipper. Such rates shall be published as are other rate schedules: Provided further, That nothing in this section shall deprive any holder of such receipt or bill of lading of any remedy or right of action which he has under the existing law: Provided further, That it shall be unlawful for any such common carrier to provide by rule, contract, regulation, or otherwise a shorter period for giving notice of claims than 90 days, and for the filing of claims for a shorter period than four months, and for the institution of suits than two years: Provided, however, That if the loss, damage, or injury complained of was due to delay or damage while being loaded or unloaded, or damaged in transit by carelessness or negligence, then no notice of claim nor filing of claim shall be required as a condition precedent to recovery."

SEC. 2. That this act shall take effect and be in force from 90 days after its passage.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I demand a second.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas is entitled to 20 minutes and the gentleman from Minnesota to 20 minutes.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, in 1906, what is known as the Carmack amendment to the interstate-commerce law was passed. Before that time the liability of common carriers in the different sections of the country was controlled by the laws of the different States. In many, and in most of the States, the carriers by law were held for the full liability of loss, damage,, and injury to property that was committed to their care. After the passage of the Carmack amendment the Supreme Court of the United States held that the Federal Government having entered this field at that time took jurisdiction, and in a case upon this question decided differently from what had ever been decided before, namely, that the railroad companies had the right to limit their liability as common carriers, and the bill of lading that the shipper must now sign has two rates in it. One of them is a very reasonable rate. That is, if the shipper will limit his liability, it is a reasonable rate. Mr. Speaker, especially in the shipment of cattle and all character of live stock, the people of the South, the Southwest, and the West, have been great sufferers on account of this decision of the Supreme Court. It is the purpose of this bill alone to cure that, and to say that hereafter no railroad company shall limit its liability lower than the value of the actual loss in damages to the property than that which can be proved in the courts as the actual value. These amendments that have been offered in connection with the bill are simply to make the bill not apply to transportation. At this time you can take a shipment of cattle in this country and go to the freight agent of the railroad company, and he will offer you two rates. One of them is a reasonable rate, in which the railroad company, we will say, will state a value of $10 per head on a load of cattle, for which they will be responsible if you take a certain rate.

If you want the railroad company to assume full and complete liability, you must pay a much higher rate, something like 10 per cent, which the railroad attorneys themselves, before the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, said was too high. Also that at this time they had a case before the Interstate Commerce Commission to cut down this rate.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Would not the gentleman go a little further and say that the first rate offered is the ordinary rate?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. And approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission?

Mr. RAYBURN. Yes; and if a man takes that rate on a carload of steers worth $75 per head, and they are damaged or injured or lost, he can recover only $10, or whatever is stipulated in his bill of lading.

Great objection is made to this bill by some of my friends, conscientiously, by saying that especially live-stock shipments in this country amount to a very small percentage of the whole amount of shipments in the country.

They claim, further than that, that if this bill is passed it will give us an increase in the freight rates all over the country. This I deny, for I challenge any man in this House to point to a single instance in shipments like this where, since the decision in the Kroninger case in 1913 by the Supreme Court of the United States upholding a bill of lading like this, shippers in this country are getting their freight rates upon live stock one cent cheaper than they did before. The purpose of this bill, Mr. Speaker, is to restore what was almost the uniform decisions of the Supreme Court in an unbroken line of decisions coming down for many years and to make the railroad companies, regardless of any clause they may write in their bills of lading, responsible to the shipper for the full actual damage or loss to property that occurs while in their care.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Will the Speaker notify me at the end of 10 minutes?

Mr. Speaker, I very much dislike to oppose this bill, because not only do I desire to help wherever I can my good friend from Texas who presents it, but I entirely sympathize with the purpose which is desired to be obtained by the bill. But it is because I am firmly convinced that this bill goes far beyond the scope of what is designed to be accomplished, and if enacted will bring many evils unforeseen by the proponents upon the shipping public of this country, that I oppose the measure. If it were confined only to what the gentleman has stated to the House, I think there would be no particular objection to it. The difficulty is that the scope is far beyond that, as I will endeavor to show this House.

First, the House should understand that this controversy is already in proper form before the Interstate Commerce Commission. The proceeding for the reduction of these rates has been filed, and testimony upon it has been taken, while the commission has entire jurisdiction to order what relief is sought or which is necessary in this case. So this bill is now presented after the case has been presented and before the commission has decided it upon its merits. If one did not know there is merit in the contention, this course would ordinarily be a fatal admission of no merit in the demand.

Again, the commission has entire authority also in another proceeding relative to fixing the terms of the form and substance of bills of lading, which would include a very substantial part of this controversy. In this case the commission has entire jurisdiction, the matter is before it, testimony has been taken, but the decision has not been rendered. Again, this same matter can also be covered in two other cases before the commission—in the express cases, where the practices and rates of the express companies are regulated, and in the proceeding concerning released and unreleased rates. All of these cases are now before the commission, and they involve all phases of this controversy, and their determination will settle this matter.

The testimony has been taken, but the final decisions have not been made. So, if the gentleman would have patience, in a few months the matter would be straightened. I have no doubt, to the entire satisfaction of the shipping public, by the commission itself. It has the entire jurisdiction, the entire authority, the matters are pending, and the testimony is taken, but the gentlemen are not content to wait. I submit to this House that it is not good public policy to grant a great commission plenary authority to settle these controversies, and then, while they are in process of litigation, that Congress shall take the matters wholly out of the hands of the commission regardless of consequences.

Mr. Speaker, now let me show what will be accomplished if this bill should pass. I am as positive as one can be that if this bill shall pass by its terms it will automatically increase merchandise and commodity rates in this country by about 10 per cent in 90 days, when this measure, by its terms, shall take effect. And that is the point I want to show to the gentleman from Texas. I hold here the copies of the bills of lading, the official bills of lading, framed and promulgated by the Interstate Commerce Commission, and which are now used by the carriers and the shipping public. These forms are of both the straight bill and the order bill of lading promulgated by the commission.

The condition of the bill of lading prescribed by the commission now in force provides as follows, by the second paragraph of section 3 of both bills. I read the paragraph covering this controversy:

The amount of any loss or damage for which any carrier is liable shall be computed on the basis of the value of the property (being the bona fide invoice price, if any, to the consignee, including the freight charges, if prepaid) at the place and time of shipment under this bill of lading, unless a lower value has been represented in writing by the shipper or has been agreed upon or is determined by the classification or tariffs upon which the rate is based, in any of which events such lower value shall be the maximum amount to govern such computation, whether or not such loss or damage occurs from negligence.

You will note that this paragraph of both bills of lading provides for two different rates, exactly as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. RAYBURN] has stated—one a lower rate on limitation of value given by the shipper at the time of shipment, and the other the higher rate, generally about 10 per cent higher, with no limitation of value. Remember both of these rates are now in force under the various classifications and schedules filed with the commission, as required by law. Both are equally effective and are at the option of the shipper. This bill prohibits and makes illegal the lower rate, thus automatically leaving in effect the higher rate. You must realize that if the lower rate be prohibited, the higher rate is the only one which would remain in force. It matters not that it may be too high, as we all think it is and as the railroads admitted before our committee and the commission. Yet that will make no difference; this bill cuts out the lower rate and thus leaves the higher one the only legal rate in existence all over this country.

Mr. ANTHONY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Let me finish this statement before I yield.

So that I am as positive as can be that where the two rates exist now under the law, and the low rate is prohibited, the higher rate would be automatically made effective. It would increase the merchandise rates in this country 10 per cent right off the bat by the operation of this law. I do not believe this is just, and I know it should not be done. You do not desire it, and yet you will accomplish it by the enactment of this bill.

Mr. NORTON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. If the gentleman will excuse me, I will not yield now. I am trying to cover these points in only a few moments, and so can not yield. There are too many of them to discuss at any length.

Again, a measure of this kind will result in the permanent increase of rates to some extent throughout the United States for very many of these different articles. There are two rates in effect under these bills of lading, the lower rate with limited liability, the higher rate with an unlimited liability. Now, the courts have held and the commission has held that an element in the fixing of a rate is the liability for value that the railroads are obliged to assume.

You prohibit the limited liability and leave only the necessity of unlimited liability; then the railroads would be necessarily compelled to increase their rates somewhat to meet such risk. It may not be much on some things; it may be considerable on others. But this increase, whatever it may be, would be a serious injury to many industries. Testimony was presented to the committee, and it was voluminous, that in many cases the claims for loss and damage run to nearly 5 per cent of the revenues received from this class of traffic. This increase of liability must be paid for whether the shippers want it or not. Most of them have objected to our committee. They prefer the lowest rate and lowest risk.

And now remember that when this increase is made automatically by this law it can only be changed either by the railroads themselves filing an application for the reduction of rates or by the commission itself initiating a proceeding, holding an investigation, taking testimony, and making an order. You know how long that requires. The provisions of law must be complied with to make it legal. It will require months, possibly years, to have a reduction of rates under the usual operation of law if these reductions are contested. You know many, or most of them, will be contested, and that will make interminable delay, as in the proceedings I have already described to you. Now, the railroads practically told the committee that there ought to be a reduction of the higher rates for unlimited liability; that they were anxious to make a reduction of the higher rates; that they would make a reduction of the higher rates just as soon as the commission would make an order prescribing what that reduction and what just and reasonable rates under such conditions ought to be. The commission should have settled the matter before this if the testimony had been complete.

The commission should have granted that relief before this, if the cases had been fully presented. But you realize if you pass this bill, and the commission is obliged to initiate a new proceeding to attempt to reduce these very rates, the reduction will be postponed for months or years instead of a few months as under the proceedings now under way. This bill will mean the loss of time for these various shippers who are anxious to have this matter speedily closed. It is a matter of good legislation that we have given the commission the power to fix these rates, to adjust these complaints, to let them finish the work they have begun, instead of bringing forward an act of Congress and taking the power away from the commission to complete the work we have already ordered it to do.

Now, another fact that is of great importance in this bill. When the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] had charge of the framing of the Mann-Elkins bill and was such an influential factor in the framing of the Hepburn bill, this was the one fact that was made the basis of our railroad legislation, and that is, that the railroads themselves must take the initiative in the making and the fixing of their rates. There was a good reason for it, in that the carriers and their officials had a practical knowledge of conditions, had a motive to upbuild their traffic, could more easily adapt their knowledge to conditions and changes and anticipate the needs and demands of the future. But when a rate was unsatisfactory, the commission itself, either on complaint or on its own initiative, could then by proper proceedings fix what should be a proper rate.

This bill revolutionizes that theory as applied to all traffic based on value. It takes away from the railroads the power to initiate rates fixed on value and leaves this power entirely and solely to the commission. Realize what that means. The commission is overburdened with work now. It easily has many times more work than it ought to do and do well. If you take away from the carriers the power to initiate rates based on value and leave that entirely to the commission, which under the Constitution and under the decisions of the Supreme Court is obliged to take competent testimony for its proceedings, you realize that it means an indefinite delay and constant complications in fixing the rates based on value all over the country. It means a very serious disadvantage to a considerable part of the commerce of the country solely on that account. Delay will only be a part of the difficulty. Lack of adaptation will be fully as injurious.

There is another requirement, that goods to be wrapped and packed must have value declared in advance in writing in order to have a reduction of rates. Just think what that means, that goods wrapped and packed must have their value declared in advance. The shipper knows the value better than the carrier possibly can. This is so as to cattle and merchandise. He seeks a rate based on the value as he states it and pays his rates on that basis. That is just as is admitted in our hearings. The less valuable pays for what it is worth; the more valuable on what the owner declares. You change this rule against the less valuable article.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. RUCKER). The gentleman has used 10 minutes.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Please notify me at the end of three minutes more. The difficulty is not only a question of liability but of actual handling of the traffic. In the city of New York every night the express companies collect more than 60,000 packages of this kind; throughout the country more than 2,000,000,000 in the course of the year. In order to come within this law and to have the low rate the value must be declared in writing in advance. That is a physical impossibility. The collectors are extremely busy, have not the ability nor the opportunity to do the writing and prepare the bills of lading in advance. Most of the package freight that is shipped throughout the country from the jobbing houses or manufacturing establishments, in order to have the low rate must have the value declared in advance. Now, more than 95 per cent of the commerce of this country is carried on the lowest rate, with a limitation of liability. That is what the shippers want—to have the lowest rate, carry their own risk, and take advantage of conditions which will give them the widest market. This bill takes that privilege away from the shippers. It takes away from the shippers the lower rates. Automatically it makes higher rates. It interferes with the normal course of traffic. It will reduce the rating of traffic for the heavy, bulky, and cheaper goods, and so gravely injure many communities and interests in the country. It will completely revolutionize the business of the express companies by compelling this declaration of value in writing in advance, which can not be made. It makes an indefinite delay in the express business and in the merchandise business, and this will work to the serious disadvantage of the shipping public. This bill was not intended to affect or injure the express business, but it does so seriously, because it compels an unlimited liability on all traffic, and so will compel an entire change and increase of express rates. Now, we are all content with a limited liability and low rates. This will prohibit exactly what we do and want.

Again, this prohibition is not merely against the limitation of liability. It is a prohibition against limitation based on value as to baggage, as to carriage of explosives, carriage of valuable documents, jewels, and so forth, and possibly the limitations on conditions of the routing by the carrier for the handling in transit of grain and cotton. It is subject to indefinite litigation. If you gentlemen pass this bill, it may mean litigation for years to determine what it means in the carriage of your cotton and your grain.

One thing more. The provision abolishes notice for loss, damages, and liability, except for theft. That is the open door to rebating. It will be productive of all kinds of fraud and discrimination. The only kind of notice then will be for loss by theft.

This will encourage the unscrupulous among railroads and shippers to rebate. It will encourage the old sort of dishonesty that we sought to wipe out by the Mann-Elkins Act and by the Elkins Act of 1903. Under these circumstances, much as I regret it, I realize that this bill, if passed in its present form, will cause indefinite evils to the shipping interests of this country. We all want the rates for unlimited liability by the carriers to be reduced. They ought to be, and will be. Under these circumstances, where there can be but a short delay before the decision of the commission, where the matter is now properly presented, the shippers better wait until after the decision of the commission. Then, if further legislation be needed, this Congress will be very glad to grant whatever may be needed without working any of the evils which this measure will produce. The committee did not report some amendments referred to in the Senate report restricting recovery to the represented value; but it can not be done now.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. GARRETT of Texas. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. I really have not the time. I have refused these gentlemen, much as I would like to yield. I will yield later if I have the time.

Mr. RAYBURN. I yield to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. TOWNER].

Mr. TOWNER. Mr. Speaker, to listen to the speech of the gentleman who has just left the floor [Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota] one would think that this was an entirely new and revolutionary proposition. As a matter of fact, the conditions that now exist have been in existence only since February, 1913. This bill is intended to restore conditions as they existed prior to that date and not to establish a new status.

Under the common law carriers could not limit their liability for their own negligence by contract. The temptation to do so was so strong, however, that all manner of schemes were devised to evade the rule. To meet these conditions the various States enacted statutes to prevent the practice. These statutes were approved by the Supreme Court.

In 1906 the Carmack amendment to the antitrust law was passed, which provided:

> No contract, receipt, rule, or regulation shall exempt such common carrier, railroad, or transportation company from the liability hereby imposed.

It was supposed that this amendment would prevent limitations of liability on interstate shipments, and it was effective to prevent abuses until February, 1913, when the case of Adams Express Co. against Groninger was decided by the Supreme Court of the United States. This decision held that railroads could limit their liability when a rate was based on a fixed valuation of the property. The effect of this decision is to leave the shippers in a worse situation than ever before. It not only takes from them the supposed protection of the Carmack amendment, but it deprives them of the protection given by the State laws, and even the protection which the shipper had under the common law.

Under the practice at present the railroads have a prepared printed shipping contract which the shipper is requested to sign which provides that in case of total loss of the live stock covered by the contract the railroad company shall be liable only for the actual cash value of the stock, but in no case to exceed $100 for horses, $50 for cattle, $10 for hogs and calves, and $3 for sheep. If he places a higher valuation on his stock, the shipper must pay him from 10 to 25 per cent increase on rates.

The regular rates, in order to obtain which the shipper is forced to accept in case of loss one-half the value of his stock in many instances, were approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which took into consideration as part of the operating expenses of the roads payment in full of all such losses—to compel the shipper to pay 10 to 25 per cent increase in order to secure an undoubted right is a rank injustice.

Mr. GARRETT of Texas. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TOWNER. I am sorry, but I have not time to yield.

The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEVENS] seems to believe that to pass this bill will increase shipping rates for stock 10 per cent. Such a belief is entirely unwarranted. It is based on the idea that because the railroads under existing law can compel a shipper to pay 10 per cent increase above normal and reasonable rates in order to obtain full compensation in case of loss, that to compel the railroads to pay full compensation would "automatically" increase the rates 10 per cent. That such a contention is unjustified a slight consideration of the facts is sufficient to show.

The rates fixed and approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission in Iowa territory in 1910 were based upon full payment of all losses as part of the operating expenses of the roads. The law as then interpreted prohibited contracts limiting liability and compelled full payment in case of damage or loss. There has been no change since in the rates. But since February, 1913, the railroads have been allowed to settle their losses at their own valuation, which lessened to that extent their operating expenses, while they have made no corresponding reduction in their rates.

The idea that a general advance of 10 per cent in rates would follow the restoration of the original status on which the rates were fixed is most absurd. If such an advance could be thus secured, the railroads would all favor the proposition. In the hearings before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce Mr. Thorne, of Iowa, representing the shippers, very clearly showed the fallacy of the 10 per cent automatic advance idea, when the following colloquy occurred:

Mr. THORNE. I do not believe that Mr. Wright seriously considers that there is any intention on the part of the railroads to claim——

Mr. WRIGHT (interposing). I said that it was doubtful whether they might do it; but I think it is true that the commission would straightway readjust the rates. However, I think it would result in slight variations and increases in rates.

Mr. COWAN. If the railroads thought it would result in an advance of rates, do you know why they would not be for the bill——

Mr. WRIGHT (interposing). There would be no permanent advance to that extent at all. Nobody would consider it.

Mr. Wright is the general solicitor of the Chicago & North Western Railway Co., and was there representing the western railway companies. When he says frankly that nobody would consider the 10 per cent automatic advance proposition the suggestion need be regarded as of no more value than a "bogie" to induce acquiescence in present conditions.

Rates are made upon all the conditions that affect the cost of traffic. One of the items of operating expenses of railroads is the amount paid as damages for losses occasioned by their own negligence. Such losses should be fully paid, not partially paid. The shipper is willing to pay a reasonable rate based upon full payment. But he is unwilling to pay a rate based upon full payment when he can receive in case of loss only half value for his shipment.

Some of these limited-liability shipping contracts provide:

And in no event shall the carrier's liability exceed $1,200 upon any carload.

Twenty head or a carload of good fat steers at $150 a head amount to $3,000 a car. If destroyed by the carelessness of the railroad the loss to the shipper would be $3,000 and the railroad would settle such loss under the contract for $1,200. This would not be a large item in the operating expenses of the railroad, but to lose $1,800 on one car of steers might mean the loss of a year's work to a farmer in Iowa.

What is asked by this bill is simply that the railroads shall respond for their own negligence just as others do. It has been many times decided that to permit a common carrier to contract against loss by reason of his own negligence is against public policy. Any plan or scheme by which this is done must be unfair and unjust. The shipper is compelled in most cases to ship his stock over the railroads and is compelled to accept their terms. It is only right that the law should compel the railroads to deal fairly with the people in this as in other regards. It is just as wrong to allow the railroads to escape half their liability as it would be to allow them to escape all of it. Anyone would admit that a shipping contract which provided that if the shipper accepted the rates given the railroad should be absolved of all liability for its own negligence would be wrong. It is just as wrong to allow the railroads to escape half of their liability in the same way.

Carriers are public servants. For the monopoly and the quasi public functions they perform they are under obligations to deal fairly with the people. That is all that is required, and that is all this bill requires. It is not proposed that more than actual values should be paid. It is only proposed that when the railroads by their own negligence destroy property which they are paid for carrying they shall respond in damages for the full value of the property, whatever it may be, just as everybody else is compelled to do. More than that is not asked, and less than that I do not believe anyone is justified in demanding.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ESCH].

Mr. ESCH. Mr. Speaker, although I am in favor of the principle of this bill, I feel that it is inopportune to ask for any decision thereon at this time. In the first place, there are no large interests to be immediately affected if the bill becomes operative. The cattle industry, which was the principal industry that came before the committee asking for legislation, does not cover possibly more than 1 per cent of the interstate shipments, and of that 1 per cent a small fraction would be lost through accident or injury in transit.

With this comparatively small loss, therefore, I think we can well afford to defer consideration and action on this matter until the Interstate Commerce Commission has concluded its hearings and rendered its decision. That commission, as the gentleman from Minnesota has stated, has had hearings extending over a period of months, has had the best traffic talent in the country on the question of a uniform bill of lading and released values of shipments, and these hearings are not yet concluded, but they are to be in the near future, as we are informed. Why can not we afford to wait until these findings are made and these recommendations are offered to the Congress? When they are made we will have the data on which we can act wisely in the matter.

With reference to the proposition of increasing the rates by the passage of this bill, we have warrant in the testimony of Mr. Lincoln, who was for a long time secretary of the Traffic League and at present is connected with a large New York shipping bureau. His testimony before the committee as to the effect of this bill was that it would result in an increase of rates. If that be the effect of it, certainly we ought not to act now, especially when the findings of the Interstate Commerce Commission are soon to be handed down to us. As a part of his testimony, permit me to read:

Mr. LINCOLN. As I have said, over 95 per cent of shippers' transactions are undoubtedly handled under the limited liability provided for in the uniform bill of lading, or, in other words, the business of practically all the shippers of this country, outside of the live-stock interests, is handled that way. They are shipping under conditions contained in the bills of lading and on a basis of rates that does not provide for a limitation of liability as to value, and they are using the "uniform" and "standard" bills of lading. There is a fear on the part of our shipping public that if by Federal statute, as proposed, the carriers are prohibited from establishing rates based upon any limitation of liability or limitation of the amount of recovery the present limited liability rates would become void and carriers would apply the rates now subject to their common-law liability, which would result in a material increase in the transportation charges they are now paying.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Will the gentleman from Texas close in one speech?

Mr. RAYBURN. No; but I will yield three minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. BORLAND].

Mr. BORLAND. Mr. Speaker, this bill is in the interest of a large body of shippers in this country, more particularly the live-stock feeders and live-stock shippers of the West and Southwest. This bill does two things in restoring the old common-law rule that has prevailed before the interstate-commerce law took the jurisdiction away from the State courts in February, 1913. It forbids the railroad companies in the first place from limiting their liability for the loss of merchandise which is equally open to the inspection of the carrier and the shipper. In the second place, it forbids the company to make any unreasonable limitation on the time of filing a claim or bringing suits.

The second of these, the item of filing suits, was part of a bill which I introduced in this House and presented to the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, and is embodied in this bill. It has become customary for the railroads to limit to an unreasonably short time the time for filing a claim, and that resulted in the greatest hardship and frequently inevitable loss to small and inexperienced shippers.

The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. STEVENS] says that to pass this bill and deprive the roads of the right to limit time for filing claims would be to open the doors to fraud and to a secret rebate. I say exactly the contrary, from experience, because the man who is seeking a rebate in collusion with the railroad company will file his notice of claim very promptly, while the man who fails to file it is the little occasional shipper who overlooks the provisions of his bill of lading and does not know that he is caught until he is caught. This bill says 90 days for filing a claim and two years for bringing suit. That is a reasonable time. If the railroad company has given a shipper an illegal rate, it can sue him at any time before the statute of limitations runs for the real rate, but the shipper is shut off, is prevented under the present practice from suing the railroad company by this limitation that they themselves have imposed.

I want to say another thing to the gentleman from Minnesota. He says this law automatically raises the rate 10 per cent on all of the commodities in this country. He knows that 10 per cent difference between an unlimited liability and a limited liability is a gross overestimate of the cost of insuring the freight. If we had to insure the freight under one rate and did not insure it under the other, 10 per cent difference is too high, but I want to call the attention of the gentleman to his own views as expressed before the committee. The low rate supposed to be for the limited liability is in fact the ordinary rate, and was the ordinary rate until the Supreme Court decided that the Carmack amendment permitted these limitations.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Missouri has expired.

Mr. BORLAND. I will ask the gentleman to let me have one more minute.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the gentleman one-half minute.

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman from Minnesota said before the committee:

> The proposition is fundamental, and I think you have struck the keynote. Your people paid a certain rate when the liability was not limited, and they pay the same rate when the liability is limited, and they think the present rate is too high, and I agree with them.

Mr. Speaker, I agreed with the gentleman from Minnesota when he was before the committee.

Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of my time to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois is recognized for four minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, railroad rates are filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission. They are now on file with the Interstate Commerce Commission. If a railroad desires to increase its rates, it must file a new schedule of rates. The Interstate Commerce Commission may suspend that schedule's going into operation until they have had a hearing and made an order upon it. Recently for a long time the eastern roads had pending an application for permission to file schedules increasing their rates 5 per cent. The western roads are now having a hearing before the commission upon that subject. So that at present railroads can not increase their rates unless we do it for them, without the permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission. What are the facts? There are two rates now on file, one for a limited liability and one for an unlimited liability. The unlimited-liability rate averages about 10 per cent more than the limited-liability rate. If we pass this law forbidding the limited-liability rate, we put into execution at once all over the country the unlimited-liability rate, 10 per cent higher than the limited-liability rate. The limited-liability rate to-day covers 90 to 95 per cent of the traffic, and if this bill becomes a law, at once, at the end of 90 days, you can no longer charge the limited-liability rate because this forbids it, and the unlimited-liability rate automatically goes into operation. It does not require the consent of the Interstate Commerce Commission. In order to change the rate ordinarily there would have to be hearings, protracted for years, covering all of these subjects. If Congress has reached that point where it proposes to increase the railroad rates 10 per cent at this time by legislation, then you should vote for this bill. While I think the railroads quite generally are entitled to some increase in their rate, I do not think they ought to have a flat increase of 10 per cent at this time, which is beyond the power of anyone to stop.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. No. I have only four minutes. I think I will contribute more information in this way than I would the other. I do not mean to be discourteous. That is the situation. Of course, I know that a good many of the live-stock people, especially those raising heavy beeves, where the limited liability is less than the value, protest; and yet I hold in my hand a letter from Swift & Co., the largest purchasers of beef in the world, or in the United States, stating that the only effect of this bill, so far as the ordinary shipments of beef are concerned, would be to increase the freight rate 10 per cent. Of course it would be a good thing for the people who raise fancy cattle; but the people who raise fancy cattle, if they desire a limited rate on anything else, are now making a mistake. A man who has a bull or a cow worth fifteen hundred dollars and who ships it on a limited-liability rate and loses it, gets $50 for it, but he can get an unlimited liability by paying 10 per cent more; and in order to take care of a few of those, it is proposed that by this bill we shall raise the rate on all of the other cattle 10 per cent. I have in my hand a letter from the best-posted traffic man on the side of the shippers in the United States, Mr. Barlow, the traffic manager for the Chicago Association of Commerce, who has had more to do in furnishing valuable advice to Congress and its committees on the side of the shipper in regard to railway legislation than any other man in the country, and he says, without question, that the only result of this bill will be to raise by 10 per cent the railroad rates on 95 per cent of the traffic of the country. I have heard a good deal of discussion and criticism here about the recent order of the commission granting an increase of about two and a half per cent to the eastern railroads, but vote for this and you vote an increase of 10 per cent all over the country.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman from Illinois has expired.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, with all deference to the distinguished gentlemen who have opposed this bill, I do not think I need take one minute in which to answer their argument. It has been stated that the result of this bill would be immediately to raise rates 10 per cent. The fact is that all the traffic to which this applies had been carried until the time when the Supreme Court passed on the Carmack amendment under the very same conditions that this bill will bring about, and there was no raise of rates. These rates that have been spoken of here as lower rates have been so termed simply because another rate was mentioned in the bill of lading. It was really the old rate they were allowed to charge, the only rate they could properly charge, the only rate that has ever been sustained and allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The Supreme Court did say they might as a penalty provide in their bills of lading, and in accordance with the contract made thereby, this extra sum; but the lower rate, as it has been called—the real rate, the reasonable and only rate they could charge, the only rate which people had—was the one under which they have operated so long——

Mr. NORTON. This case of Kroninger against Adams Express Co. was handed down on January 16, 1913. There has not been a change in the law since.

Mr. TOWNER. And the rate which was fixed included an allowance, as part of the operating expenses, of payment in full of these damages? In other words, in fixing the rate these expenses were taken into consideration.

Mr. GREEN of Iowa. The gentleman is correct. The rate was based on the assumption that the carriers were liable for full value.

Mr. Speaker, if this bill would produce a 10 per cent increase of rate, the railroads, instead of opposing this bill, would be supporting it. That they have uniformly opposed it is shown by the hearings had by the Senate committee.

Mr. VAUGHAN. Mr. Speaker, for reasons based on sound policy the common law prohibited the common carrier from limiting his liability for negligence long before there were any railroads. Not only the same sound reasons, but the additional reason that the railroads have a monopoly of the carrying business, makes it advisable and proper to prohibit them from limiting their liability as carriers for negligence. If they are left free to do so, they will dictate terms to shippers. The law should and does prescribe the duties and liabilities of those engaged in the public business of carrying freight and passengers for hire. It should and does require them to carry for all alike without discrimination. To permit them by any kind of device to avoid liability for negligence or failure to perform the duties imposed upon them by law is against sound public policy. Having a higher rate than the regular rate, and stipulating in the contract of shipment that the regular rate is charged in lieu of a higher in consideration of the shipper's agreement that the carrier shall not be liable for this, that, and the other, nor above a certain amount, nor in any event unless the claim for damages is presented within a certain time, usually expiring before the shipper is aware that it is in the contract, is nothing but a fraudulent device intended to relieve the carriers from duties and liabilities imposed upon them by law. Texas has a statute prohibiting them from doing so, and declaring void any device by which it is attempted. So have many other States. We are told that if we apply the principle to interstate shipments and pass this law the railroads will raise the rates and charge the higher, which they claim they will charge the shipper, if he will not agree to the limitation of liability, which is never mentioned at time of shipment. Gentlemen are mistaken. The higher rate they claim they will charge the shipper who will not agree to limit liability is a fiction. Nobody ever hears of it except when it is invoked to beat a claim for damages. But we should not at any rate be bluffed out of passing a good law depriving them of one of their devices by means of which they have wronged many a shipper. We should not refuse to pass this law for fear of their threat to raise freight rates.

I introduced a bill on this subject on April 8, 1914, which I ask to put in the RECORD as a part of my remarks:

A bill (H. R. 15465) to prescribe the duties and liabilities of common carriers engaged in interstate commerce, as at common law, and to prohibit such carriers from limiting or restricting their duties and liabilities under the common law.

Be it enacted, etc., That the duties and liabilities of railroads and other common carriers for hire engaged in commerce between any of the States or Territories, or between any of the States and Territories, or in the District of Columbia, or between the District of Columbia and any of the States or Territories and any foreign nation or nations, shall be the same as prescribed by the common law; and the remedies against them shall be the same except where otherwise specially provided by act of Congress.

SEC. 2. That common carriers of goods, wares, and merchandise for hire, engaged in commerce described in the foregoing section, shall not limit or restrict their liability as it exists at common law, by any general or special notice or by inserting exceptions in bill of lading or memorandum given upon the receipt of the goods for transportation, or in any other manner whatever, and no special agreement made in contravention of this act shall be valid.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. One minute and a half.

Mr. RAYBURN. Mr. Speaker, the alarming arguments made here have really been amusing. It would seem that these gentlemen think that this proposition was an innovation, that it was something new under the sun. I want to say to this House that the proposition of the railroads in this country limiting their liability upon shipments in this country is itself a new thing, and it came into effect after the Kroninger case was decided in January, 1913. Up until that time, back for years and years, the Supreme Court of the United States had held to the common law, which was the law in nearly all of the States, and after the passage of the Carmack amendment in 1906, down to 1912, this did not affect the proposition. But when the Supreme Court approved this proposition that the railroad companies were allowed to write a limitation of liability in their bills of lading, then this thing became prevalent over the country. And as to this increase of rates of 10 per cent, I think, Mr. Speaker, that that is the veriest farce of an argument. This has been the law in this country all of these years until 1913. Who has heard of the railroads of the country decreasing their rates since that time? I think that is a sufficient argument, Mr. Speaker, to the proposition that the railroad companies will raise and keep their rates 10 per cent higher than the limited liability rate is to-day.

I believe that this bill speaks honesty, that it speaks and tells the railroad companies what they must do and what they should do. The gentlemen say that only a small percentage of the freight of this country is live stock. I admit that this is true, compared with all the freight that moves, but I say this Congress should say definitely that hereafter no railroad company shall have the right by any clause in a bill of lading to limit its liability below the actual loss or damage to such property while in the care of the railroad company.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. All time has expired, and the question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker announced that in the opinion of the Chair two-thirds had voted in favor thereof.

Mr. LEVY and Mr. STEVENS of Minnesota demanded a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 114, noes 45.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois makes the point of order there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and eighty-one gentlemen are present—not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify the absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 250, nays 66, answered "present" 3, not voting 104, as follows:

ALSTON G. DAYTON.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to present a privileged report (No. 1490) from the Committee on the Judiciary, on House resolution 541. It is the report on the resolution which proposed the impeachment of Judge Dayton.

The SPEAKER. It will be filed and printed.

Mr. WEBB. Mr. Speaker, I ask that the report be read. It is a short one, and I ask that the matter be disposed of at once.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

The Committee on the Judiciary, having under consideration House resolution 541, to authorize the Committee on the Judiciary to inquire into and concerning the official conduct of Alston G. Dayton, United States district judge for the northern district of West Virginia, beg to report to the House of Representatives that a subcommittee of the Committee on the Judiciary, consisting of Representatives MCGILLICUDDY, GARD, and DANFORTH, was appointed to take testimony in investigation of the behavior of Judge Alston G. Dayton, United States district judge for the northern district of West Virginia, and that the subcommittee sat in the cities of Parkersburg and Wheeling, W. Va., and Washington, D. C., and examined numerous witnesses under their oaths touching their knowledge of the alleged misbehavior of the Hon. Alston G. Dayton.

The subcommittee made a report to the Committee on the Judiciary, which report is herewith submitted, setting forth in detail the charges against said judge and the evidence adduced under each charge, and concluding their report that they were impelled to recommend that no further proceedings be had with reference to said House resolution 541.

The Committee on the Judiciary considered the report of said subcommittee and the evidence thereon and came to the conclusion that no further proceedings should be had with reference to said resolution, and the Committee on the Judiciary beg to report the same to the House and recommend that no further proceedings be had with reference to said resolution.

REPORT.

To the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives:

On the 9th day of February, 1915, the House of Representatives passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be directed to inquire and report whether the action of this House is necessary concerning the alleged official misbehavior of Alston G. Dayton, United States district judge for the northern district of West Virginia; whether he, the said Alston G. Dayton, has unlawfully conspired with certain corporations and individuals to bring about the removal from office of the late John J. Jackson, judge of the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of West Virginia; whether he has shown marked favoritism to certain corporations having extensive litigation in his court; whether he has summoned on juries in his court persons connected with certain corporations to which he has shown marked favoritism during his term of office; whether he has abused his power and influence as judge to further the interests of his son, Arthur Dayton; whether he has violated the acts of Congress regulating the selection of jurors; whether he has lent his services as judge to the coal operators of West Virginia by improperly issuing injunctions; whether he has shown hatred and bitterness toward miners on trial in his court; whether he has used his office as judge to discourage and prevent said miners from exercising their lawful right to organize and peaceably assemble under the laws of the United States and the State of West Virginia; whether he has conspired with certain corporations and individuals in the formation of a Carbon Trust, in violation of law; whether he has openly stated that he would not permit the United Mine Workers of America to exist within the jurisdiction of his court; whether he has stated in open court that the United Mine Workers of America are criminal conspirators; and whether he has been guilty of any misbehavior for which he should be impeached.

"And in making this investigation the said committee is hereby authorized to send for persons and papers, administer oaths, take testimony, employ a clerk and stenographer if necessary, and is also authorized to appoint a subcommittee to act for and on behalf of the whole committee whenever and wherever it may be deemed advisable to take testimony for the use of said committee. The said subcommittee while so employed shall have the same powers in respect to obtaining testimony as are herein given to said Committee on the Judiciary, with a sergeant at arms, by himself or deputy, who shall serve the process of said committee or subcommittee, and shall attend the sittings of the same as ordered and directed thereby.

"The Speaker shall have authority to sign and the Clerk to attest subpœnas for any witness or witnesses.

"The expense of such investigation shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House on vouchers approved by the chairman of the Judiciary Committee and approved by the Committee on Accounts and evidenced by the signature of the chairman thereof."

The subcommittee appointed by the Committee on the Judiciary to make investigation of the charges contained in the foregoing resolution heard the testimony of numerous witnesses in Parkersburg and Wheeling, W. Va., and in Washington, D. C., on February 12, 13, 15, 16, 17, 22, 23, 24, and 26, at all of which hearings, except that of February 26 last, the Hon. A. G. Alston, respondent, was present in person and attended by legal counsel; and on February 26 the hearing was had with the consent and approval of said Hon. A. G. Dayton, who was represented at that hearing by legal counsel.

The Hon. A. G. Dayton appeared before the subcommittee and made full and extended statement of and concerning the matters involved in said investigation.

The witnesses and respondent were each and all sworn, their evidence taken by shorthand reporters, the evidence reduced to writing, and is on file with this committee.

The subcommittee submits the following as facts proven by the evidence upon the specifications and matters under investigation:

"I. Whether he, the said Alston G. Dayton, has unlawfully conspired with certain corporations and individuals to bring about the removal from office of the late John J. Jackson, judge of the district court of the United States for the northern district of West Virginia."

A. G. Dayton was nominated district judge of the United States for the northern district of West Virginia on the 6th day of March, 1905. His predecessor in that office was Hon. John J. Jackson, who had occupied that position for more than 40 years.

A. G. Dayton, for 10 years prior to his appointment as judge, was a Representative in Congress from the second district of West Virginia.

Under the direction of the then Attorney General of the United States an investigation was made of the official conduct and private life of Judge Jackson, and A. G. Dayton appeared before a special investigator in the Department of Justice and gave to said investigator the names of certain persons residing in the judicial district of Judge Jackson who might give further information concerning his official conduct and private life. This information given by A. G. Dayton was the first information given to the said special investigator.

Upon at least two and possibly three different occasions A. G. Dayton conferred with the said special investigator regarding this matter.

Judge Dayton now denies recollection of these meetings, except one, which he says occurred at the office of the Department of Justice after his nomination and confirmation, but the positive testimony of the special investigator is that he met with Judge Dayton and talked with him on these matters at least twice while the investigation was in progress.

After the special investigator and a member of the Secret Service had been to Parkersburg, W. Va., Richmond, Va., and Atlantic City, N. J., seeking to learn of the official conduct, and more especially of the private life of Judge Jackson, the latter came to Washington, D. C., and presented his resignation as judge, which resignation was immediately accepted, and within a very few hours A. D. Dayton was nominated to succeed him as such judge.

Within a comparatively short time, at most five months, from the date of his resignation, John J. Jackson was appointed to a position in the legal department of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., at a salary of about $500 per month, the evidence adduced failing to show that he actually rendered service for said railroad company, but, on the contrary, showing that he retained his residence in Parkersburg and went about the Federal court room and building quite as before his resignation.

At the time of Judge Jackson's resignation Judge Dayton said to the special investigator: "The thanks of the people of West Virginia are due you for removing a bad condition."

It is but just to the memory of Judge Jackson to say that the circumstances surrounding his resignation do not make for misconduct in official or private life.

Although we do not find from the evidence that Judge Dayton "conspired with certain corporations and individuals to bring about the removal from office of the late John J. Jackson," etc., we are of opinion that said A. G. Dayton was fully informed of the investigation of the official and private life of Judge Jackson and gave aid and advice to those in charge of said investigation.

"II. Whether he has shown marked favoritism to certain corporations having extensive litigation in his court."

We do not find the evidence adduced to be sufficient to prove that Judge Dayton has shown marked favoritism to certain corporations having extensive business in his court.

"III. Whether he summoned on juries in his court persons connected with certain corporations to which he has shown marked favoritism during his term of office."

While persons connected with railroad and other corporations in his judicial district are shown to have had service as jurors in his court, we do not find from the evidence adduced that any wrong occurred because thereof or that there was any miscarriage of justice because thereof.

"IV. Whether he has abused his power and influence as judge to further the interests of his son, Arthur Dayton."

We find that Arthur S. Dayton, the son of Hon. A. G. Dayton, is a practicing attorney in the court presided over by his father, and that almost immediately upon his admission to the bar he was appointed as local attorney in Barber County, W. Va., for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co., a position held by A. G. Dayton for a number of years, including the years he was a Representative in Congress from that distirct, A. G. Dayton being immediately succeeded in that position by Fred O. Blue, a law partner of A. G. Dayton, and afterwards tax commissioner of West Virginia, and Mr. F. O. Blue in turn being succeeded by Arthur S. Dayton; that he is at present the attorney for said railroad in said county; but we do not think the evidence adduced sufficient to find that Judge Dayton has abused his power and influence as a judge to further the interests of his son, Arthur S. Dayton.

"V. Whether he has violated the acts of Congress regulating the selection of jurors."

There is some evidence tending to show that Judge Dayton gave lists of persons whom he desired to have served as jurors in his court to the marshal of the district, saying that he wished those persons drawn for jurors, and that some of those persons shortly afterwards appeared as jurors and served as such in his court. An explanation is given by Judge Dayton that this list was a list of talesmen who were to be specially summoned as jurors in the absence of a sufficient number of previously summoned jurors to hear then pending causes.

"VI. Whether he has lent his services as judge to the coal operators of West Virginia by improperly issuing injunctions."

We find from the evidence that Judge Dayton issued restraining orders of very drastic scope and comprehension in certain cases brought by coal operators of West Virginia against their operatives and employees, which restraining orders were afterwards by him made injunctions, and for the alleged violation of said injunctions a number of persons were ordered by him punished by fine and imprisonment as for contempt of the order of the court.

In one case—that of The Hitchman Coal Co. v. John Mitchell et al.—he issued a restraining order and made a permanent order of injunction prohibiting the peaceable persuasion of any person to cause or attempt to cause any employee of the Hitchman Coal Co. to join a labor union when the Hitchman Coal Co. had a contract with said employee not to join a labor union.

The evidence shows that this ruling of Judge Dayton affecting the right to cause by peaceable persuasion any such employee to join a labor union was reversed by the United States Court of Appeals, but this case is now before the Supreme Court of the United States for adjudication, and therefore we do not deem it proper to make further report on this matter at this time.

Subsequently Judge Dayton issued another restraining order, without notice to the defendants in the case of The West Virginia Coal Co. v. John P. White et al., which he afterwards made a permanent injunction, and which likewise was most drastic and comprehensive and based upon his former opinion, as expressed by him in the Hitchman Coal Co. case.

The proceedings in this case will be referred to in connection with the next specification.

"VII. Whether he has shown hatred and bitterness toward miners on trial in his court."

The evidence adduced shows that Judge Dayton before he became judge and after that time was associated at least as a holder of stock in certain coal-mining operations in his judicial district of West Virginia, and that during the trial of certain miners and other persons who were members of a labor-union organization his manner and language toward the defendants while upon the bench was that of hatred and bitterness; he at one time during the proceedings saying, by his own admission from the bench, that if he had John P. White, the president of the United Mine Workers of America before him he would send him to jail for a year, the said John P. White not then being in court and not having been served with any process of said court.

It is but fair to say that the cases last referred to were intimately associated with a very serious dispute between the West Virginia Coal Co. and certain of its employees and certain members of the United Mine Workers of America, a condition in which a number of miners were on strike, and the circumstances surrounding these trials referred to were very unusual and probably afforded opportunity for aggravation, but the evidence adduced shows that at times during these trials Judge Dayton was very impatient of hearing what the defendants had to say, his manner was heated and impassioned, he was laboring under much emotional excitement, and his conduct generally that of one who had prejudged the cases before him.

"VIII. Whether he has used his office as judge to discourage and prevent said miners from exercising their lawful right to organize and peaceably assemble under the laws of the United States and the State of West Virginia."

The evidence adduced shows that at the time of the litigation in the case of the West Virginia Coal Co. v. J. P. White et al. an assembly of men in tents near the property of the West Virginia Coal Co. was declared by Judge Dayton to be illegal and in violation of his restraining order theretofore issued, but it is in evidence that with the consent of counsel for the defendants these tents were withdrawn to a place much farther away from the company's property.

There is some question as to the purpose for which these tents were erected and maintained; but among the things enjoined by order of Judge Dayton, some undoubtedly most proper, was the furnishing of aid or assistance by giving food and supplies to those who were on strike at that time, and a punishment as for contempt of those who did so furnish aid and assistance by giving food and supplies.

While Judge Dayton in his opinion written in the Hitchman Coal Co. case has defined his idea of the rights of labor and capital to organize, holding that they mutually have such rights under proper conditions, the conduct and trial of these injunction and contempt cases furnish abundant illustration of the strong personal opinion of Judge Dayton upon the question of labor organization.

"IX. Whether he conspired with certain corporations and individuals in the formation of a carbon trust, in violation of law."

The evidence adduced shows that Judge Dayton was and is the owner and holder of stock in the Acme Carbon Co. in the amount of $10,000, and that the product of the Acme Carbon Co. was marketed by a selling agency known as the Federal Carbon Co., which sold the output of other carbon concerns as well, and there is some evidence to prove that he was consulted with reference to the legality of the contract of the Acme Carbon Co. with the Federal Carbon Co., and that he had written or assisted in writing a letter to the Acme Carbon Co. urging the payment of larger dividends to him upon his stock under the coercion of a possible proceeding for receivership in a Federal court. Judge Dayton denies any knowledge of the contract for marketing the product of the Acme Carbon Co. by the Federal Carbon Co., and has produced a copy of a letter to the former company written by him in which reasons are given why there should be a payment of larger dividends.

Mr. A. T. Sweeney, the secretary of the Acme Carbon Co., testified that to his knowledge Judge Dayton was not concerned in the making of the contract between the Acme Carbon Co. and the Federal Carbon Co., and that the Acme Carbon Co. was a solvent corporation.

"X-XI. Whether he has openly stated that he would not permit the United Mine Workers of America to exist within the jurisdiction of his court; and whether he has stated in open court that the United Mine Workers of America are criminal conspirators."

The evidence adduced shows that Judge Dayton has said that in certain cases, under what he called the old constitution and by-laws of the United Mine Workers of America, the members thereof who held to such belief and gave practice and effect to the constitution and by-laws were criminal conspirators, and, having formed that opinion, which is very positive with him, he has steadfastly maintained it, and it is in evidence that he has said in a certain case that if the evidence disclosed that the defendant was a member of the United Mine Workers of America, he wanted no further evidence to determine guilt and impose punishment as for an alleged contempt of court.

"XII. Whether he has been guilty of any misbehavior for which he should be impeached."

The evidence adduced shows that in 1906, at a time when he was Federal judge of the northern district of West Virginia, at the request of certain political and personal friends and business associates, Judge Dayton gave a letter to them for use in behalf of the sale of either stock of the company or lands controlled by the company of the Meadowvale Coal Co.

The Meadowvale Coal Co. was a corporation organized by these political, personal, and business friends and associates of Judge Dayton to open up a coal-mining operation very near to coal lands in which Judge Dayton had a financial interest, and for the purpose of selling stock the Meadowvale Coal Co. issued a prospectus in which it caused to be printed in a most prominent manner the letter given by Judge Dayton to the promoters of the Meadowvale Coal Co., this letter being written upon the official letterhead of the judge, being addressed "To whom it may concern," and reciting his belief in the integrity of the company and the value of its holdings, concerning which last, as a matter of fact, there was some question.

The evidence adduced also shows that in charges to grand juries Judge Dayton expresses in the most positive and sometimes intemperate language his own personal views on matters which may be presented to the grand jury, and that he discusses in these charges certain questions of political or economic nature which have absolutely nothing to do with the deliberations of the body addressed, giving his personal opinions upon these irrelevant matters.

The evidence also shows a certain violence of language in commenting on verdicts of juries, although it is but fair to say that the seeming inconsistency of at least one of the verdicts so commented on is apparent.

The evidence adduced shows that Judge Dayton has financial interests in a number of enterprises in his judicial district and vicinity, and is borrower and indorser of and for a large amount of money, but the evidence discloses no connection of official misconduct therewith.

Certain instances of alleged political activity on the part of Judge Dayton since he has been upon the Federal bench have been given by witnesses, as well as the fact of his appointing an aged negro as "a personal attendant" for which the Government of the United States paid the sum of $40 per month, the work of this negro being almost altogether to attend to the garden at Judge Dayton's private residence and take care of a cow and the horse of Arthur S. Dayton, and the wife of this negro was the cook for Judge Dayton and his family and received no pay, save that half of the $40 compensation for "a personal attendant" was given to her.

It is a most unpleasant task to be called upon to express judgment of the temperamental efficiency of a judge, since human nature is so variable as to give to each man certain methods and expressions, many of which are often misunderstood, and we realize the necessity for a strong, vigorous, and essentially upright judiciary, and the instances cited of offensive mannerisms, arbitrary actions, and intemperate language on the part of Judge Dayton in his official capacity may be isolated and therefore difficult to properly estimate and adjust with circumstances and conditions, but they are apparently so persistent as to most naturally evoke more than passing comment.

While we realize that many persons in the judicial district of Judge Dayton think conditions there intolerable because of his alleged official misconduct, we realize, too, the necessity of strong particular instances of positive evidence rather than a somewhat general opinion before a charge of impeachment should be referred for trial in the Senate of the United States against a Federal judge, for we do not think that this gravest of procedures against a jurist, one who has taken the oath to administer justice without fear or favor, should be made upon personal opinions or adverse sentiment; and we have, therefore, endeavored to bring to this committee for its action our report of the evidence as it has been given to us.

This evidence shows many matters of individual bad taste on the part of Judge Dayton—some not of that high standard of judicial ethics which should crown the Federal judiciary—but a careful consideration of all the evidence and attendant circumstances convinces us that there is little possibility of maintaining to a conclusion of guilt the charges made, and impels us, therefore, to recommend that there be no further proceedings herein.

WARREN GARD.
HENRY G. DANFORTH.

MARCH 3, 1915.

I concur with my colleagues in the above findings of fact, but I do not concur in the recommendation that no further proceedings be had, as it is my opinion that the evidence taken by the subcommittee and findings of fact, above made, warrant further proceedings looking toward impeachment.

D. J. MCGILLICUDDY.

MARCH 3, 1915.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection, the report will be agreed to.

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carr, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had further insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 19906) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the further conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. BANKHEAD, Mr. SWANSON, and Mr. PENROSE as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

VIOLATION OF NEUTRALITY.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the joint resolution that I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say that this resolution is not printed. It may be of interest to the House, and I shall be glad to have quiet, so that the House may hear it read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House joint resolution 439.

Resolved, etc., That, from and after the passage of this resolution, and during the existence of a war to which the United States is not a party, and in order to prevent the neutrality of the United States from being violated by the use of its territory, its ports, or its territorial waters as the base of operations for the armed forces of a belligerent, contrary to the obligations imposed by the law of nations, the treaties to which the United States is a party, or contrary to the statutes of the United States, the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to direct the collectors of customs under the jurisdiction of the United States to withhold clearance from any vessel of American register, or license, which he has reasonable cause to believe to be about to carry fuel, arms, ammunition, men, or supplies to any warship, or tender, or supply ship of a belligerent nation, or to commit any other similar act in aid of the prosecution of hostilities in violation of the obligations of the United States as a neutral Nation.

That, further, the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to direct the collector to give clearance to any such vessel of American register or license: Provided, That before clearing out the same, the owners or master or other person or persons having charge or command thereof give bond to the United States, with sufficient sureties, in double the amount of the value of the vessel and cargo on board, conditioned that the vessel shall not be employed in the commission of such act or acts; and in case of a breach of the condition thereof the bond shall be forfeited to the United States, and the owner or master or other person or persons having charge or command of any such vessel shall, in addition, be severally liable to a fine of not less than $1,000, nor more than $5,000, or to imprisonment not to exceed one year, or both; and in case any such vessel of American register or license shall depart or attempt to depart from the jurisdiction of the United States without clearance in pursuance of such act or acts above set forth, the owner or master or person or persons having charge or command of such vessel shall severally be liable to a fine of not less than $2,000, nor more than $10,000, or to imprisonment not to exceed two years, or both, and, in addition, such vessel shall be forfeited to the United States.

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to direct the collectors of customs or other appropriate authorities to accord the treatment of a vessel of a belligerent, including internment, to any vessel of foreign register in, or hereafter arriving in, a port of any territorial waters of the United States, when such vessel is acting, or preparing to act, or attempting to act, or intending upon departure from the jurisdiction of the United States to act as a tender to the armed forces of a belligerent, or otherwise to act in aid of the prosecution of hostilities.

That the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to use such part of the land or naval forces of the United States as shall be necessary to carry out the purposes of this resolution.

That the provisions of this resolution shall be deemed to extend to all lands and waters, continental or insular, and to all air spaces that fall within the jurisdiction of the United States.

Mr. MANN. I ask for a second.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks for a second.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama has 20 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois has 20 minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, within the hour I have received from the State Department the resolution that the Clerk has just read. It was prepared by the State Department, and I ask the Clerk to read the letter of Mr. Lansing, the Counselor for the State Department, transmitting the resolution to me.

The Clerk read as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, March 3, 1915.

Hon. OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. UNDERWOOD: The Secretary has had to leave the department this afternoon to attend a meeting of a committee of the Pan American Union, and as he left he requested me to address you on a subject of vital importance to the Government in the present war situation. I refer to the necessity for additional legislation to enable the Government to enforce its neutral duties during the present war. It is known in some quarters that the Government has been hindered by lack of sufficient legislation to prevent vessels from leaving American ports with coal and supplies for warships at sea in contravention of the neutrality of the United States. The United States is bound by treaties in force to prevent the use of its ports as bases of naval operations but there is no legislation by Congress to enable the Government to carry out these obligations.

The Department of Justice, therefore, had drafted a proposed resolution which, in its opinion, will give the President such power as will be necessary to carry out the neutral obligations of the Government in these respects. The Department of State heartily supports the proposed resolution, and I desire to emphasize the great urgency and need of the immediate passage of a resolution in some such form as the one inclosed, in order that, in the present critical situation brought about by the stupendous conflict in Europe, the Government may not be bound internationally and yet have its hands tied so as to be unable to act in the discharge of its international duties.

Very sincerely, yours,

ROBERT LANSING.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, on the 18th day of October, 1907, the Government of the United States entered into a convention with the other great powers of the world, and in that convention the following propositions were agreed to.

Article 5 of the convention provides:

Belligerents are forbidden to use neutral ports and waters as a base of naval operations against their adversaries, and particularly to erect wireless telegraph stations or any apparatus for the purpose of communicating with the belligerent forces on land or sea.

Article 8 of the same convention provides:

A neutral Government is bound to employ all means at its disposal to prevent the fitting out or arming of any vessel within its jurisdiction which it has reason to believe is intended to cruise or engage in hostile operations against a power with which that Government is at peace. It is also bound to display the same vigilance to prevent the departure from its jurisdiction of any vessel intended to cruise or engage in hostile operations which had been adapted entirely or partly within said jurisdiction for use in war.

Article 25 of the same convention provides:

A neutral power is bound to exercise such surveillance as the means at its disposal allow to prevent any violation of the provisions of the above article occurring in its ports, roadsteads, or in its waters.

The purpose of the joint resolution that I send to the Clerk's desk is to enable the President to exercise the power that will enforce the provisions of this convention that was held at The Hague in order to protect our neutrality. I say to the House candidly that I have had no chance to investigate this question, that it has come to me within the last hour, but I feel that there is no greater obligation resting on this Congress as the representatives of the American people than to do all in their power to protect the neutrality of the United States. [Applause.]

The President of the United States must exercise that power. In a condition of that kind there can be but one man and one mind, and it is our duty to sustain him as the Chief Executive of the Nation. He has asked us to confer this power upon him before the Congress adjourns. I believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is our plain duty to pass this resolution immediately.

Mr. HOBSON. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Yes.

Mr. HOBSON. I listened very carefully to the reading of the resolution, but I would be glad for some explanation or assurance from the gentleman to see if I understand it. It seemed clear, from what I heard, that any vessel undertaking to proceed from an American port to carry fuel or supplies to a war vessel, a cruiser of the belligerents, could be thus dealt with. I want to ask the gentleman if he thinks the resolution would clearly reach such a case as this: Would it also reach the case where, to put it into the concrete, great guns, say 15-inch guns, were being shipped by the Bethlehem Iron Works to be used to fit out the ships of war of a belligerent?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to my colleague, as I said to the House a moment ago, that I did not prepare this resolution; that it was prepared by the Department of Justice, and viséed by the Department of State, and has only come to me within the hour. Necessarily I have had no chance to give it very careful study. As the proponent of the resolution not having had a chance to give it that study and deliberation which it deserved, and acting in the last hour and necessarily in haste, I do not think it would be very wise for me to voice my opinion. I mean no discourtesy to the gentleman from Alabama, but I do not think it would be wise for me to give an opinion as to how far-reaching the resolution is.

Mr. HOBSON. Will the gentleman permit me? I do not desire to embarrass him, but this may have a very far-reaching influence on our attitude as a neutral toward the belligerents of Europe, and my interpretation of the resolution in its effect, having heard it read for the first time, is that it would shut off any supplies, fuel, and so forth, that might possibly go from the American ports to the assistance of one or two German cruisers, but that it would have no bearing upon the sending from our ports of guns and other war implements for the fitting out or rearmament of the battleships of the allies; that the effect would be felt on one side only of the belligerents. We are doing our best to be strictly neutral, as I understand it, but nevertheless the effect is to be very serious to one side only in the great war. I would like to be assured on that subject.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to my colleague from Alabama that not having drafted the resolution myself, and not having time to give it the careful study that I would have done if I had drafted it, I do not want to risk a hasty interpretation of the resolution.

Mr. HOBSON. Can the gentleman give some reason for its not being sent here before this hour, and not having been sent earlier to give us some chance to deliberate on it and find out its real effect?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can give no reason why it was not sent at an earlier hour. I have only heard of it within the hour. The resolution clearly is intended to enable the President to protect our obligations under the convention at The Hague and to maintain the neutrality of the United States. Whether it does not go far enough is a question I do not pass upon, but that it is entirely proper, as far as it goes, and is intended to protect our neutrality I have no doubt.

Mr. HOBSON. I will ask the gentleman this question——

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Virginia rise?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I want to interrupt the gentleman to answer a question that the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBSON] asked.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBSON] has no time to yield.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will yield to the gentleman from Virginia; he is the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. HOBSON] asked if this applied to the shipments of big guns from this country to the belligerents.

Mr. HOBSON. Yes.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. It does not. It applies only to the vessels and not to the freight the vessels are carrying. It applies to those vessels that are supplying belligerent vessels, which would use our coasts as a base of supplies. It has no reference to the shipment of arms or munitions of war of any character.

Mr. HOBSON. But suppose——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman not to take up too much of my time.

Mr. HOBSON. There are heavy shipments of big guns going to fit out warships. Those warships may not be hovering near our shores, but they are out on the waters, and very heavy shipments are going on now to fit out those warships, and my question is whether this would apply to them?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I do not know anything about the state of affairs referred to by the gentleman. I do know that this resolution does not give the President the power to put an embargo on the shipment of arms and munitions of war to one or both belligerents, which in itself would be an unneutral act.

Mr. HOBSON. I want to ask the gentleman before he sits down, the chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, whether they would accept an amendment——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Oh, no; I would not.

Mr. HOBSON. That would really in spirit as well as in letter make our country neutral and not a basis of fitting out with guns or other essential features warships of any belligerent.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman from Alabama that this resolution was prepared by the Department of Justice, I have no doubt at the instance of the President of the United States, who must maintain the neutrality of our country, and I would not feel justified in allowing any amendment to the resolution at this time. I reserve the remainder of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman reserves five minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have the resolving clause read again.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman from Alabama to agree to an amendment to insert after the words "United States" the words "of America," which the law requires, though they have not discovered that apparently at the Department of Justice.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman is correct about that. I ask unanimous consent that the words "of America" be added after the words "United States" in the resolving clause of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that the words "of America" be added after the words "United States" in the resolving clause of the resolution.

Is there objection?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, a number of gentlemen have asked that the resolution might be again reported, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be again read by the Clerk.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the resolution.

There was no objection, and the Clerk again reported the joint resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I may be in error, but I think that the effect of the resolution is practically only to give a method of enforcing what is now the law under the statute law and the treaty law of the United States. It is perhaps unfortunate in a way that it comes to the House without any opportunity of having it printed in advance. I suppose probably it has just occurred to the Secretary of State, as he was leaving his office to go to a committee meeting this afternoon, that the passage of this resolution was of vital importance to the Nation, and hence he directed one of the clerks or employees in his office to send a communication to Congress during the last day of its session. And yet I am not disposed to criticise him for that, although, it seems to me, it would have been a little more dignified, if the matter is of vital importance, to have had either the President himself or the Secretary of State send a communication to the Speaker of the House, as is required under the rules of the House. But, after all, we will probably have to forget and forgive a good many things before the European war is over; and when the administration asks of us something which the administration believes will aid it in preserving the neutrality of our country, I am in favor of giving them the legislation without hesitation and without quibble. [Applause.] I hope that during the vacation—that while we are away, and after—the President and his administration will be able, in the troubled waters through which they must pass, to preserve our neutrality and our dignity and our rights; but it will be no easy task, and we ought not to be faultfinding in regard to it, and for one I shall support the resolution. [Applause.]

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Speaker, I will ask the gentleman to yield me some of his time.

Mr. MANN. I think not.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the joint resolution.

The question was taken, and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the joint resolution was passed.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] may have 10 minutes in which to address the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] may have 10 minutes in which to address the House. Is there objection?

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, on what subject?

Mr. MANN. I do not know.

Mr. HOBSON. The gentleman knew on what subject I wanted to speak to the House.

Mr. MANN. Oh, I knew that the gentleman wanted to get us into trouble of some kind. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. FORDNEY] be permitted to address the House for 10 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

BEET AND CANE SUGAR INDUSTRY.

Mr. FORDNEY. Mr. Speaker, two or three days ago the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] made some reference to some remarks which I had made on this floor regarding the beet and cane sugar industry of this country, and he placed in the RECORD some printed matter published by a paper in the State of Colorado. The gentleman from Colorado said that four out of seven beet-sugar factories in his State had closed their doors and were not operating at the present time.

The reason given by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] for the closing of the doors of those four factories was that the machinery was antiquated and not up to date, and therefore those factories were at a disadvantage with other factories in his State with more modern machinery and more favorably located for the production and manufacture of sugar.

Mr. KEATING. Mr. Speaker, will the genleman yield just a moment?

Mr. FORDNEY. Yes, sir.

Mr. KEATING. I am sure the gentleman has no desire to misquote me.

Mr. FORDNEY. Oh, not at all; not under any circumstances.

Mr. KEATING. If the gentleman will refer to my remarks in the RECORD he will find that I said that the real reason those factories were closed was because the companies which controlled them refused to pay the farmers a sufficient price for their beets.

Mr. FORDNEY. No; I beg to differ with the gentleman. That was not your statement. Your statement was that the trust-controlled factories would not pay the farmers a reasonable price for their beets.

Mr. KEATING. Yes; and I reiterate that.

Mr. FORDNEY. Well, then, let me call your attention to the fact, my friend, that you are in error, because the Sugar Trust has no interest in the four factories in question that closed down, and the only factories operating in your State are the ones in which the Sugar Trust holds stock—the Great Western Sugar Co.

Mr. KEATING. Of course, I can not controvert that statement.

Mr. FORDNEY. I will give you the names of the factories that did close down. Here they are: The Lamar, owned by the American Sugar Co.; the Holly, owned by the Holly Sugar Co.; the Monte Vista, owned by the San Luis Valley Beet Sugar Co.; and the Las Animas, leased by the American Beet Sugar Co. All the factories in your State owned by the Great Western Sugar Co., and in which the American Sugar Refining Co., the so-called Sugar Trust, has any stock, sir, are running.

Mr. KEATING. Will the gentleman yield for just a moment?

Mr. FORDNEY. For just a short question.

Mr. KEATING. Does the gentleman contend that those factories, the ones controlled by the Sugar Trust, have dealt more generously with the farmers of Colorado than the others?

UNDER DEMOCRATS INDEPENDENT FACTORIES MUST CLOSE.

Mr. FORDNEY. The others, since 1913, could not deal at all with your farmers, because of your tariff legislation, and have closed their doors. And the only factories dealing with the farmers in your district are the ones in which the Sugar Trust is interested. [Applause.] That is correct, is it not?

Mr. KEATING. No; that is absolutely incorrect. The gentleman is mistaken.

Mr. FORDNEY. Pardon me just a minute.

The gentleman suggests in the article which he prints that last year a certain factory sliced 201,600 tons of beets, out of which was produced 500,000 bags of sugar, of 100 pounds each, or 50,000,000 pounds, and then says that he wants to see the time come, or the condition brought about, when the farmer in his State can receive a fair price for his beets. The gentleman, of course, believes in the Underwood tariff law—free trade on sugar—in order to bring about that condition.

Now, 50,000,000 pounds of sugar from 201,600 tons of sugar beets means 258 pounds of sugar extraction per ton, a reasonable amount of sugar extracted from a ton of beets, that test 16 per cent saccharine matter.

In the State of Michigan, where the average test is about 15 per cent, the factories produce some 240 pounds of sugar per ton of beets, showing a loss of 3 per cent in extraction, which is about correct, and the extraction in your State, sir, is no more. There is no modern machinery to-day with which the manufacturer can extract more than about 240 pounds of sugar from 15 per cent beets. In other words, there will be a loss of 3 per cent in extraction. The article put in the RECORD by the gentleman from Colorado states that the factory owners claim those beets cost them $7.44 a ton delivered at the factory. He states, and his friends who published the article say, that the farmers received only $5.30 a ton for their beets, but he neglects to add that in the State of Colorado most of the beets that are produced are siloed, at a cost of from 50 to 75 cents a ton. And in addition the factory pays the freight on the beets from weigh stations to the factory. They also pay the cost of unloading, they pay the expense of their field men, of overhead charges, interest, taxes, and insurance. All those costs must be added to the price paid to the farmers for beets. And you, my friend, accepting the statement of somebody who does not claim to be a manufacturer of sugar, deny or dispute the statement given out by the owners of the factories, that those beets cost them $7.44 a ton delivered at the factory. If you will divide $7.44 by 258—which you claim was the number of pounds of sugar produced from a ton of beets in Colorado—it will show that it costs the factories 3 cents a pound for the sugar in the beets delivered at the factory.

And, if I have the time, I want to show you statistics furnished by Willett & Gray, sugar statisticians, that the Sugar Trust, in October, 1913, before the Underwood tariff law took effect, and when the domestic sugar was on the market in this country, ran down the differential. What I means by the differential is the difference between the price paid for raw imported sugar and the price of granulated sugar fixed by the trusts, out of which must come the refining cost, which is, in round numbers, 40 cents per 100 pounds.

UNDERWOOD TARIFF HELPED THE TRUST.

Early in the spring of 1914, before the reduction in tariff on sugar provided for in the Underwood law went into effect, and at a time when the domestic beet sugar was on the market, the refiners or so-called Sugar Trust ran down that differential to 44 cents per 100 pounds, which yielded about 4 cents profit on each 100 pounds. A profit of 4 cents per 100 pounds amounts to 14 cents profit on a barrel of sugar of 350 pounds.

And in September last, just before the beet sugar came on the market, and at a time when there was no domestic sugar with which the refiners must compete, the trust rapidly advanced their differential to $1.84 per 100 pounds. Take from that $1.84 the cost of refining—40 cents—and it leaves $1.44 per 100 pounds as the Sugar Trust's profit, or $5.04 profit per barrel of 350 pounds. With that enormous differential of $1.84 the American Sugar Refining Co., producing 45,000 barrels of sugar per day, is able to realize a daily profit amounting to no less than $225,000. On the other hand, when their differential was but 44 cents their profit was only $6,300 a day. That is the difference in the control the Sugar Trust has over sugar prices when there is no domestic sugar on the market and when they have domestic competition. In January and February, 1914, the price paid by the Sugar Trust for Cuban raw sugar f. o. b. New York was $2.01 per hundred pounds, and as above shown the beet-sugar factories in your State last year paid 3 cents per pound for the sugar in the beets delivered at the factories. Now, in view of this fact, how can you consistently say sugar can be produced in Colorado as cheaply as any place in the world?

In January and February, 1914, before the new rate on sugar provided in the Underwood tariff law took effect, the price of raw sugar to the Sugar Trust f. o. b. New York was $2.01 per hundred pounds, and in March and April, 1914, after the tariff reduction, the price was $2.04 per hundred pounds, practically no change at all.

FREE SUGAR HELPS REFINING TRUST.

You say that the high price of sugar exacted from the people of this country in August and September last year was due to the war in Europe. That war rages as fiercely to-day as ever. There is no reason why the price of sugar should be any less to-day than in August and September of last year, except that when our domestic sugar is on the market the Sugar Trust always reduces the price. Every time you vote for a reduction of the duty on raw sugar or for free trade, you cast a vote in favor of the Sugar Trust, and they make the American people pay the penalty by putting up the price. [Applause on the Republican side.] When our domestic sugar comes on the market the price goes down. Our domestic production of sugar in this country amounts to 25 per cent of the total consumption. That domestic sugar is on the market six months in the year. Therefore during that six months our domestic production of sugar furnishes us 50 per cent of our consumption at a lower price, because the Sugar Trust reduces the price of its sugar, and during the remaining six months the sugar refining companies make their profits for the whole year. Every time you vote for a reduction of the duty you vote for a higher price of sugar, but you vote for a lower price for beets to the farmers of this country, as is evidenced by your own statement that last year's price of beets was 50 cents a ton less than the previous year. [Applause on the Republican side.]

In his remarks before this House last Friday the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. KEATING] took it upon himself to assail me for criticizing the policy of the present administration toward the domestic sugar producers.

He embodied in those remarks certain "figures" intended to prove that the domestic sugar manufacturers, who are now at death grips with the seaboard refiners of sugar, were themselves making inordinate profits. No such "figures" as he presented have been heard in Washington since the days of Mulberry Sellers. The gentleman from Colorado resembles "Mulberry" in more ways than one. Both turn to agriculture when they indulge in flights of fancy, and to preserve the parallel both have a fondness for the root crops. Mulberry Sellers reveled in turnips, and maintained that the high cost of living could be solved by eating turnips and drinking water. His successor from Colorado has substituted the sugar beet for the turnip crop, but otherwise appropriates both the logic and phraseology of his famous predecessor, and solemnly informs us that there are "millions in it."

HOW MR. KEATING FIGURES.

By multiplying the total output by the highest market quotation for granulated sugar and then deducting the price that the company paid the farmers for the beets, the gentleman from Colorado has proved entirely to his own satisfaction that the Rocky Ford (Colo.) Co. has made a net profit this year of $1,116,028 on an investment of $1,000,000. The process is very simple and one of its advantages lies in the fact that any net profit desired can be secured when the costs are known by selecting the market price at which the total output is to be sold. It is the favorite plan followed by those about to break into the poultry business. They figure the number of eggs a hen will lay; make a certain allowance for breakage, for the molting period, and for the natural perversity of the hen, and then, after feeling that they have made due allowance for all adverse contingencies, simply multiply the result by a sufficient number of hens to yield the income they started out to secure.

This is the highly intelligent process followed by the gentleman from Colorado, only he has substituted sacks of granulated sugar for eggs. He solemnly informed the House that during the season just closed the factory handled 201,600 tons of beets, at a cost of $1,673,280, from which it secured 500,000 bags of sugar of 100 pounds each.

The farmers figure that the factory received $5.25 per sack for this sugar, a very moderate estimate, as I have shown—because the current price for sugar is from 50 cents to a dollar higher than that figure. Let us accept the farmers' figure, however, or $5.25 per sack, and we find that the sugar company received $2,625,000 for the sugar. It is estimated that it received $164,308 for various by-products, or a total of $2,789,308.

If we deduct from this latter sum the amount paid the farmers for their beets and the total cost to the factory for handling the beets, we find that the company's net profit was $1,116,028.

This is on an investment of about $1,000,000.

This method of calculation is in keeping with the entire process of reasoning that was followed by the Democrats in dealing with the tariff. It would all be very amusing if it had not proven so serious for the business of the country. In the present instance it is all the more inexcusable because the gentleman from Colorado could have learned the facts had he made the slightest effort, and thus avoided the ludicrous spectacle that he made of himself when he submitted those figures.

A few minutes of investigation of the trade reports would have convinced him that neither the Great Western nor any of the other beet-sugar companies have realized anything like the prices which he asserts they secured for their entire output. In fact, the losses they have sustained through not being able to sell at current market prices, because of the fact that they had contracted for their output before the advance, had been notorious in sugar circles since the outbreak of the European war.

As long ago as August 20, 1914, Willett & Gray's Weekly Statistical Trade Journal, page 308, announced:

We are advised that both the American Beet Sugar Co., having factories in California, Colorado, and Nebraska, and the Great Western Sugar Co., of Colorado, have made free contracts for deliveries of their products at the low prices current before August 1, and are disposed to continue sales as rapidly as sugar can be produced in order to relieve any acute situation that may arise. The beet crops east of the Rocky Mountains do not come to market until October.

EUROPEAN WAR DID NOT HELP INDEPENDENTS.

On August 22, the Louisiana Planter, page 126, published a telegram from Mr. Truman G. Palmer, beet-sugar statistician, of this city, giving extracts from reports of a number of beet-sugar factories throughout the West. They show conclusively that the small manufacturers of this country derived no benefit from the colossal sum of which the Sugar Trust, with the connivance of the Democratic administration, mulcted the consumers of this country during the month of August, 1914. Here is the telegram:

WASHINGTON, August 19, 1914.

Except in California, the domestic beet-sugar crop is not ready to harvest, and the following telegrams received by me to-day from seven of the nine California manufacturers of beet sugar show how much warrant there is for the widely published statement that the present high price of sugar is due to a conspiracy among American beet-sugar manufacturers to hold back their 1914 crop:

"Your wire 16th: Have sold 124,000 bags. Have manufactured to date 27,500 bags. All buyers clamoring for deliveries. It will take until October 5 to manufacture and deliver all this sugar at old prices. Have not sold car at higher prices." (Los Alamitos Sugar Co.)

"Have made 6,560 bags of sugar this season, all of which has been shipped as made, and direct to purchasers, on bona fide sales made during June and July." (Santa Ana Cooperative Sugar Co.)

"Large portion of our sales are Missouri River territory. Our total sales several times greater than production to date, and nearly all made prior to advance, account of war." (Holly Sugar Co.)

"We expect to make 1,500,000 bags present campaign, of which we have contracted to sell 1,000,000 bags. Sales of sugar at present date will employ capacity of factories until late December." (American Beet Sugar Co.)

"All sugars manufactured by this company not consumed in California shipped to Missouri River territory, and shipping as rapidly as made. When southern California factories went into market to sell sugar, jobbers refused to buy, stating they had supply on hand and contracted to last October 1—some, January 1. Sold 75 carloads to be shipped on instructions. Have received instructions for 11 cars. Have filled these and shipped 10 cars additional to our brokers at Kansas City, and shipping more daily." (South California Sugar Co.)

"We have sold for August and early September delivery 67,790 bags of 100 pounds each. We have made and delivered on these contracts 21,060 bags, and are shipping as fast as we can possibly make it and holding back nothing. Have not been up to capacity until last Saturday, owing to slow delivery of beets." (Anaheim Sugar Co.)

The average price received by all of these factories for their 1914 sugar, f. o. b. factory, has been 4.04 cents per pound, the highest average price received by any one of the factories being 4.75 cents per pound.

Due to the reduction of the import duty and the low price of sugar before the outbreak of the war in Europe, eight American beet-sugar factories closed down, others reduced their acreage, and the 1914 crop of domestic sugar will be from two and one-half to three million bags less than the 1913 output.

To finance their operations, a large portion of the crop is sold several months in advance of its manufacture, and the extra profits, because of the advance in price, will inure to the dealers and not to the manufacturers.

TRUMAN G. PALMER.

On September 10, Willett & Gray, page 339, announced the following:

The Great Western Sugar Co. is reported to have sold 250,000 bags of its 1914 product at prewar-time prices. The campaign at Grand Junction is expected to start not later than October 1.

ADMINISTRATION DID NOT CURB REFINERS.

The outrageous robbery of the American people last summer by the Sugar Refining Trust, with the connivance of the Democratic administration, occurred during the months of August and September. The wholesale price of fine granulated sugar at the port of New York was jumped by leaps and bounds from 4.16 cents per pound on July 28 until it reached 7.35 on August 18. It continued at inflated prices until October, when the domestic crop began moving and brought relief to the American consumers.

As the extracts I have read conclusively show, none of the independent manufacturers had any stocks on hand in August and September, 1914, when sugar reached the highest point in modern history.

The hypocritical campaign that had been carried on by the refiners while the Underwood bill was under discussion had depressed the price of raw sugar to the lowest point on record. Many producers were compelled to sell at less than the cost of production. Thousands of farmers were ruined and many of the smaller sugar houses were dismantled. Those of the independent operators who survived contracted to sell the first part of this year's output at prices which prevailed prior to the European war in order to secure advances for operating expenses.

The only stocks of sugar held in this country were in the hands of the seaboard refiners. While the tariff bill was before Congress they sold stock at an actual loss, in order to further their deceitful campaign for free sugar. But after their purpose was accomplished they steadily advanced prices to make up their losses, and the consumer, who was deceived for a short period, was compelled to reimburse them as soon as the European war gave them a pretext for raising prices.

This course of the refiners in this matter was made clear in a letter from the Louisiana-Porto Rico headquarters, which was published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD for August 14 last by Senator RANSDELL. It said:

Developments in Europe during the past week have resulted in a sensational advance in both raw and refined sugar. Prices now promise to soar far above the level of 1911, when the shortage of the European beet crop was followed by a world-wide advance in prices.

But the refiners should not be allowed to take advantage of the war in Europe to deceive Congress or the consuming public regarding their course in advancing prices. Their record in this connection should be made plain to the people.

They broke their promise, at the same time issuing misleading statements that the consumers were receiving the full benefit of the 25 per cent cut in the tariff on raw sugar. This was before the slightest cloud had appeared upon the horizon of European politics.

As stated in the cited case of Crystal Dominoes, the refiners began the advance during the week of May 21–28, a full month before the Austrian Archduke Ferdinand was assassinated at Sarajevo, on June 28. All the advances I cited occurred prior to July 16, but Austria did not send her ultimatum to Servia until a week after that date, July 23. Consequently the refiners can not plead the European trouble for breaking their promise.

Should a readjustment of the import duties be deemed necessary by reason of the European war, these facts should be brought to the attention of Congress in considering the sugar schedule.

Not only did the Sugar Refining Trust and its allies fail to live up to its promise to give the consumers the full benefit of the tariff cut on raw sugar, but before the war in Europe afforded them the slightest excuse they were cleaning up millions of dollars at the expense of the domestic producers.

MR. KEATING'S PRICES ARE QUESTIONED.

That same letter, which was subsequently sent to all Members of Congress under Senator RANSDELL'S frank, contained certain statements regarding the price of sugar in Colorado before and after the passage of the Underwood bill which are in direct conflict with the statement made on the floor of this House by the gentleman from Colorado.

In concluding his remarks the gentleman from Colorado said:

During my campaign in Colorado in the fall of 1912 I took occasion to ascertain the retail price of sugar in the various towns I visited. I found that the grocers were selling from 12 to 14 pounds of sugar for $1. After the Underwood bill was enacted those same grocers sold 20, 21, and even 22 pounds of sugar for $1. The consumer of sugar, therefore, received from 6 to 8 pounds more of sugar for his dollar than he had received prior to the change in the tariff.

Inquiry at any grocery in the city of Washington will confirm these figures.

The letter which was published in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD by Senator RANSDELL, from the Louisiana-Porto Rican people, contained excerpts taken from the advertising columns of the daily papers of 36 States, now on file in the Library of Congress.

These advertisements—

It said—

show the retail price of sugar.

This is the fairest way of ascertaining how the consumer has actually fared. The merchants paid for the newspaper space carrying these advertisements. The prices were announced as "bargains," and in many cases sugar was offered at cost in order to stimulate the sale of other goods.

Wherever it has been possible to do so, corresponding prices for a year ago have been given from the papers on file in the Library.

Under the heading of "Colorado," the letter gives the following:

COLORADO.

1914.	1913.
The John Thompson Grocery Co., Denver, 22 pounds fine granulated sugar, $1. (From the Rocky Mountain News, July 12, p. 4, sec. 2.)	The John Thompson Grocery Co., Denver, sugar, 100 pounds, beet, $5.10; sugar, 100 pounds, cane, $5.30. (From the News, July 13, p. 4.)

The sugar schedule of the Underwood bill became operative March 1, 1914, and these figures of the John Thompson Grocery Co. do not bear out the experience of the gentleman from Colorado, who says he now obtains from 20 to 22 pounds of sugar for a dollar, whereas he formerly obtained only 12 to 14 pounds.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that these few extracts I have taken from the patchwork "figures" that were used so recklessly by the gentleman from Colorado warrant the comparison I have drawn between him and Mulberry Sellers.

But whereas Mark Twain's poor old visionary, over whose vagaries two generations of Americans have laughed, was never vicious, his successor from Colorado has seen fit to impugn my motives in the fight I have been making here for the preservation of a great American industry and gratuitiously insinuate that my sympathies are with the Sugar Trust and not with the farmer.

With a blandness which has few parallels, he has also attemped to shift the alliance which the administration has notoriously maintained with the Sugar Refining Trust since it came into power two years ago from the Democrats to the Republicans. There never was a more flagrant wearing of the livery of heaven to serve the devil, and no better proof of this can be had than is furnished by the Democrats themselves. Sugar farmers of Louisiana, who for a quarter of a century have maintained an unbroken fealty to the Democratic Party, are so outraged at the conduct of this administration in betraying them to the Sugar Trust that they overwhelmingly drove it from power last November and sent a protectionist here to represent them. That representative, who has been in Washington for the past week and who is thoroughly familiar with the domestic sugar situation, appears to have read the remarks of the gentleman from Colorado as printed in the RECORD with astonishment. I was surprised and gratified to receive the following letter from him this morning:

WHAT THE LOUISIANA INTERESTS SAY.

UNITED STATES HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,
Washington, D. C., March 1, 1915.

Hon. JOSEPH W. FORDNEY,
Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. FORDNEY: Just as I was about to leave the city I chanced to see the very remarkable address delivered by Mr. KEATING, appearing in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of February 26. I wish to state that the sugar growers of my State resent the insinuation contained in the address of Mr. KEATING that your remarks of a few days ago were in the interest of the Sugar Trust.

Anyone acquainted with the history of sugar legislation knows that the trust has always worked for and favored free sugar, to the end that the sugar producer, both beet and cane, might be put out of business and thus enable the trust to absolutely control and manipulate the sugar market. When the Underwood bill was under consideration the Sugar Trust maintained an active lobby at the Capitol, and it gained a great victory when the Democratic Party was persuaded to violate its platform pledge—not to injure or destroy any legitimate industry—and place sugar upon the free list.

The European war is all that saved the sugar growers in my State, and the fact that we of Louisiana are still in the sugar business is not due to anything the Democratic Party has done for us, but in spite of all that it has done against us.

The attack upon the motive which has governed you in your fight for a duty on sugar is both unjust and unfounded. We of Louisiana fully appreciate the high and disinterested purpose which has prompted you to urge the retention of a duty upon sugar, as we are fully aware that the European war will not last always, and unless there is some favorable legislation looking toward the restoration of a duty the great sugar industry of this country is doomed.

Permit me to thank you for your efforts to save the sugar grower of my State and to assure you that your interest in our welfare is much appreciated.

With assurances of high regard, I am,

Yours, very truly, W. P. MARTIN.

The entire statement of the gentleman from Colorado was a fantastic crazy quilt of inaccuracy and misstatement. To begin with, the closing of four beet-sugar factories in his State last year, which he attributed to the influence and policy of the Sugar Trust, giving the impression that the closed factories were those in which the trust is interested, is misleading, inasmuch as all of the four factories which were closed are independent factories, in which the trust has no interest whatever. The closed factories, as before stated, were as follows:

Lamar, owned by the American Beet Sugar Co.
Holly, owned by the Holly Sugar Co.
Monte Vista, owned by the San Luis Valley Beet Sugar Co.
Las Animas, leased by the American Beet Sugar Co.

All of the nine factories owned by the Great Western Sugar Co., in which the Sugar Trust has a minority interest, were operated.

Mr. KEATING says three factories were closed because they were old and the machinery antiquated. They were erected in the following years, all but Lamar, with entirely new machinery:

Lamar	1905
Las Animas	1907
Monte Vista	1911
Holly	1905

MORE WILD STATEMENTS EXPOSED.

The gentleman from Colorado in the course of his tirade against the domestic sugar industry was interrupted by the gentleman from New York [Mr. TALCOTT], who, seeking certain definite information, asked if the production in 1914 of sugar beets in Colorado was much below that of 1913.

With characteristic inaccuracy and assurance the gentleman from Colorado replied:

No; it was approximately the same. I have not the exact figures at hand.

As a matter of fact, the falling off in the production of sugar beets in his State for the past year, as shown by the preliminary report of the Department of Agriculture, Farmers' Bulletin 641, page 5, was not only greater in tons, but greater in percentage than in any other State but one. The loss to Colorado was put at 288,653 tons, out of a total decrease for the United States of approximately 500,000 tons. The figures given by the Department of Agriculture show that the tonnage for the United States fell off something more than 9 per cent, most of that calamity falling upon his own State, where the crop shortage amounted to practically 15.6 per cent, and yet he flippantly announced when questioned that this heavy loss to one of the great staple crops was only "approximate."

Mr. TALCOTT of New York then asked:

That was so throughout the country also, was it not?

To which the gentleman, with the same bland assurance, replied:

I have not the figures at hand. I do not think the reduction was very great.

If Mr. TALCOTT of New York was seeking information regarding the production of cane sugar in the Southern States as well as beet when he used the term "throughout the country," the reply of the gentleman from Colorado was even more misleading to the second question than to the first. The same official publication from which I have quoted estimated that the tonnage in Louisiana had been reduced from 4,214,000 short tons to 3,600,000 short tons of cane, as a result of the free sugar policy of the gentleman's party, which has well-nigh ruined the principal industry of that State.

If the gentleman's crop estimates are thus unreliable, his quotation of market prices is even worse and more inexcusable, as he had every opportunity to correctly inform himself on this point had he made the slightest effort to do so. With a great flourish he informed the House that he had "studied the sugar question with some care." At the same time he announced:

Granulated sugar is now selling in eastern markets at $5.75 per hundred pounds. It commands $6.25 per hundred pounds in the Denver market, and corresponding prices in other markets of the country. Six dollars per hundred pounds would be a good average price.

PRICES OF SUGAR ON DENVER MARKET.

When the Sugar Trust was exploiting the people of Colorado without interference from the Democratic administration during the months of August and September, sugar was selling on the Denver market at prices ranging from 7.10 to 7.55 cents per pound. When the domestic beet crop came to the relief of the consumers in October the Sugar Trust was compelled to suspend its extortion, and on October 6 Colorado beet was quoted on the Denver market at 6.55, a drop of a full cent per pound from the price asked for granulated cane sugar on September 21, and 80 points below the price of beet on the corresponding date.

The following Denver prices, as taken from Willett & Gray's for the past four months, will suffice to show how accurate and fair the gentleman is when he informs this House that this sugar is selling on the Denver market for 6.25:

Date.		Price of beet sugar.
1914.
Oct. 6	Denver	6.55 differential 50 points.
14	do	6.30 less 2 per cent.
23	do	6.05 less 2 per cent.
24	do	5.85 less 2 per cent.
30	do	5.55 less 2 per cent.
Nov. 4	do	5.35 less 2 per cent.
5	do	5.05 less 2 per cent.
13	do	5.15 less 2 per cent.
23	do	5.25.
30	do	5.35.
Dec. 7	do	5.45.
1915.
Jan. 16	do	5.40 less 2 per cent.
Feb. 1	do	5.40 less 2 per cent.
4	do	5.60 less 2 per cent.
5	do	5.70 less 2 per cent.
6	do	5.85 less 2 per cent.
9	do	6.10 less 2 per cent.

Upon questions of policy men may honestly differ, and upon questions of fact when the evidence is conflicting or not clear the same applies. But there is no occasion for dispute regarding the market quotations of the staple commodities of the United States. They are fixed and certain, and may be known to all men. When the gentleman, therefore, makes the sweeping statement that it is false to deny the consumer "is not benefited from the reduction of the sugar tariff," when that fact is notorious and is susceptible of proof, he is without justification or excuse.

And when he transgresses the pale of controversial discussion and the best traditions of this House to intimate that my sympathies in this matter are covertly with the Sugar Trust rather than the American farmer, I want to brand that statement so that all honorable men will know it. My course in this sugar controversy is fully known to the beet farmers of the West and the cane farmers of the South, and if there was the slightest question regarding it I would unhesitatingly submit to their verdict.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carr, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendment to the bill (H. R. 16136) to authorize exploration for and disposition of coal, phosphate, oil, gas, potassium, or sodium, disagreed to by the House of Representatives, had agreed to the conference asked by the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and had appointed Mr. THOMAS, Mr. PITTMAN, and Mr. SMOOT as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. ASHBROOK, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 16510. An act to provide for recognizing the services of certain officers of the Army, Navy, and Public Health Service for their services in connection with the construction of the Panama Canal, to extend to certain of such officers the thanks of Congress, and for other purposes;

H. R. 21328. An act making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes;

H. R. 20975. An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes;

H. R. 20347. An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916;

H. R. 21201. An act making appropriations for the Diplomatic and Consular Service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916;

H. R. 20643. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and soldiers of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 21089. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 21218. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; and

H. R. 9899. An act to authorize the laying out and opening of a public road on the Winnebago, Omaha, Ponca, and Santee Sioux Indian Reservations in Nebraska and on Indian reservations in Montana.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills and joint resolution of the following titles:

S. 4180. An act to validate title to certain town sites in the State of Montana;

S. 7212. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy and of wars other than the Civil War, and to certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors;

S. 7188. An act to increase the limit of cost of the United States post-office building at Garden City, Kans.;

S. J. Res. 191. Joint resolution to convey appreciation of Congress to their excellencies Señor Domicio da Gama, Señor Rómulo S. Naón, and Señor Eduardo Suárez for their generous and distinguished services as mediators in the controversy between the Government of the United States and the leaders of the warring parties in Mexico;

S. 3362. An act to authorize the Secretary of Commerce, through the Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Bureau of Fisheries, to make a survey of natural oyster beds, bars and rocks, and barren bottoms contiguous thereto, in waters along the coast of and within the State of Texas; and

S. 7362. An act authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Interior to patent certain lands to the State of Utah and to accept relinquishment from the State of Utah of certain other lands in lieu thereof.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. ASHBROOK, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following bills:

H. R. 16642. An act authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to disregard section 33 of the public-buildings act of March 4, 1913, as to site at Vineland, N. J.;

H. R. 15038. An act proposing an amendment to the Federal reserve act relative to acceptances, and for other purposes;

H. R. 1698. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to provide for an enlarged homestead," and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto;

H. R. 4545. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911;

H. J. Res. 366. Joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to use any allotment made under the provisions of an act approved October 2, 1914, entitled "An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and reservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes," for the improvement of East River and Hell Gate, N. Y.;

H. R. 1090. An act for the relief of Alonzo D. Cadwallader;

H. R. 9701. An act for the relief of F. W. Theodore Schroeter;

H. R. 2662. An act for the relief of Andrew J. Lawrence;

H. R. 12229. An act for the relief of William A. Wallace;

H. R. 3430. An act for the relief Lottie Rapp;

H. R. 7205. An act for the relief of H. S. Hathaway;

H. R. 9734. An act for the relief of Victoria Coffman;

H. R. 20894. An act to provide for the appointment of a district judge, district attorney, and marshal for the western district of South Carolina, and for other purposes;

H. R. 12909. An act for the relief of James W. McGreevey;

H. R. 20975. An act making appropriations for the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes;

H. R. 21328. An act making appropriations for the support of the Military Academy for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes;

H. R. 2642. An act authorizing the President to reinstate Joseph Eliot Austin as an ensign in the United States Navy;

H. R. 21121. An act to extend the time for constructing a bridge across the Missouri River near Kansas City, Mo., authorized by an act approved June 17, 1914; and

H. R. 16510. An act to provide for recognizing the services of certain officers of the Army, Navy, and Public Health Service for their services in connection with the construction of the Panama Canal, to extend to certain of such officers the thanks of Congress, and for other purposes.

MAJ. JOHN O. SKINNER, SURGEON, UNITED STATES ARMY, RETIRED.

Mr. CARLIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2789) to award the medal of honor to Maj. John O. Skinner, surgeon, United States Army, retired.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized to award the medal of honor to Maj. John O. Skinner, surgeon, United States Army, retired, for gallantry in action while serving as an acting assistant surgeon, United States Army, in having rescued a wounded soldier who lay under a close and heavy fire during the assault on the Modoc stronghold during the battle of January 17, 1873, in the Lava Beds, Oreg., after two soldiers had unsuccessfully attempted to make the rescue and both had been wounded in doing so.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], the leader of the majority, if he contemplates moving that the House take a recess to permit the Members to go to their hotels for dinner?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It is my desire to take a recess as soon as this bill is disposed of.

Mr. CARLIN. Let us dispose of it quickly, then.

Mr. STAFFORD. I know the gentleman is very anxious to dispose of it quickly, because the report of the Secretary of War is adverse to the granting of this medal of honor to this assistant surgeon.

Mr. HAY. If the gentleman will permit me——

Mr. STAFFORD. I shall be glad to hear the statement of the chairman of the committee that reported the bill.

Mr. HAY. The reason given by the Secretary of War for his adverse report is that under the law these medals of honor can be granted only to commissioned officers or enlisted men. Now, this man was a contract surgeon, and therefore was neither a commissioned officer nor an enlisted man. But the Secretary of War and The Adjutant General of the Army both admit that this is a very meritorious case; and I may say to the gentleman that medals of this character have been awarded to men who were contract surgeons, when they had not performed as gallant service as this man performed, and those awards have been made, not by act of Congress, but by the War Department.

Mr. STAFFORD. I half agree with the statement of the gentleman, but I believe a close reading of the report of the Secretary of War shows that he is opposed to the granting of this medal of honor, because there are hundreds of civilians who are equally entitled to it.

Mr. CARLIN. Has the gentleman made up his mind to object?

Mr. STAFFORD. I was quite impressed with the statement of the chairman of the committee that medals of honor had been awarded to other persons who had not performed as meritorious service as this gentleman.

Mr. HAY. I think this was an unusually gallant act.

Mr. STAFFORD. The Secretary of War, as I was about to state, bases his objection on the fact that to award these medals of honor to civilians promiscuously would lower the purpose and dignity intended to be conferred by the original law, which provided that this medal of honor should be awarded only to those in the military service.

Mr. HAY. But it is within the power of Congress to regulate that; and I will say to the gentleman that while there are very numerous bills pending before the Committee on Military Affairs to confer these congressional medals of honor upon certain civilians this is the only case which appealed to us as strong enough to justify us in reporting the bill, and I do believe you could not find a stronger case than this, where a man under fire went to rescue a wounded soldier and placed himself under fire in order to do so. I hope my friend from Wisconsin will not object.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman thinks that this will not be taken as a precedent and these medals of honor given to civilians who have not performed real gallant service?

Mr. HAY. Oh, no.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the bill? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

By unanimous consent, the following Members were given leave to extend remarks in the RECORD: Mr. SLEMP, Mr. KEATING, Mr. FLOOD of Virginia, Mr. VAUGHAN, Mr. MANN, Mr. MACDONALD, Mr. FORDNEY, Mr. TAVENNER, Mr. FESS, Mr. AUSTIN, Mr. KELLY of Pennsylvania, Mr. HOBSON, and Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado.

RECESS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House take a recess until half past 8 this evening.

Mr. MANN. I would like to ask the gentleman if there is any possibility that the agricultural bill will be back from the Senate at that time.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand that the conferees have agreed, and possibly it may be back at that time.

Mr. MANN. Does the gentleman know whether the Senate has taken a recess?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not know the recess hour of the Senate. However, Mr. Speaker, I will move that the House take a recess until 9 o'clock.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama moves that the House take a recess until 9 o'clock. The Chair will state to the House that the gentleman from South Carolina, Mr. LEVER, chairman of the Agricultural Committee, informs the Chair that the conferees have a general agreement on the agricultural bill.

Mr. MANN. But it has first to be acted upon in the Senate.

Mr. LEVER. The Senate has to act first, and of course it will not be over here before 9 o'clock.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I want the gentleman from Alabama to indulge me for a moment. There are two resolutions pending, which are privileged, which pertain to the business of the War Risk Bureau. In view of the resolution which the gentleman offered a little while ago, it might be a question whether they should be called up now; but this is the last opportunity to call them up, and while I think it would be well to have the information they call for, I do not want to embarrass the State Department. I want to know whether it would embarrass the situation to call them up now.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I can not say, because I am not informed; but I think it would be wiser not to call them up at the present time.

Mr. MOORE. I am inclined to agree with what the gentleman has done, although I think perhaps what has been done was aggravated by those resolutions and by what has been said about the War Risk Bureau. I asked the gentleman from Georgia for information yesterday, and when he was about to answer we were both cut off. If the gentleman from Alabama will yield to the gentleman from Georgia, who is chairman of the committee to which my resolutions were referred, he may say whether the Treasury Department means to give the information voluntarily that has been asked for.

Mr. ADAMSON. In view of the statement of the gentleman from Pennsylvania, that it was not expedient to call up the resolutions now, I do not think that I should answer.

Mr. MOORE. If it embarrasses the administration, I may not ask it.

Mr. ADAMSON. I prefer not to answer.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I hope the gentleman will not press his resolutions at this time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama that the House take a recess until 9 o'clock this evening.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly the House, at 6 o'clock and 12 minutes, stood in recess until 9 o'clock p. m.

EVENING SESSION.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at 9 o'clock p. m.

AMERICAN REGISTRY OF FOREIGN-BUILT SHIPS (H. DOC. NO. 1664).

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to print as a House document a list of foreign-built ships admitted to American registry since December 17, 1852.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri asks unanimous consent to print as a House document a list of foreign-built ships admitted to American registry since 1852. Is there objection?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

GENERAL DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the bill H. R. 21546, the general deficiency appropriation bill, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York presents a conference report on the general deficiency appropriation bill, and asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I will ask the gentleman from New York if there is anything in the conference report that is subject to the point of order?

Mr. FITZGERALD. There is nothing that is subject to the point of order.

Mr. MANN. I do not object.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the statement.

The Clerk read the statement of the conferees.

The conference report is as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1503).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 21546) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year 1915 and for prior years, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 4, 5, 8, 13, 14, 16, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 25, 34, 37, 47, 51, 52, 55, 60, 69, 70, and 77.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 6, 7, 9, 10, 11, 15, 17, 23, 24, 26, 28, 29, 30, 32, 33, 36, 38, 39, 40, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 48, 49, 50, 53, 54, 57, 58, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, and 78, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 12: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 12, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 3 of the matter inserted by said amendment strike out the following: "Interstate Commerce Commission, as well as for"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 27: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 27, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 6 of the matter inserted by said amendment, after the word "purchase," insert the following: ", until the end of the fiscal year 1916,"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 31: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 31, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert: "$25,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 35: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 35, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: Omit the matter inserted by said amendment and on page 27 of the bill, in line 20, strike out "$26,735.36" and insert in lieu thereof "$26,864.72"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 56: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 56, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed in said amendment insert "$2,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 59: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 59, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum named in said amendment insert "$36,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 61: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 61, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$65,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

JOHN J. FITZGERALD,
C. L. BARTLETT,
FREDK. H. GILLETT,
Managers on the part of the House.
N. P. BRYAN,
F. E. WARREN,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. FITZGERALD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT] and myself may have leave to extend our remarks in the RECORD by printing a statement relative to the appropriations made by the Congress at this session.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent that he and the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GILLETT], the ranking Republican member of the Committee on Appropriations, have leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD in the manner indicated. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

CALENDAR FOR UNANIMOUS CONSENT.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the first bill on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent.

ADVISORY COMMITTEE FOR AERONAUTICS.

The first business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was H. J. Res. 413, to authorize the appointment of an advisory committee for aeronautics.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I believe that resolution is included in the naval appropriation bill, which was passed this afternoon. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BUTLER] will know whether the advisory committee provision remained in the conference report?

Mr. BUTLER. It did.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will call the next bill.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BLYTHEVILLE, ARK.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 11291) for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at Blytheville, Ark.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I do not know who is in charge of this bill, but there are a number of these bills on the calendar and I would like to ask somebody a question about them. The department has reported upon all of these bills, each providing for the purchase of a site.

Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, my colleague, Mr. CARAWAY, is unavoidably absent from the Chamber, and I ask unanimous consent that this bill be passed over temporarily.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas [Mr. GOODWIN] asks unanimous consent that the bill be passed over temporarily until his colleague [Mr. CARAWAY] returns. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT ELKINS, W. VA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 20340) to increase the appropriation for a public building at Elkins, W. Va.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. FOSTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the limit of cost heretofore authorized for the erection of a building for the use and accommodation of the post office and other offices of the Government at Elkins, W. Va., be increased from $85,000 to $135,000.

With the following committee amendments:

Line 6, strike out the figures "$85,000" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$95,000."

Line 6, strike out the figures "$135,000" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$145,000."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the bill provided for an increase in the cost of the building from $85,000 to $135,000. The committee has recommended amendments changing the amount to $95,000 and $145,000. It would be the same increase; but the committee amendments are wrong. The original authorization for a site and a building was $95,000, $10,000 for the site and $85,000 for the building. If it is proposed to increase the authorization for the site and the building, that would be from $95,000 to $145,000; but this bill merely provides for an increase in the cost of the building. The original cost of the building was fixed at $85,000, and hence the committee amendments ought to be disagreed to, for fear the bill would not amount to anything.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the committee amendments.

The committee amendments were rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

REORGANIZATION OF RURAL MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House resolution 738, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk proceeded to read the House resolution.

Mr. MANN (interrupting the reading). Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MANN. How does this come before the House?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent for its present consideration.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. THOMAS. Then, Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will not recognize the gentleman for that at the present time. The Clerk will report the next bill on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed without amendment the following resolution:

House concurrent resolution 56.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That there shall be printed as a House document 1,500 copies of the Journal of the Forty-ninth National Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic for the year 1915, not to exceed $1,700 in cost, with illustrations, 1,000 copies of which shall be for the use of the House and 500 for the use of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20415) making appropriations for the Department of Agriculture for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

GRANT OF COAL LANDS TO GRAND JUNCTION, COLO.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill H. R. 1633, a bill granting certain coal lands to the city of Grand Junction, Colo.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. MANN. I object.

HOMESTEAD ENTRIES FOR MINORS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill S. 2419, an act permitting minors of the age of 18 years or over to make homestead entry or other entry of the public lands of the United States.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. MANN. Unanimous consent has not been obtained for its consideration as yet.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MOORE. I object, Mr. Speaker.

REFUND OF MONEY TO MEMBERS.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules, discharge the Committee on Accounts from further consideration of House joint resolution 437, and agree to the same.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi moves to suspend the rules and discharge the Committee on Accounts from further consideration of House joint resolution 437. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 437) authorizing and directing the Sergeant at Arms to refund to Members of the House of Representatives amounts of money deducted from their salaries.

Resolved, etc., That the Speaker be, and he is hereby, directed to certify for payment the respective amounts heretofore deducted from the annual salaries of Members of the House in obedience to House resolution 601, agreed to August 25, 1914. And the Sergeant at Arms is directed to pay said Members the amounts so respectively certified.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MANN. I demand a second, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi asks unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HUMPHREYS] is entitled to 20 minutes and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to 20 minutes.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I do not care to make any remarks. I ask for a vote.

The SPEAKER The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has 20 minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I do not desire to take the time of the House.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the resolution.

The question was taken, and two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended, and the joint resolution was passed.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the next bill on the Unanimous Consent Calendar.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill H. R. 15288, "A bill to provide for a commission to codify and suggest amendments to the general mining laws."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill?

Mr. MOORE. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania objects. The Clerk will call the next bill.

OPENING OF THE DALLES-CELILO CANAL.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was House joint resolution No. 426, providing that the Congress of the United States shall participate in the celebration of the opening of The Dalles-Celilo Canal.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the present consideration of the resolution?

Mr. STAFFORD. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I should like to have the resolution read.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The joint resolution was read, as follows:

Joint resolution (H. J. Res. 426) providing that the Congress of the United States shall participate in the celebration of the opening of The Dalles-Celilo Canal.

Whereas The Dalles-Celilo Canal, on the Columbia River, has been under construction by the General Government for a number of years past and is to be opened for traffic on the 5th day of May, 1915; and

Whereas the opening of said canal will mark the completion of a great governmental work in aid of navigation, directly affecting the industry and commerce of a vast section comprising the territory drained by the Columbia River and its tributaries, which event is to be marked by a celebration participated in by the people of the several States of the Northwest: Therefore be it

Resolved, etc., That the Congress of the United States participate in such celebration and that a committee of 12 of its Members be appointed to attend and represent the Congress of the United States at said celebration, 3 to be appointed by the Vice President on behalf of the Senate and 9 by the Speaker of the House of Representatives on behalf of the House of Representatives.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I notice the report is very illuminating in this case, consisting of two lines. I should like to inquire whether, if the invitation is extended and a committee is appointed, any expense will be occasioned as the result of the visit of the committee?

Mr. SINNOTT. Mr. Speaker, in reply to the question I will say it is not the intention to ask for any appropriation. The expense will be met by the States or by the Members attending. It is likely that the Members living in the States interested will attend the opening of the canal. This canal will open to navigation some 600 miles of the Columbia River. It is about 8 miles long, and on it there has been spent some $5,000,000. Congress will not be asked for any appropriation.

Mr. STAFFORD. I withdraw the objection on the assurance of the gentleman that there will be no obligation on the National Treasury.

The SPEAKER. This resolution is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. SINNOTT. Mr. Speaker, I move that the resolution be considered in the House as in the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. FOSTER. A parliamentary inquiry, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. FOSTER. How is it that this is on the Union Calendar when there is no expense provided for?

The SPEAKER. The Chair does not know.

Mr. MANN. I think I can answer the inquiry of the gentleman, and it is a proper inquiry. This resolution, if passed, would authorize an appropriation, and hence it was placed on the Union Calendar. But the statement is made that no appropriation will be asked for, and if it is not asked for pretty soon, I do not see how it could get through, and I do not see how it could get through if it were asked for.

The SPEAKER. The Chair thinks this is properly on the Union Calendar.

The question is on agreeing to the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

REORGANIZATION OF RURAL MAIL SERVICE.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of House resolution 738.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kentucky asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 738.

Resolved, That we are opposed to any reorganization of the Rural Mail Service by the Post Office Department or otherwise that will render that service less effective or will tend in any way to reduce the number of rural mail routes; and

Resolved further, That we are in favor of improving and extending such service so as to furnish as nearly as possible all the rural population of the United States with adequate Rural Mail Service.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like to inquire of the gentleman from Kentucky the real purpose sought in the resolution which he has submitted?

Mr. THOMAS. As explanatory somewhat of that purpose I ask that the following Washington dispatch, printed on the 12th of February in the Louisville Courier-Journal, be read. This will explain it better than I can.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

Mr. LEWIS of Maryland. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. THOMAS. For what purpose does the gentleman from Maryland rise?

Mr. LEWIS of Maryland. For information. The gentleman from Kentucky has asked unanimous consent for the present consideration of his resolution.

The SPEAKER. And he has secured that.

Mr. THOMAS. You are 20 minutes behind. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

RURAL DELIVERY SYSTEM TO BE REORGANIZED—AMENDMENTS TO POSTAL LAWS ARE ANNOUNCED—MANY KENTUCKY ROUTES TO BE DISCONTINUED—REGULATIONS NOW IN FORCE.

WASHINGTON, February 12, 1915.

A sweeping reorganization of the Rural Delivery Service throughout the United States for purposes of economy will be completed within the next six months in accordance with amendments to the existing postal laws and regulations issued to-day by Postmaster General Burleson. The effect of the new regulations will be the discontinuance of many routes in sparsely settled communities in Kentucky and elsewhere; the reduction in frequency of service of many routes, and the rearrangement of routes where duplication may exist.

Data upon which changes in existing routes are to be based will be secured by postmasters. During one month of each quarter every piece of mail carried by rural carriers shall be counted and weighed, and an accurate account shall be made of the number of patrons served. Routes on which the quantity of mail collected and delivered has averaged for six consecutive months less than 756 pieces per month per mile are to be discontinued unless they can be rearranged so as to come under the new rules.

This regulation of all the new rules will make the greatest changes in Kentucky, for there are many routes serving sparsely-settled communities which can not show this many pieces of mail. Routes which have service not more frequent than three times a week will have the greatest difficulty in getting daily service. The requirement for increase of thrice-weekly service is that 150 pieces of mail per mile per month shall be delivered to families numbering four to the mile. The biggest stumblingblock to the establishment of new routes is the rule that patrons living within a mile of a post office, star route, or rural-delivery route shall not be counted as prospective patrons of a proposed new route. This carries with it the inference that persons living within a mile of a post office need no better service. If farther than a mile from a post office they are expected to get their mail from a box on a rural-delivery route within a mile of their homes.

The regulations are in effect now, but their full force will not be felt under six months.

Mr. THOMAS. Answering the question of the gentleman from Minnesota, I will state that the object of this resolution is to put this House on record as being opposed to any reorganization of the Rural Mail Service that will render it less effective than it is at the present time. [Applause.] The dispatch read by the Clerk appeared in the Louisville Courier-Journal upon the 12th day of February, and was sent to the Courier-Journal by its correspondent from this place, Mr. Krock, who is in every way reliable.

When this dispatch was published I immediately began to receive letters of protest from all over my district. Now, if the service is reorganized as that dispatch says the department proposes to organize it, there must be a delivery of 750 pieces of mail along every mile of each route every month. People in the country do not get that much mail. There are but few people in the most densely populated communities who receive that much mail. Along the triweekly mail routes there must be 156 pieces delivered along every mile where there are four families, and country people do not receive that much mail. The effect of that order as recited in the Courier-Journal, if carried out, would be practically to wipe out the Rural Mail Service in many parts of the country.

Now, bearing upon this question, I will read to you an editorial from the Mayfield (Ky.) Daily Messenger of February 22 last. This proposed or some other order has been carried into effect in that county with disastrous results to the rural service.

IS THERE NO REMEDY?

We have hardly said enough about the radical changes in the rural-mail routes in this county.

There are at least 3,000 homes in this county, whose inmates are indignant at what has recently been done in disarranging all of the rural-mail routes in Graves County.

These routes were so well arranged when they were first established that the people were well pleased and everything was running smooth and satisfactory to both the carriers and the people until the inspector, or whoever recommended the new order of things, got the department to comply with his recommendations.

Besides, the postmaster and the carriers here kept pleading with the fiscal court until good roads were made on all the routes, and about the time the roads were put in good condition and before anyone had a chance to enter a protest with the department or our Senator or our Congressman the change was made and the mail of thousands of our people had to be put on new routes, and hundreds were left off of any route. Is there no remedy for this outrage? Can not our Senator and Congressman have power and influence with the Postmaster General to have him rescind these orders? To our mind it is only a Republican trick to weaken the party at the election in Kentucky this year, as well as in the presidential election next year.

[Laughter.]

If the Democrats at Washington can not stop this abuse of power to the detriment of the Democratic Party and the people out in the country, they should call in their inspectors and let the routes remain as they were. There was no demand or necessity for these changes and the entire system in all the county is in worse condition than ever, and no money is saved to the Post Office Department.

As I said, the object of this resolution is simply to put this House upon record against any reorganization of the Rural Mail Service that will render it less effective than it is at the present time. It should be extended and improved, because about all the direct benefit received from the Government by the country people, who are the real bulwark and fortification of this Nation [applause], and the corner stone upon which is builded our national prosperity, is the rural mail and a few garden seeds, and they are not furnished one-half enough seeds, so far as that is concerned.

I have said about all I wish to say upon this subject, and I ask that this resolution be passed without a dissenting vote. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

ADDITIONAL LAND DISTRICT, IMPERIAL COUNTY, CAL.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 17388) creating an additional land district in the State of California, embracing lands contained in the county of Imperial, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects. The Clerk will report the next bill.

Mr. KETTNER. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. KETTNER. To move to suspend the rules.

The SPEAKER. Not now.

PIKE NATIONAL FOREST.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 18747) to reserve certain lands, and to incorporate the same and make them part of the Pike National Forest.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. This bill is on the Union Calendar.

Mr. KEATING. I ask unanimous consent that it be considered in the House as in Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to consider it in the House as in Committee of the Whole. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The bill was read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That all lands in the State of Colorado hereinafter described, to wit:

In township 4 south, range 72 west, sixth principal meridian: Section 6, section 7, section 19, section 30;

In township 4 south, range 73 west, sixth principal meridian: Section 1, section 2, south half section 3, section 7, section 8, section 9, section 10, section 11, section 12, section 13, section 14, section 15, section 16, section 17, section 18, section 19, section 20, section 21, section 22, section 23, section 24, section 28, section 29, north half and southwest quarter section 32, north half section 33;

In township 4 south, range 74 west, sixth principal meridian: East half section 24, east half section 25; total, 18,489.39 acres, more or less, be, and the same are hereby, reserved, subject to all prior valid adverse rights, and made a part of and included in the Pike National Forest.

With the following committee amendments:

Page 1, lines 6 and 7, strike out the words "section nineteen, section thirty."

Page 2, line 4, before the first word "section" insert the following: "the northwest quarter of the northeast quarter, west half of the northwest quarter, and west half of the southwest quarter of."

Page 2, lines 11 and 12, strike out the words "eighteen thousand four hundred and eighty-nine and thirty-nine" and insert in lieu thereof the words "sixteen thousand nine hundred and thirty-eight and forty-nine."

The amendments were agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was accordingly read the third time and passed.

On motion of Mr. KEATING, a motion to reconsider the last vote was laid on the table.

PUBLIC BUILDING AT BLYTHEVILLE, ARK.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill which was temporarily laid aside a while ago.

The Clerk read the title of the bill (H. R. 11291) for the purchase of a site and the erection of a public building at Blytheville, Ark.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, there are a number of these bills on the calendar, recently reported from the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, each providing for the purchase of a site for a Federal building. The Treasury Department have reported on these bills substantially as they do upon this bill. I read from the report:

In this connection you are advised that the Office of the Supervising Architect will be engaged upon the preparation of plans for buildings already authorized until about January 1, 1920. The public-buildings act approved March 4, 1913, authorized the acquisition of 132 sites without authorizing buildings to be constructed upon them. The same act passed over a number of sites previously authorized, so that at present there exist authorizations for about 150 sites for which no buildings have been authorized. Should buildings be authorized on these sites shortly before the commencement of the year 1920, they would occupy the attention of the Office of the Supervising Architect until about January 1, 1922.

That is, the sites that are already purchased would occupy the attention of the Office of the Supervising Architect until about January 1, 1922.

Those are buildings on sites already authorized.

In view of all the conditions stated above, the department is unable to report favorably upon the authorization for any new buildings on sites previously authorized until the present volume of public-building construction has been sensibly reduced, and is unable to recommend that any new sites be authorized, either with or without buildings, until after buildings have been authorized upon the sites already provided for.

I want to know if the gentlemen who had these bills reported as a consolation prize seriously intend to ask the Government now, in the present state of the Treasury, to appropriate the money for the purchase of new sites upon which buildings can not be commenced until after seven years from now?

Mr. CARAWAY. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. I am asking the gentleman the question.

Mr. CARAWAY. I shall be glad to answer it. The town of Blytheville, where this site is to be purchased, 12 years ago had possibly 150 people, without a railroad. To-day it has four railroads, it has 7,000 people, and certainly the price at which the site can be procured now will be very much less than it will be in a short time in the future. The sites that are available are rapidly being built upon, and necessarily will be much more valuable in a few years hence than now. I think it is a genuine economy.

Mr. MANN. I understand the gentleman's position is that because building sites are now comparatively cheap at Blytheville the Government should go into the speculative business and buy one on the assumption that it will be worth a great deal more seven years from now than the present cost plus interest. If that is the case, and the gentleman can make me believe it, I would like to buy some myself.

Mr. CARAWAY. I shall not attempt to convince the gentleman that he ought to make an investment there, but if he will accept my statement, and I live near the town and have known it ever since it had one store, that property I could have bought myself less than 10 years ago for $100, I can not buy to-day for $10,000.

Mr. MANN. That often happens, and probably is the case. I remember that my father bought some property near Chicago in 1871. In 1874 he gave it to me and I have paid taxes on it ever since and it is not worth half as much to-day as when he gave it to me, and it was not worth half as much when he gave it to me as when he bought it. [Laughter.]

Mr. CARAWAY. The gentleman's father used poor judgment, and I am not responsible for his father's mistakes.

Mr. MANN. And Chicago is growing a great deal faster than Blytheville.

Mr. CARAWAY. I hope the gentleman will not object.

Mr. MANN. I will be frank with the gentleman. Once in awhile we give a consolation prize to some gentleman who has served in the House and is going out, but the gentleman from Arkansas is coming back, fortunately for us, and we are all glad. We will welcome him in the next House, and perhaps he can get the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to put it in the next bill. The gentleman ought to be satisfied in getting a report which commits the committee. [Laughter.]

Mr. GORDON. That is a consolation prize.

Mr. CARAWAY. Somehow or other I do not feel as grateful to the gentleman as perhaps I ought to.

Mr. MANN. I object.

The next business on the Unanimous Consent Calendar was the bill (H. R. 18310) to acquire a site for a public building at Hartford, Conn.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I reserve the right to object.

Mr. LONERGAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask that this bill be passed without prejudice.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Connecticut asks that the bill be passed without prejudice. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ADDITIONAL JUDGE IN THE DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 19423) to create an additional judge in the district of New Jersey.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. CULLOP. I object.

COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE INDIAN AFFAIRS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was House joint resolution 427, providing for the continuance of the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, the purport of this resolution is contained in the Indian appropriation bill, now in conference, as one of the Senate amendments. I do not question but that it will be incorporated in that bill, and therefore I object.

ELECTRIC-LIGHT SUPPLY IN TERRITORY OF HAWAII.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 5851) to authorize and provide for the manufacture, maintenance, distribution, and supply of electric light and power within the Lihue district and the Koloa district, county of Kauai, Territory of Hawaii.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FOSTER. I object.

FINAL PROOF UNDER DESERT-LAND LAWS.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 19097) granting a further extension of time to entrymen in which to make final proof under the desert-land laws.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I understand this has been taken care of in the general deficiency appropriation bill.

Mr. LIEB. Mr. Speaker, I object.

FISH-CULTURAL STATIONS ON COLUMBIA RIVER.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 4854) to authorize the establishment of fish-cultural stations on the Columbia River or its tributaries in the State of Oregon or Washington, or both.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. BRYAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will not recognize the gentleman at this time for that purpose.

CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (S. 5042) legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill——

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. I would like to ask that this bill be passed over without prejudice, because of the absence of my colleague, Mr. LENROOT, who is in a conference committee.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I have seen the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] and have conferred with him, and I have the amendment that he desires to put on the bill in his own handwriting.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, is this a request for unanimous consent?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. COOPER. I demand the regular order.

Mr. RAKER. Will not the gentleman kindly reserve his objection for a moment?

Mr. MOORE. I prefer not to at this time.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania objects.

AGRICULTURAL APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. LEVER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the conference report on the bill H. R. 20415, the Agricultural appropriation bill, and ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina calls up a conference report on the Agricultural appropriation bill and asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to reserve all points of order against the statement.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none, and the Clerk will read the statement of the conferees.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I object. I call for the reading of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman's objection is too late.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I rose——

The SPEAKER. That is true; but the gentleman did not make that objection while he was on his feet, and the Chair put the question fairly and has already ordered the Clerk to read the statement. The Clerk will proceed.

The Clerk read the statement of the conferees.

The conference report and statement are as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1504).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. Amendment No. 79: Strikes out the words "now available or." The House recedes.

Amendment No. 80: Inserts the word "field" before the word "work" to define the work in which these vehicles may be used. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 81: Adds the words "outside of the District of Columbia." The House recedes.

Amendment No. 82: Adds the words "outside the District of Columbia." The House agrees, with an amendment which will allow the continued use of motor trucks in the District of Columbia.

Amendments Nos. 83 and 84: These amendments have to do with the appropriation for the eradication of the foot-and-mouth disease. Amendment 83 strikes out the language used in the House bill. The House recedes. Amendment 84 carries the sum of $2,500,000, the sum carried in the House bill, for the eradication of the foot-and-mouth disease. The House agrees with an amendment slightly changing the language and providing for the payment of not more than one-half of the expenses incurred by the owners of cattle exhibited at the National Dairy Show in Chicago in October, 1914, on account of the fact that their cattle were quarantined by order of the Federal Government.

Amendment No. 85: This amendment makes available for further use the unexpended balance remaining to the credit of the appropriation authorized in the appropriation act for 1914 for the expenses of the Rural Credit Commission; and it further provides that this balance shall be paid out on the audit and order of the chairman of the commission. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 86: This amendment carries an appropriation of $200 to purchase certain lands in Oklahoma from the Indians for a dry-farming or subhumid station. The House recedes.

Amendment No. 87: This amendment carries an appropriation of $500,000 for constructing lakes and reservoirs on the plains between the ninety-eighth meridian and the foothills of the Rocky Mountains. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 88: This amendment carries an appropriation of $25,000 for the demonstration of the practical farm uses of denatured alcohol. The Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 89: The Senate amendment No. 89 provides for the creation of a bureau of farm credits in the Treasury Department and describes in detail the operations of said proposed bureau. Before the present bill was sent to conference the House adopted an amendment to the Senate amendment No. 89 in the nature of a substitute to said amendment. The Senate then disagreed to the House amendment and the whole matter went to conference. In the conference the Senate receded from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate and agreed with an amendment which inserted, in lieu of the House amendment, certain language providing for the establishment of a rural-credits committee, whose duty it shall be to report a bill on rural credits by January 1, 1916.

Amendment No. 90: This amendment represents a corrected total.

A. F. LEVER,
GORDON LEE,
G. N. HAUGEN,
Managers on the part of the House.

Mr. LEVER. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. LEVER. Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the conference report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not have to do that.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Texas rise?

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I had reserved all points of order against the report.

The SPEAKER. Has the gentleman any point of order to make?

Mr. HENRY. I have.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will proceed to make it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that it is too late to make any point of order. The statement of the conferees has been read.

Mr. HENRY. But I reserved all points of order on the report.

Mr. FITZGERALD. When?

Mr. HENRY. Before the Clerk read it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas undertook to make the point of order against the reading of the statement.

Mr. HENRY. I think the notes of the reporter will show that I reserved all points of order against the report.

Mr. MANN. I think nobody will question the gentleman's statement of what his intention was.

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman has any point of order to make, he will please make it.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the conferees exceeded their authority in presenting this proposition for a joint committee, superseding that which was agreed to by the House and sent back by the Senate; and that they have inserted entirely new matter, new legislation that is not germane. The Senate added an amendment to the agricultural bill creating a rural credits bureau, and in great detail provided for its operation. That amendment came over to the House, and the House sent the agricultural appropriation bill to the Committee on Agriculture. The Committee on Agriculture reported a substitute for the McCumber amendment, which I will call it for convenience, Senate amendment numbered 89, and then the House amended the substitute reported by the Committee on Agriculture and substituted for it another amendment, known as the Bulkley bill, a substitute of 55 pages and 32 sections, establishing a rural credit system and setting out with great detail the plan for this system. The conference committee has brushed aside this rural credit system as set up in the Senate amendment and as set out in its substitute, and has brought in an entirely new matter, providing for a joint committee. The conferees have not proposed any legislation at all in respect to matters of legislation that were pending in controversy between the two Houses.

I wish to read here the report:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House to the amendment of the Senate No. 89, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed, insert:

That there is constituted a joint committee of the Senate and House of Representatives, to consist of the chairman of the Senate Committee on Agriculture and Forestry, the chairman of the House Committee on Agriculture, and the chairman of the Committees on Banking and Currency of the two Houses, and two other members of each of said committees, to be designated by the chairmen of the respective committees; and it shall be the duty of said joint committee to prepare, after such investigation as may be deemed necessary, a report to the Congress on or before January 1, 1916, a bill or bills providing for the establishment of a system of rural credits adapted to American needs and conditions. The sum of $10,000 is hereby appropriated, the same to be immediately available, out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to defray all necessary expenses of said joint committee, the payment of said expenses to be made upon vouchers approved by the chairman of said joint committee, who shall be selected by the committee.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is a proposition in which no legislation is contained, superseding the amendments of the Senate and the House, and entirely foreign to any differences that existed between the two bodies, undertaking to settle in that way this important question that is now pending.

Now, permit me to read from Jefferson's Manual, which has often been quoted here and which lays down well-established rules which have never been departed from:

The managers of a conference must confine themselves to the differences committed to them, and may not include subjects not within the disagreements, even though germane to a question in issue. But they may perfect amendments committed to them if they do not in so doing go beyond the differences. Thus, where an amendment providing an appropriation to construct a road had been disagreed to, it was held in order to report a provision to provide for a survey for the road.

And the present occupant of the chair held this in pursuance of that rule:

But where the amendment in issue strikes out all of the bill after the enacting clause and substitutes a new text the managers have the whole subject before them and may exercise a broad discretion as to details.

The SPEAKER. The Chair would like to ask the gentleman a question right there.

Mr. HENRY. Yes.

The SPEAKER. Is not this whole rural-credit business that was injected in the Senate into a bill it had no business in to be treated as a separate subject or bill in the consideration of the rights of the conferees?

Mr. HENRY. It was so treated until the House put a substitute——

The SPEAKER. I know; but when the House put the Bulkley substitute in, the Chair will ask the gentleman, was not that practically striking out everything after the enacting clause, as far as rural credits was concerned?

Mr. HENRY. But, Mr. Speaker, as I was going on to show, you might write a new bill, and here is no bill. Here is a proposition for investigation.

The SPEAKER. I know, but the gentleman does not state the rule correctly.

Mr. HENRY. I will read it.

The SPEAKER. The Chair knows what it is very well. When everything after the enacting clause of the bill is struck out it throws the whole subject into the hands of the conferees.

Mr. HENRY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I did not hear all of the ruling on the shipping bill on yesterday. What was the ruling on that?

The SPEAKER. That was not an analogous case. They had not struck out the enacting clause on anything approximating that point.

Mr. HENRY. Just one moment, Mr. Speaker. I make the point that here are differences between the two Houses.

The SPEAKER. The Chair is just asking the gentleman a question. He was not deciding it.

Mr. HENRY. I understand. I am quoting the Speaker's decision here, and had not quite finished that, and if the Chair will permit me to proceed——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will proceed.

Mr. HENRY. It says, further:

And may even report an entirely new bill on the subject.

Now, this is not a new bill. This is a provision for an investigation. It is an entire dismissal of all legislation on this subject for the purpose of postponing legislation. And the conferees have exceeded their authority and have not touched the question and the differences that were submitted to them for settlement. And I make the point that they have exceeded their authority.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, the parliamentary situation in reference to this bill is this: The Senate added an amendment to the Agricultural bill known as the McCumber amendment, providing for a system of rural credits. The House struck that entire amendment out of the bill and added a substitute in place of it, known as the Bulkley bill. Every word of the Senate amendment was struck out and the entire new provision was put in its place, so that every word of the Senate amendment was in conference. The conferees had jurisdiction over the entire matter.

Now, the gentleman in his reading from the Manual a moment ago read one of the old cases on this subject, where there was a bill before the House providing for a road. The conferees struck out the provision in reference to the road and substituted a commission to determine whether the road should be built in its place. But we have a more recent decision than that. Only a day or two ago the District bill came before the House providing for an entire change of the law in reference to the system of taxation in the District of Columbia. When it came before the House an amendment was offered striking out all of the provisions of law that were changed in the District bill and substituting a committee of Congress to investigate the matter and report back. The same situation took place some years ago in reference to the Parcel Post System. I will not take up the time of the Chair in arguing this question, as it seems to me that the decision of the Chair not more than three days ago on the District bill, when this identical situation was presented, covers this case, and the Chair at that time held that the substitution of a committee for the legislative provisions in the bill was not exceeding the authority of the conferees.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the House passed the bill; the Senate added an amendment to it consisting of one subject matter. The House struck out all of that amendment and inserted in lieu of it other matter, so that all of the matter of the Senate amendment and of the House amendment to the amendment was in disagreement and in conference. Now, the only question is whether the substitute now reported by the conferees is a germane amendment.

If the appointment of a commission is germane either to the Senate amendment or to the House amendment to the Senate amendment, then it was in order for the conferees to bring in their proposition as to a commission. In matters of this sort we have to be guided largely by precedent. The other day I cited to the Speaker the ruling made in 1906 on the immigration bill, when there was pending before the House a section providing for a literacy test of immigrants, and the House, on motion made, inserted a provision appointing a commission in lieu of providing the literacy test. When that amendment was offered the point of order was made that it was not a germane amendment, a point identically on all fours with this proposition. The question before the House was whether they would provide a certain test, the literacy test, before people could immigrate to our country. A commission was proposed to investigate the matter. If it was germane, then it was in order. The Chairman at that time ruled that the commission amendment was a germane amendment, and held it in order, and it was agreed to.

The same question arose to which the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] has already alluded, on the District bill the other day. The Chair will find that ruling on page 4458 of the RECORD of February 27, only the other day, where the Speaker himself held that there being a disagreement between the House and the Senate, the House having proposed that the money appropriated for the District expenses should be paid, first, out of the District revenues and the balance out of the National Treasury, and the Senate having proposed that one-half should be paid out of the District treasury and one-half out of the Federal Treasury, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] offered an amendment that a commission be appointed to investigate the matter. The matter was quite fully argued the other day, and the Chair made a clear-cut ruling, referring both to the proposition of the House and the proposition of the Senate, and held that the amendment providing for the appointment of a commission was in order.

Those precedents do not leave the matter open any longer as a disputed proposition in this House, because they determine that an amendment proposing the appointment of a commission to investigate the matter, which is before the House in the form of an original proposition, is a germane amendment. That leads along the line of sanity and seeks to get information before we legislate, instead of doing, as some gentlemen would always do, legislate first and find out afterwards.

The SPEAKER. The point of order raised by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] has been repeatedly passed on. In the first place it seems to the Chair that the only sensible or correct way in which to regard the matter now in controversy is to consider this rural credit amendment offered by Senator MCCUMBER as a separate subject, distinct from the bill proper. What happened about that was this: The Senate inserted the McCumber amendment, treating the whole subject of rural credits, and it was sent over to the House in that form. The House struck out the whole of the McCumber amendment. That is, it agreed to a substitute for the entire McCumber amendment. It did not leave a single line or word of the McCumber amendment. That put it exactly in the same situation as if everything after the enacting clause of a bill was struck out. And it has been held so often and so far back and by so many Speakers that where everything after the enacting clause is struck out the conferees have carte blanche to prepare a bill on that subject that it seems to the Chair that question is no longer open to controversy. The Chair will refer to just one or two of the rulings.

The ruling on the point made on the shipping bill has nothing to do with this bill, because the situations are not the same. The more the Chair thinks about the ruling he made on the shipping bill the better satisfied he is with it. The point raised there was the matter of time, which had never been passed upon before so far as the Chair knows; but it involved the principle of the higher and lower rates in a bill, or the larger and smaller amounts in a bill. In the shipping-bill contest it happened to be the question of time that was in controversy.

The case cited by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] as to the immigration bill, which was passed on some three or four Congresses ago, is precisely on all fours with this. Now, in addition to that, several Speakers have taken a turn at it. In paragraph 6424 of Hinds' Precedents, volume 5, the syllabus, to use the legal phrase, is this:

Where the disagreement is as to an amendment in the nature of a substitute for the entire text of a bill the managers have the whole subject before them and may exercise a broad discretion as to details.

The only change I would make in that language is to say that they have carte blanche on the subject.

A point of order against a conference report should be made or reserved after the report is read and before the reading of the statement. On February 18, 1907, Mr. William S. Bennet, of New York, submitted the report of the managers of the conference on the bill (S. 4403) entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate the immigration of aliens into the United States,' approved March 3, 1903."

Before the report was read Mr. JOHN L. BURNETT, of Alabama, proposed to reserve a point of order.

The report having been read, a point of order was made by Mr. BURNETT, who insisted that the managers had exceeded their authority in inserting the following provisions:

Provided further, That whenever the President shall be satisfied that passports issued by any foreign government to its citizens to go to any country other than the United States or to any insular possession of the United States or to the Canal Zone are being used for the purpose of enabling the holders to come to the continental territory of the United States to the detriment of labor conditions therein, the President may refuse to permit such citizens of the country issuing such passports to enter the continental territory of the United States from such other country or from such insular possessions or from the Canal Zone.

And the Speaker ruled that that provision was in order.

Section 6425, the syllabus:

A Senate amendment having provided an appropriation to construct a road, and conferees having reported in lieu thereof a provision for a survey, it was held that the provision was within the differences.

The question involved here is not what anyone thinks about rural credits or what anyone would like to have on the subject. The only thing for the Speaker to pass on at this juncture is whether or not the conferees exceeded their authority in doing this thing. Not only by the decision of the present Speaker on two different occasions, but by half a dozen of his predecessors it brings this provision which the conferees brought in here within the rule, and the point of order of the gentleman from Texas is overruled.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to be heard on the conference report.

Mr. LEVER. How much time does the gentleman want?

Mr. HENRY. Ten minutes.

Mr. LEVER. I yield to the gentleman from Texas 10 minutes.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, it is not my purpose to be captious about this conference report, but before agreeing to it there are several propositions that should be discussed.

On the 1st day of March this House had it in its power to enact a general system of rural-credits legislation. The agricultural bill came over from the Senate with an amendment attached as a rider providing for a rural-credits system with one amendment added by that body. The McCumber bill was sufficient to meet the needs of the American farmer.

The mistake the House of Representatives made, in my opinion, was in not agreeing to the McCumber amendment, just as it had been written so that there would be no differences between the Senate and the House, and thus no opportunity given for the Senate to recede.

Gentlemen, for some reason the death of rural-credits legislation has been decreed. From what source comes this decree? Does it come from the Senate of the United States? Does it come from the House of Representatives? Is it from the constituted committees of these two bodies? Whence comes the decree that there shall be no rural-credits legislation at this session of Congress, notwithstanding the fact that this body added it to the agricultural appropriation bill? Such rural-credits bill as added by the House had been worked out after nine months of labor by a subcommittee of the Senate and the House Committees on Banking and Currency in pursuance of a report of a commission sent to Europe to study the question.

Mr. LEVER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. Yes.

Mr. LEVER. Was that proposition ever reported by the Banking and Currency Committee of the House?

Mr. HENRY. No.

Mr. LEVER. Or the committee in the other body?

Mr. HENRY. It was not reported, because certain gentlemen of some committees have been unfavorable to rural credits legislation. This House wrote it in the Agricultural bill by a majority of more than 3 to 1 on March 1 of this very year. The distinguished and able gentleman from Ohio [Mr. BULKLEY], who has studied this question as much as any man in Congress, was chairman of the subcommittee that prepared the measure and worked nine months on it. And he said on the floor of the House that if you were to give him nine months longer he did not see how he could improve on it.

Its principles are good. The subcommittees of the Senate and House agreed to it, and yet the committees failed to report it. Whenever rural credits legislation is written it will be along the line of this measure, which contains Government aid, and will stand as a monument to the strong young man from Ohio who goes out of this Congress. [Applause.]

And when we remember that a Democratic caucus in 1913, while we were considering the Federal reserve act, the President gave out a statement, which was printed in the newspapers and said that the next great task would be the enactment of a separate and distinct system of rural credits legislation for the benefit of the American farmer.

Let me read a line or two in order to recall what he said. I am not criticizing him now, because I believe his heart is on the side of the people. Here was his authorized statement:

Special machinery and a distinct system of banking must be provided for if rural credits are to be successfully and adequately supplied, and this is our next great task and duty.

On the 13th day of August, 1913, the President issued that authorized statement, which appeared in the newspapers, and subsequently in his annual message in December he came here and reiterated the same position.

On Monday we placed the Bulkley bill in this agricultural bill, and the Committee on Agriculture comes back to us and reports a substitute for a mere commission, still postponing this question.

Ah, gentlemen, that was not the way to deal with it. The mistake we made was in not voting for the motion to recommit, thus sending the McCumber amendment to the conferees, where it could not be evaded or destroyed.

Mr. Speaker, the time has come when the American Congress should cease trifling with the farming population. There are many men who are afraid to raise their voices in this House and the Senate in behalf of the farmers for fear they will be denounced as demagogues. I am one who says that the farmer has been trifled with about this question, and we ought not to undertake to trifle longer with it. We should face the issue and settle it. Now is the accepted time. [Applause.]

It makes little difference to me when charges of demagogism are whispered around the corridors of this House. When the banking and commercial people wanted a new banking system—the Federal reserve act—you bundled up the credit of the Government, neatly tied a blue ribbon around it, and placed it in pawn for the benefit of the bankers and commercialists. You sat them down at a feast of Federal reserve notes, prepared for them by the Government in return for their assets and commercial paper. You gave them Government aid. Let us give the farmer the same aid. At the risk of again being called a demagogue, I assert that he is the equal of the merchant, the banker, the professional man, or any other citizen. He is entitled to the same privileges at the Government Mint as they are, and the credit of this Government—his Government, too—should be placed behind his banking system upon the same principle by which you have mortgaged it to the banking fraternity in the commercial world.

I predict to-night that the day will come when we will put the strong arm of this Government under and around and about a banking system for the benefit of the farmer, and treat them just as we have the bankers and the commercialists. [Applause.]

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. Yes.

Mr. GARDNER. To whose arm does the gentleman think this cold hand of death, which has been laid on this bill, is attached? Who did this?

Mr. HENRY. I do not know who did it, but I know that the gentleman from Massachusetts has never befriended the farmers in any of his votes.

Mr. GARDNER. They are not in my district—why should I? [Laughter.]

Mr. HENRY. I have never known the gentleman from Massachusetts to represent anything but the special interests since he has been here——

Mr. GARDNER. Grand!

Mr. HENRY. And that is the reason the farmer has not received any legislation in his behalf. Mr. Speaker, this matter should not be postponed. Let those who have brought in the report take the responsibility. Go home to your constituents and satisfy them if you can. Continue in this course, smother legislation in conference, and see whether or not the Democratic Party can keep the confidence of the American people when you do these things. All three of the parties promised in their platforms rural credits legislation, and all have failed to redeem that promise.

I intend to keep the faith of the Baltimore platform.

My contract with my constituency and the American people shall be redeemed here to-night by my vote. We can send this bill to conference again, instruct our conferees, and demand legislation before the gavel falls. It will not imperil this bill. There is yet abundant time for reconsideration and action before we begin our journey home to meet our constituencies and render our account of stewardship. Let us trifle no longer, but redeem our solemn platform pledges.

Mr. LEVER. Mr. Speaker, a great many requests have been made of me for time, but I regret to say that unless we can get this bill to the enrolling clerks they can not engross it in time, and I have, therefore, had to deny these gentlemen the time. I just want to use two minutes myself.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield to me for a moment?

Mr. LEVER. I can not yield to the gentleman. I am very sorry. I have denied everyone else on this side and on the gentleman's side, members of the committee as well. I will yield for a question, if the gentleman desires to ask me a question.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to have some explanation of the agreement reached by the conferees as to Senate amendment No. 84.

Mr. LEVER. What amendment is that?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. I think I have the number correct. It relates to the appropriation for the foot-and-mouth disease. I understand the conferees report a settlement with the National Dairy Association by which hundreds of thousands of dollars are to be paid them in settlement of a claim they make, a claim that certainly has not been investigated.

Mr. LEVER. The conferees agreed to a proposition which permits the Secretary of Agriculture to pay one-half of the expense of the quarantine of a certain herd of dairy cattle which the Government quarantined about the 1st of November near Chicago, with which the gentleman is familiar.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Yes; and that is why I want to know about it.

Mr. LEVER. And the conferees did that at the urgent insistence of the Senate conferees.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Does this authorize the Secretary of Agriculture to make the settlement or permit him to make further investigate and to pay if he finds the Government is liable?

Mr. LEVER. It only authorizes the Secretary to do what he thinks is best after investigation of the subject. This does not require him at all to do it. It authorizes him to do it.

Mr. GARNER. Does it appropriate money for the purpose of paying the same?

Mr. LEVER. It does not appropriate any additional money. Two million five hundred thousand dollars are appropriated for the foot-and-mouth disease, and the agreement makes no additional appropriation.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman will remember that testimony was taken before the committee and the issue was squarely drawn between the Department of Agriculture and the officers of the National Dairy Association as to the liability and as to the facts upon which the claim of liability rests. One statement was that the department had promised or undertaken to make payment or to be responsible for the expense. The statement made by the department is that the officers of the association in so many words asked the department to do so and the association would pay the expenses.

Mr. LEVER. I am entirely familiar with all of the testimony before the committee, and the conferees of the House acted as best they could under the circumstances, and that is all there is to it. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on the motion to agree to the conference report.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question about some other item?

Mr. LEVER. I am very sorry, but can not yield.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order against the provision.

The SPEAKER. What point of order does the gentleman make?

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. That the conferees have exceeded their authority.

Mr. LEVER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that that comes too late.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. But all points of order were reserved.

The SPEAKER. It is too late to make the point of order now.

Mr. McLAUGHLIN. How could the question be raised until we got to it?

The SPEAKER. The question is on ordering the previous question.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. NORTON) there were—ayes 193, noes 27.

So the previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois demands the yeas and nays. Those in favor of ordering the yeas and nays will rise and stand until counted. [After counting.] Sixty-four Members have risen, a sufficient number.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I demand the other side.

The SPEAKER. Those opposed to taking the vote by the yeas and nays will rise and stand until they are counted. [After counting.] One hundred and seventy-five. On this vote the ayes are 64 and the noes 175. Sixty-four is a sufficient number, and the yeas and nays are ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 220, nays 103, answered "present" 2, not voting 98, as follows:

[Roll No. 100.]

So the conference report was agreed to.

The Clerk announced the following additional pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. BYRNES of South Carolina with Mr. HINDS.

Mr. MOON with Mr. MADDEN.

Mr. AIKEN with Mr. GREEN of Iowa.

Mr. BAILEY with Mr. AVIS.

Mr. BURGESS with Mr. CRAMTON.

Mr. DUPRÉ with Mr. MONDELL.

Mr. FINLEY with Mr. PAIGE of Massachusetts.

Mr. HELVERING with Mr. POWERS.

Mr. HULL with Mr. PROUTY.

Mr. JOHNSON of South Carolina with Mr. ROBERTS of Massachusetts.

Mr. WHALEY with Mr. SCOTT.

Mr. PADGETT. Mr. Speaker, I would like to vote.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman in the Hall listening?

Mr. PADGETT. I was sitting in the Hall just behind you, Mr. Speaker, and I was listening just before they called my name. I was reading the claims bill.

The SPEAKER. The rule is that gentleman must be in the Hall and listening.

Mr. PADGETT. I was reading the claims bill just at that particular time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not bring himself within the rule.

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to vote.

The SPEAKER. Was the gentleman in the Hall and listening?

Mr. EVANS. I doubt if I was listening.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman does not bring himself within the rule. The rule is that a Member must be in the Hall and listening when his name is called.

Mr. EVANS. I think I was in the Hall, but I do not think I was listening.

The SPEAKER. But it takes it all if the rule is strictly construed.

The result of the vote was announced, as above recorded.

On motion of Mr. LEVER a motion to reconsider the vote by which the conference report was agreed to was laid on the table.

OMNIBUS WAR CLAIMS BILL.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that House bill 8846, commonly known as the "omnibus war claims bill," be taken from the Speaker's table, all the Senate amendments disagreed to, and the conference asked for be agreed to.

Mr. RAGSDALE. Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the agricultural bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the Agricultural appropriation bill. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the bill H. R. 8846, called up by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GREGG].

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 8846. An act making appropriations for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts of March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section No. 151 of the act approved March 3, 1911, commonly known as the Judicial Code.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to take the bill from the Speaker's table, disagree to all the Senate amendments, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I shall object to the request as made by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GREGG]; but perhaps some agreement may be reached. The Senate has added 708 amendments. Amendments Nos. 296 to 706, inclusive, are for what are called "travel pay" in the Army. Some years ago the Senate passed a resolution or a bill or referred a resolution or a bill to the Court of Claims, covering a large number of claims of men who were in the Civil War, in the main for travel pay. The matter had been decided against them in the Treasury Department, and the Court of Claims has rendered decisions in these cases, and in each case has made the finding that the claim is neither a legal nor an equitable one, and that the Government is under no obligation to pay it, because it received no benefit by reason of whatever was done, and that, if paid, would be a pure gratuity.

The matter has never been before the House in any bill. No committee has ever reported a bill to pay any of these claims, so far as I now recall. How many more of them there may be I do not know. Possibly the attorneys who have charge of them know. There are in this bill over 400 of those claims. There are very likely 10,000 or 15,000 or 20,000 still outstanding. To pass a bill now including those claims is to pass something which would be very tidy for the claim agents who have charge of them.

Now, there is no use of sending this bill to conference. I am not willing it should go to conference. If we can reach an agreement by which we agree to all of the Senate amendments that relate to the war claims bill proper, and disagree to these travel claims amendments and stop there and send it back to the Senate, having concurred in all the other amendments and agreed to these amendments, it will be perfectly satisfactory to me. But as to agreeing to a conference, what is the use? It will not do any good to send this bill to conference.

Mr. GREGG. What is the gentleman's proposition? I did not hear it right well.

Mr. MANN. To concur in all the Senate amendments except amendments 296 to 706, inclusive. I have a copy of the bill here.

Mr. GREGG. That is all right. I amend my request, then, to cover that.

Mr. MANN. With the understanding that we do not have a conference. Just send it back to the Senate.

Mr. GREGG. I amend my request accordingly.

Mr. HAY. You move to concur with an amendment.

Mr. GREGG. I move to concur with an amendment.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman's request is to take this bill from the Speaker's table, concur in all of the Senate amendments except amendments 296 to 706, inclusive, and that the House disagree to those amendments 296 to 706, inclusive, and stop there.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. Speaker, I modify my request in accordance with that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent to take this bill from the Speaker's table, concur in all the Senate amendments to 296, and disagree to all of the Senate amendments from 296 to 706, both inclusive.

Mr. MANN. And concur in all the other amendments.

Mr. GREGG. The Chair has put that.

Mr. MANN. I beg the Chair's pardon.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will call the next bill on the Unanimous Consent Calendar.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 6120. An act for the allowance of certain claims reported by the Court of Claims.

The message also announced that the Senate had insisted upon its amendments to the bill (H. R. 8846) making appropriation for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and the Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section 151 of the act approved March 3, 1911, commonly known as the Judicial Code, asked a conference with the House of Representatives upon the said bill and amendments, and had appointed Mr. BRYAN, Mr. ROBINSON, and Mr. BRISTOW as the conferees on the part of the Senate.

EXCHANGE OF LANDS WITH THE STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA.

The next business on the Calendar for Unanimous Consent was the bill (H. R. 21450) to authorize an exchange of lands with the State of North Dakota for promotion of experiments in dry-land agriculture, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, that bill has just been reported; and, while I have been over it, I do not find my copy of it here. I would like to have the bill read and to have some gentleman explain it.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That upon receipt of a proper deed from the State of North Dakota, executed under authority of the act of its legislative assembly, approved January 26, 1915, reconveying to the United States title to section 16, township 138 north, range 81 west, fifth principal meridian, the Secretary of the Interior is authorized to issue patents to said State for such vacant, unoccupied, nonmineral public lands as may be selected by said State within its boundaries, not exceeding 1,280 acres in aggregate area, and said section when so reconveyed shall not be subject to settlement, location, entry, or selection under the public-land laws, but shall be reserved for the use of the Department of Agriculture in carrying on experiments in dry-land agriculture at the Northern Great Plain Field Station, Mandan, N. Dak.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I hope some one will explain the bill.

Mr. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, this is a bill proposed by the Department of Agriculture in conformity with a bill that was passed by the Legislative Assembly of North Dakota, which also was suggested to the Legislative Assembly of North Dakota by the Agricultural Department.

Near Mandan, N. Dak., is located the Northern Great Plains field station, where the Government carries on experiments in dry farming. That station is for the purpose of supplying trees and shrubs for the whole Great Plains territory. The station there now has 160 acres of land. Two miles south of the Northern Great Plains field station the State of North Dakota owns a section of school land. The superintendent in charge of the field station has urged that the station needs this section in the work that it is carrying on at Mandan, and has asked the governor of North Dakota to have legislation enacted by the State Legislative Assembly of North Dakota so that this section can be acquired by the field station.

About a month ago the North Dakota Legislative Assembly passed an act providing that the State of North Dakota might exchange this section if the Federal Government would give the State of North Dakota the right to take two sections of unappropriated and unreserved public land in its stead. This particular section is located 3 miles south of Mandan, N. Dak. It is worth about $30 an acre. Now, there is not any unappropriated public land in North Dakota that is worth $15 an acre. This bill has the approval of the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of Agriculture. The superintendent in charge of the field station has reported that in his judgment this exchange would be fair, and, in fact, that the United States would get the better of the bargain.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, where the Government has spent thousands of dollars for the benefit of a State, I suppose it would be anomalous and unreasonable to expect that the State should contribute in the slightest degree toward the expense. If the situation were reversed, the State of North Dakota would want us to give them the land. Here we have an experiment station in North Dakota, purely for the benefit of the citizens of North Dakota, wholly for their interest, supported at the expense of New York City and Chicago, paid for by the rest of the Government, and not by North Dakota; and, as stated by the report, the Legislature of North Dakota, desiring to encourage the work being done by the Government of the United States for the benefit of the citizens of North Dakota in North Dakota, proposes to sell to us land which the State owns.

Mr. NORTON. I will say to the gentleman——

Mr. MANN. Not just now. Wait a minute. One would think that the State of North Dakota, with its immense quantity of land for school purposes given to it by the Government, would be willing to give back to the Government a section of land where the Government is supporting a school there which ought to be supported by by the State. Not much. Not on your life. All of these States want Uncle Sam to help them, but not one of them is generous enough to put its hand in its own pocket to help itself. Now, the State of North Dakota is no worse than the rest. Here the other day we abandoned a military reservation in one of the States, and lo and behold, we gave away the buildings to the State for a school. Did the State offer to buy them at a price? Oh, not at all. Wherever we have land, it is to be given away; but wherever we are generous enough to go into a State to do work for the benefit of the State, and we happen to need some old land, not worth much, which land the State owns, we have got to pay a high price for it.

They say this land is worth $30 an acre. It is desired for the purpose of carrying on experiments in dry-land culture. Well, there is not very much land worth $30 an acre where you can really carry on experiments in dry-land agriculture. If it is worth $30 an acre, why do you want to carry on experiments?

Mr. NORTON. It sells for that.

Mr. MANN. Oh, they sometimes sell small tracts of land at that price to some eastern sucker; but he always comes away wiser and poorer.

Mr. NORTON. The gentleman from South Dakota, right back of you there, is selling that land.

Mr. MANN. He is selling the men who buy it. [Laughter.] However, I have been robbed and have seen the Government robbed so often of its public domain that I am not going to kick over a little thing like this. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. KAHN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California objects.

CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, in the matter that was passed over a few minutes ago, I ask unanimous consent to return to calendar No. 467.

The SPEAKER. Is that in relation to the New Jersey judgeship?

Mr. RAKER. No; in relation to the lands in Nevada, legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada.

The SPEAKER. The Chair promised an opportunity to the Members from New Jersey to call up the New Jersey judgeship bill, and when the gentleman from California spoke to the Speaker he supposed the gentleman was talking about the New Jersey bill.

Mr. RAKER. No.

The SPEAKER. The Chair promised them precedence.

Mr. RAKER. This is just to ask unanimous consent——

The SPEAKER. The Chair understands; and that is precisely what the New Jersey Members want to do. The Chair will recognize the gentleman presently.

Mr. RAKER. Very well.

ADDITIONAL JUDGE IN THE DISTRICT OF NEW JERSEY.

Mr. HAMILL. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 19423) to create an additional Federal judgeship in the district of New Jersey.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey asks unanimous consent to return to the bill (H. R. 19423) creating an additional judge in New Jersey.

Mr. CULLOP. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. HENRY. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. THOMPSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. HAMILL. Will the gentleman reserve his objection until I make a statement as to the purpose of the bill?

Mr. THOMPSON of Oklahoma. I will reserve the objection.

Mr. HAMILL. Mr. Speaker, there have been already two judgeship bills passed through the House, but I warrant that this is probably the most meritorious bill in that respect which has been offered this session.

Here is the situation in New Jersey. We have two Federal judges trying cases. Every one knows that New Jersey gets a great many cases because of its location between New York and Pennsylvania, and because of the fact that a great many corporations were formed there in years gone by. The great bulk of the litigation is tried in the New Jersey courts.

The calendars of the judges are very much congested. I have a statement which will show the condition we are in. During the year 1914, 1,179 cases were commenced, 832 were tried, and on December 1, 1914, there were pending for trial, 4,456 cases. In other words, the two judges trying the cases for that year alone would require five years in order to finish one year's calendar.

Now, these judges, according to the report, have taken no vacation, but have worked continuously in their efforts to clear the calendars.

The Secretary of War, Mr. Garrison, who has occupied a judicial position in New Jersey and who knows the conditions, said——

Mr. THOMPSON of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection.

Mr. LIEB. I object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HAMILL. Will the gentleman from Indiana withhold his objection until I make a further statement?

Mr. LIEB. I will withdraw the objection.

Mr. HAMILL. Then, Mr. Speaker, if there is no further objection, I have finished.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I could not hear the gentleman's explanation.

Mr. DIFENDERFER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. MANN. I want to hear the speech of the gentleman from New Jersey.

Mr. DIFENDERFER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania objects.

Mr. HAMILL. I did not understand the gentleman from Pennsylvania to object; I thought he reserved the right to object.

The SPEAKER. But he afterwards rose and objected.

VIRGINIA MILITARY INSTITUTE, LEXINGTON, VA.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 544) for the relief of Virginia Military Institute, of Lexington, Va.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay to the Virginia Military Institute, of Lexington, Va., out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the sum of $100,000, in full of all claims of said institute for the damage and destruction of its library, scientific apparatus, and the quarters of its professors in June, 1864, by the military authority of the United States. And the acceptance of the said sum by the said institute shall be a complete and absolute bar to any and all claims for the damage and destruction of the property of said institute by the armies of the United States.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MANN. I demand a second.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia asks unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I will detain the House but a few minutes to explain the purpose of this bill. It is for the relief of the Virginia Military Institute, of Lexington, Va., for the destruction of its property by fire by Gen. Hunter's army in 1864. At that time the institute was a prosperous school for general educational, military, agricultural, and normal purposes. The State of Virginia contributed to its support and in return the institution educated a certain number of young men who had to teach in the schools of Virginia for two years.

In June of that year Gen. Hunter made what is known as his Lynchburg raid, coming through the valley and by Lexington, where this school is located. The Confederate forces at different points of the valley opposed him, not for the purpose of giving battle but to deter the progress of his march as much as possible. When he arrived at Lexington there was a small Confederate force there that made a semblance of resistance. When the advance guard of Hunter's army—a regiment under Col. J. M. Schoomaker, of the Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry—marched into town they took possession of the town and the property of this college, with practically no resistance.

Mr. MOORE. That was Col. Schoonmaker, I think.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes; an elegant gentleman, a brave soldier, and a splendid officer. The next morning after that town had been taken possession of, and the Federal forces were in possession of the grounds of this institution, Gen. Hunter issued an order to destroy all the buildings, all the scientific and chemical apparatus, and the library, and all other property belonging to this college; and this order was carried out.

Fortunately, Mr. Speaker, there were in the Army some soldiers who knew a soldier's duty better than that. One was Col. DU PONT, the chief of artillery of Hunter's army, now a distinguished Senator from the State of Delaware. Another was Maj. McKinley, a staff officer, and later one of the best-beloved Presidents the country ever had; and other gentlemen and officers who expressed their dissent and disapproval of the order to burn this institution.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, I have read the affidavit of Col. Schoonmaker, who is a very high-grade Pennsylvania citizen, and who was the officer in command of the regiment that took charge of these buildings. He states very clearly that it was not his disposition to destroy the buildings, and that Gen. Hunter ordered their destruction the next morning and reproved him for not having destroyed them; but the one point I have not had cleared up in my mind, which I wish the gentleman would explain, is whether there was such a resistance on the part of the Confederate troops at this point as to warrant the belief that those buildings were peopled with Confederate troops who were firing upon Union troops in making this raid.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. There was at that time absolutely no resistance. Col. Schoonmaker had gone into the grounds and through the buildings, and there was not a Confederate soldier within miles of that institution at that time, nor a cadet. These officers to whom I have alluded objected upon the ground that there was no necessity of war justifying the destruction of these buildings. The destruction was not an incident of war, because the Federal forces at that time were absolutely unopposed. No Confederate force lay athwart Hunter's path that morning. These young officers urged their objection, and those of them who are living to-day still maintain that the burning of that institution was wrong.

Mr. Speaker, it is a well-established principle in the conduct of war that the destruction of property, unless there is some necessity of war, unless it is an incident of war, when the destruction is ordered by the Government itself or by the commanding general standing in the position of the Government, such destruction renders the Government liable for the property thus destroyed.

This is a principle recognized in every civilized nation of the world. That was the situation at the Virginia Military Institute on that morning. No necessity existed—there was no reason except one of wanton reprisal—and yet the property of that splendid institution of learning was committed to the flames.

Mr. POST. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes; for a question.

Mr. POST. If the facts are as the gentleman states here, why has not this been paid long ago?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Because the Federal Government is sometimes slow in doing justice in these matters; but those are the facts. Fortunately we are not in doubt as to the facts, because they have been testified to by Col. Du Pont, Chief of Artillery, and Col. Schoonmaker, of the Cavalry, both of whom were there and whose testimony before the Claims Committee of the Senate brought forth a unanimous report by that committee. The recollection of this wrongful burning was so strong in the mind of Senator DU PONT that he himself introduced this very bill, the passage of which we are asking to-night.

Mr. MOORE. Just one other question. The facts are much as the gentleman states them. I have read the testimony. I would like to know how the value of $100,000 for the property destroyed was arrived at?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. The board of this institution, the books having been burned, kept an accurate account of what it cost to replace these buildings and library and the scientific apparatus, and it amounted to something over $200,000. The Senate committee decided to give them $100,000 in lieu of the destruction that took place there. They certainly did not give them too much; they did not give them enough, but it will satisfy a just claim against this Government and will satisfy the authorities of this institution.

Mr. Speaker, this is a just and a righteous bill. It was unanimously reported from the Committee on Claims of the Senate, it unanimously passed the Senate, and was unanimously reported from the War Claims Committee of this House. I do hope that this House will do this tardy act of justice to this splendid school, this gamecock military institute, which is one of the very best in this country, and whose graduates have illustrated their heroism and skill and patriotism upon every battle field in which American troops have fought from Buena Vista down to the present time. [Applause.]

Mr. ROGERS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Yes.

Mr. ROGERS. Will the gentleman state to the House whether there are precedents for appropriations of this nature?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. There are. There were four institutions in Virginia that received damages at the hands of the Federal Army, and appropriations have been made for every one of them except this one, but I will say this case can never be used as a precedent for any other bill, because this is the only instance in the history of this country, and I believe it will be the only instance which will ever occur in which an educational institution is wantonly destroyed by an order of the commanding officer of an Army of this Government.

Do this act of justice and you will enable this institution to turn out 100 splendidly equipped officers every year, who will be ready to command our soldiers whenever men are needed to defend the American flag or the Nation's honor. [Applause.]

I reserve the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman reserves 10 minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, we all know that Sherman's remark that war is hell is correct. We are learning now, by reading of the war in Europe, that war is not a Sunday-school picnic. We hear on every side from there how brutal the enemy is, wherever the enemy is or whoever the enemy is. The French complain of the Germans and the Germans complain of the French. The Austrians complain of the Russians and the Russians complain of the Austrians. War is no amusement. It was not an amusing affair when the Federal Army was in Virginia or elsewhere in the South. It is very easy for some Member from Virginia, born since the war, to now asperse the officers of the Union Army by saying there was wanton destruction of property. What does he know about it? Not a thing.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I will tell the gentleman what I know about it.

Mr. MANN. I did not ask the gentleman to tell me. He can tell it in his own time.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. What did the gentleman ask for if he did not want me to tell?

Mr. MANN. Tell it in your own time. You do not know anything about it except what you read.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I know what the gentlemen who swore to it say.

Mr. MANN. I ask that the gentleman manage to keep order. He is more belligerent now than Gen. Hunter was.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I am fairer than the gentleman ever is.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Virginia can not even keep his temper now when there is no war. [Laughter.]

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I can keep my temper, but I get irascible when the gentleman is so unfair.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FOSTER). The gentleman from Virginia must not interrupt without the consent of the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I hope the time the gentleman from Virginia has taken will be taken out of his own time.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. It will not be.

Mr. MANN. I will ask the Speaker to keep the gentleman in his seat, where he belongs.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I will not keep my seat if I do not want to.

Mr. MANN. I think you will.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I will not.

Mr. HENRY. I make the point of order that the House is not in order, Mr. Speaker. We can not hear that friendly colloquy down there.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Virginia says there was wanton destruction of property. That is what they always say whenever an army goes through. Men conducting war are not very nice about what they do. Even when they are not at war they are not very nice. [Laughter.]

Now, is it proposed that Congress, 50 years after the war, shall determine whether the order of a Union officer in charge of an army to destroy property was a proper order or not? What do we know about it?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. MANN. I do not yield.

The man in charge was responsible for doing what he believed was the proper thing to do. We can not determine that. If he erred, it was an error which we ought not to pay for. It is impossible to pay for all the property which was destroyed in the South by the Union Army.

I used to hear the statement made when I was much younger that if the Democrats got into power they were likely to pay for the destruction of property in the South. Well, we just passed an omnibus war claims bill, most of the items of which would not have been considered for a moment 20 years ago, most of the items of which the committee would not have reported at all 20 years ago, and that was 30 years after the war. When the Democrats were in control of the Government before, they did not pass items such as we passed by unanimous consent in the omnibus war claims bill to-night. These things become a matter of growth and precedent. When we start in on a certain line we have to follow it up. Do we propose to pay for the property which was destroyed by the armies in the South by direction of the commanding officers, no matter what some man may think now about the order having been a proper one or not? You pay one of these claims and every claim attorney follows up the matter at once. He says, "Here is a claim that has been paid," and he has a bill presented, and pretty soon we will be paying all sorts of these claims, or else we will have to stand very strong in order to resist them.

A few years ago some one managed to get a claim paid for a church or a Masonic lodge or a city hall, on the ground that they could not be disloyal as organizations. Now we are paying those claims by the hundreds of thousands of dollars. I will say to you gentlemen on that side of the House who were responsible for legislation, if you start in to pay claims for property which was destroyed by the Union armies in the South, I will ring the changes on it all over this country in the North. The war is over. We have forgiven and forgotten that, but that does not mean that we are going to pay for the property which was destroyed as a matter of war by the armies.

This bill is for damage and destruction by the military authority of the United States. That is the language of the bill. And—

It shall be a complete and absolute bar to any and all claims for the damage and destruction of the property of said institute by the armies of the United States.

If it is wanton destruction, so much less is the claim a valid one. But the commanding officer of an army is the man who determines the circumstances. It is not his subordinate officers, and much less is it men born since the act was committed. I am opposed to opening the door for the payment of property destroyed by the Army as a matter of war either in the South or elsewhere; and if this Congress shall enter on such a course, God pity those who follow us and who have to provide the money.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time. [Applause.]

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes to the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON].

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I should like to take this opportunity to say, as briefly as possible, that among the pleasant duties I have had during this Congress has been the one of serving on the Committee on War Claims. By the very nature of things a great many of the claims that were presented there were objectionable to me, but I believe that all have had fair treatment, and that the calendars of the House have not been cluttered with impossible bills from that committee. It pleases me to say that I found the distinguished chairman of that committee, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. GREGG] fair to a degree, and it also pleases me to state that I found the ranking minority member, the distinguished gentleman from Vermont [Mr. PLUMLEY], careful, painstaking, and judicial in all of his observations. And, as a new Member, I want to take this opportunity of paying a tribute in my way to the older Member, who is voluntarily retiring as a Representative from Vermont.

Mr. Speaker, to me a man of the second generation, from the days of our fratricidal strife, whose father fought in the War between the States, and whose forbears bore arms in the War of the Revolution, it has been a pleasure for me to have served on that committee. It has been most interesting to add to what little history I have read of the battles between the blue and the gray, to be able in so many of these cases to lift the covers of that almost closed book and peer intimately into disputed points—look without bias as far as I have been able.

A great many of the cases mentioned in the omnibus bill—all, I think—went to the Court of Claims, according to the laws which govern in such cases, and were adjudicated and brought back. This particular case of the Virginia Military Institute was, as the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. FLOOD] has stated, unanimously reported from that committee. It has merit. It was no doubt right in 1864 to destroy the buildings, but it was also right to pay for those which should have been immune. My views are based largely on the statement of the distinguished Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT], at that time a lieutenant of artillery. After looking carefully at his statement made before the Senate committee in regard to the destruction of the cadet quarters, and finding it was not the desire to destroy the relics, library, scientific instruments, and so on, I came to the conclusion that if there was 90 to 95 per cent of fairness in the payment of one-half of the claim that was originally made and 5 to 10 per cent of sympathy, good feeling, or desire to help the educational institution, then the bill could with justice be passed.

Mr. MOORE. We have just passed an omnibus claims bill without any objection at all. There was a reservation as to certain things put in by the Senate. There was an opportunity given to anybody in the House to object and kill the bill. Does the gentleman know whether or not there were any claims in that omnibus claims bill, with its numerous claims, that vary greatly from this claim?

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. There are church claims mentioned in that bill.

Mr. MOORE. Was the property destroyed in the same way? We had no opportunity to see the omnibus claims bill here to-night. It was not distributed among the Members. Some gentlemen had it, and knew what was in it, and there was no objection to it. There is objection made to this particular claim, when doubtless there were lots of claims like it in the omnibus claims bill.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. I hope this bill will be passed.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman answer my question?

Mr. MANN. How much time does the gentleman have? He has had 10 minutes.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield three minutes of my time to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SLEMP].

Mr. SLEMP. Mr. Speaker, I am very much interested in the passage of this bill. In my judgment it is a good and fair bill from a war-claims standpoint. The committee cut out the building in which the soldiers and cadets lived. The money appropriated here is for the library, for scientific apparatus, and for the professors' buildings. It certainly is not in accordance with the rules of civilized warfare for armies to be destroying libraries. The destruction originally amounted to over $300,000. This money was put up by the State of Virginia, and by the authorities of the Virginia Military Institute. It is estimated and shown that about $100,000 would pay for the library, the professors' houses, and the scientific apparatus, and the committee made a distinction between these and the destruction of the barracks in which the cadets lived.

Now, as to the precedents involved, there was another institution of learning, the Washington and Lee University, that was damaged at the same time. Twenty years ago the House of Representatives, without a dissenting vote, passed an appropriation of $20,000 for that institution to compensate it for damages it had suffered. This is the adjoining institution, where the loss took place at the same time, and the Virginia Military Institute ought to come under the same precedent. The same statement was made 20 years ago on the floor of the House in the consideration of the Washington and Lee bill as was made by the gentleman from Illinois a few moments ago in regard to this bill, that it would open the Treasury to millions and millions of expenditures; but from that time to this not one single claim of that nature has been paid. As my colleague says, there can be no other claim as no similar destruction occurred along that line. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Illinois use some of his time?

Mr. MANN. I will say a word or two, anyhow. How much more time have I?

The SPEAKER. Ten minutes.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] a moment ago asked the gentleman from Washington [Mr. JOHNSON] if there were not a great number of similar claims in the omnibus claims bill, stating that gentlemen had not had an opportunity to get hold of the claims bill. We passed the claims bill more than a year ago, and gentlemen could have got copies of it at any time.

Mr. MOORE. I beg the gentleman's pardon. I could not get the copy. The gentleman had the bill.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman is confusing the matter. I had the Senate amendments. The claims bill was accessible to the gentleman for the last year and a half. But that is neither here nor there. It does not contain a single claim for the destruction of property in war, and the Committee on War Claims have refused to put into the claims bill any claim for the destruction of property by the Army. They have not only refused to put those claims in the omnibus war claims bill, but they have refused to refer the claims to the Court of Claims for a finding.

Mr. MOORE. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. I will yield for a question.

Mr. MOORE. Has every claim in the omnibus claims bill been approved by the Court of Claims?

Mr. MANN. That is so stated.

Mr. MOORE. Has this claim been approved by the Court of Claims?

Mr. MANN. It has not. I say "approved by the Court of Claims." The Court of Claims does not approve or disapprove.

Mr. MOORE. I mean an adjudication by the court.

Mr. MANN. They are not adjudicated. They are claims. There has been no finding here, as far as I know, by the Court of Claims.

Mr. BURNETT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. For a question.

Mr. BURNETT. Is it not a fact that we paid a number of claims for destruction of property in the Philippines, where there was actual destruction of property by the Army?

Mr. MANN. I think not. That is not my understanding.

Mr. BURNETT. That is my recollection.

Mr. MANN. That is not my recollection of it at all.

Mr. GOULDEN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. For a brief question.

Mr. GOULDEN. Has this matter ever been referred to the Committee on War Claims, and if so——

Mr. MANN. Why, it is reported from the Committee on War Claims; but it was entirely by personal solicitation that they got this report from the Committee on War Claims—a fairly meritorious case. It has great sympathies in it; but if you adopt the principle the next case will not have so much of sympathies in it. Pretty soon it will be a mere matter of paying the claim. What are the facts? This destruction of property occurred in June, 1864, at a critical period in the war, with great armies in Virginia, and great effort on the part of the Confederate Army to reach Washington. Gentlemen say that the general ought not to have destroyed the property. Well, if there had not been destruction of property and life there would have been destruction of the Union. I prefer to have had life and property destroyed and the Union saved. Perhaps they were not so nice about it as you and I would be, taking breakfast or dinner, but it was war. The commanding officer, for reasons which he believed were right, ordered the property destroyed. I have heard it said, by gentleman who said they were familiar with the case, that there was firing on the Federal troops from these buildings. I do not know. I do not care. I know that if Congress undertakes to pay these claims for destruction of property by the Army, the Treasury will become a waste.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, how much time have I remaining?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has four minutes remaining.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM]. [Applause.]

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, it seems to me that this matter has been discussed from an altogether improper viewpoint. This claim ought to be considered in a fair and judicial spirit. There is no room for recrimination or charges against a Union general or against those who represented this college. The simple question is, What are the facts, and have we precedent for this bill? I think an examination of both these questions will result in an affirmative answer, that we have precedent and that the facts in this case create an equity.

There is one thing that stands out most prominently, and that is that such an institution as this ought to have been immune. I do not know how it was destroyed or why it was destroyed; the fact is that at the time of its destruction it was not used for war purposes. Those who were there say that the plates of the students were on the dining tables and that there was every appearance of its having been used as a school; that those appearances remained visible to those who entered it at the time the Union troops arrived.

Now, this being immune property and an institution for the education of our youth, men of the North and men of the South were educated in it, and some have come forth out of it into the Union Army, although a great majority went into the Confederate Army, along with the States that they lived in. Men have come from it and gone into the Spanish-American War, so that the institution is an educational institution for the benefit of the whole citizenship of the United States. Shall we now pass a bill to pay for the destruction of scientific instruments, the house of the professor, and the library of that college, or not? You have a precedent in the case when Senator Hoar led the fight in order to reimburse William and Mary College for a similar loss. Washington and Lee University received similar treatment. Why should we draw the line when we are rectifying some of these things arising out of the war which could not be avoided in the past at this military college of the grand old State of Virginia. Let us do our duty by it, so that this bill will pass and this compensation be given to this educational institution, which through an accident of war was destroyed. [Applause.] Forty States out of 48 are represented in the student classes, I am told. We have, therefore, precedent for this action, and there exists a distinct equity to warrant the enactment of this bill into law.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois has six minutes remaining.

Mr. MANN. I do not think I care to use it.

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield two minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. FESS].

Mr. FESS. Mr. Speaker, I do not think that I care to say more than to simply voice the sentiments of the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GRAHAM]. He has expressed precisely my judgment on the matter. I shall take great delight in voting to take care of this needless destruction that no one at the time seems to have been responsible for. It seems to me that it is the least thing that this Congress can do at this time, and I shall vote for the measure. [Applause.]

Mr. HULINGS. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask the gentleman from Virginia a question, if the time has not expired.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Virginia has one minute remaining.

Mr. HULINGS. I have read many times over the incident that occurred during the war where a parcel of young fellows, cadets at the Military Institution of Virginia, at the time of the invasion by the Federal troops, turned out and made a magnificent fight against the veterans, men from the Army of the Potomac. I want to ask the gentleman from Virginia if this was the occasion, and if these were the cadets from that institution who made that magnificent fight?

Mr. FLOOD of Virginia. This was not the occasion; but when the homes of these cadets were attacked they did defend them, and defended them nobly, as they have defended the flag of the Union in battles of the Union since that time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 186, noes 37.

So the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 21546) making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year 1915 and for prior years, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate had receded from amendments 296 to 706 to the bill (H. R. 8846) making appropriations for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and the Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section No. 151 of the act approved March 3, 1911, commonly known as the Judicial Code.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed House joint resolution 439 with an amendment.

THE PANAMA-PACIFIC INTERNATIONAL EXPOSITION.

The SPEAKER laid before the House the following communication:

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., February 26, 1915.

Hon. CHAMP CLARK,
Speaker of the House of Representatives,
Washington, D. C.:

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition, authorized by the Congress of the United States as the official celebration by our Government of the opening of the Panama Canal, begs to extend to Congress a most cordial invitation to visit the exposition at an early date. We would feel honored in showing to Congress how the exposition has carried out the trust given to it by our Government. If it is not possible for the entire Congress to visit the exposition, I beg to express the sincere hope that a committee from Congress will make an official visit on behalf of Congress. I assure you of a most hearty welcome.

CHAS. C. MOORE,
President Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

NEUTRALITY.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the neutrality resolution (H. J. Res. 439) which was passed to-day and has just come over with a Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, has the gentleman a printed copy of the amendment?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand it is a privileged resolution.

Mr. MANN. It is not a privileged resolution.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not think the proposition is subject to objection. It is a House resolution with a Senate amendment, and it would be on the House Calendar.

Mr. MANN. That depends upon what the amendment is.

The SPEAKER. If it is an amendment that would require it to go to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union, the gentleman would have to ask unanimous consent.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It does not, Mr. Speaker; the amendment strikes out certain portions of the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, as I understand the Senate amendment, it does not put anything in the resolution that was not in the House resolution as it originally passed this afternoon. There is some portion of the resolution stricken out, but nothing inserted. I offered this resolution at the request of the State Department, with the statement that it was prepared by the Attorney General of the United States, and I assumed that it was what the administration wanted.

I am informed the Senate has made these amendments and have been informed by the chairman of the Senate committee having it in charge that the amendments were submitted to the President of the United States and met with his approval. It is a matter involving great international questions. There is nothing in the resolution now that the House did not vote for this evening, although some portions of the resolution are stricken out. I have been informed since the resolution passed the House that one of the causes for passing the resolution is the fact that some time ago the Government stopped a ship from sailing because it was alleged that it was carrying contraband of war to belligerents, and since that time the Government has been sued because we have no statute on our books to enforce our neutrality agreement. I see no reason why the Senate amendment should not be agreed to. If we do not agree to it now, it will not become a law. I think it is undoubtedly important that a law of this kind should be on the statute books, and therefore ask the House to agree to the Senate amendment. I desire now to yield to the gentleman from Illinois, if he desires it, such time as he wants.

Mr. MANN. I am perfectly satisfied with the amendment.

Mr. SABATH. Does the Senate amendment in any way broaden the language or the resolution?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It does not.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I yield.

Mr. GRAHAM of Pennsylvania. Will the gentleman from Alabama state briefly for the information of the House what was left out of the resolution by these amendments?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will. In the first clause of the resolution, on page 2, line 2, the language "of American register, or license," is so changed as to read "American or foreign," so that it will read:

And he is hereby authorized and empowered to direct the collectors of customs under the jurisdiction of the United States to withhold clearance from any vessel, American or foreign, which he has reasonable causes—

And so forth.

Then in lines 5 and 6 of page 2 the following language is stricken out:

Or to commit any other similar act in aid of the prosecution of hostilities.

Then on page 2 the following language is stricken from the resolution:

That, further, the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to direct the collector to give clearance to any such vessel of American register or license: Provided, That before clearing out the same the owners or master or other person or persons having charge or command thereof give bond to the United States, with sufficient sureties, in double the amount of the value of the vessel and cargo on board, conditioned that the vessel shall not be employed in the commission of such act or acts; and in case of a breach of the condition thereof the bond shall be forfeited to the United States, and the owner or master or other person or persons having charge or command of any such vessel shall, in addition, be severally liable to a fine of not less than $1,000 nor more than $5,000, or to imprisonment not to exceed one year, or both.

At the bottom of page 2, after the language stricken out, the resolution is made to read:

In case any such vessel shall depart or attempt to depart from the jurisdiction of the United States without any clearance for any of the purposes above set forth, the owner or master or person—

And so forth.

On page 3 the following paragraph is stricken from the resolution:

That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized and empowered to direct the collectors of customs or other appropriate authorities to accord the treatment of a vessel of a belligerent, including internment, to any vessel of foreign register in, or hereafter arriving in, a port or any territorial waters of the United States, when such vessel is acting, or preparing to act, or attempting to act, or intending upon departure from the jurisdiction of the United States to act as a tender to the armed forces of a belligerent, or otherwise to act in aid of the prosecution of hostilities.

Then in the last paragraph, on page 3, the words "and to all air spaces that fall" are stricken out, and that seems to me to be the most important amendment that is made, because it excludes from this jurisdiction the control of the air and aeroplanes, which was in the original resolution.

I am not here to say that, in my judgment, the Senate have perfected this resolution or improved it; but we are within a few hours of adjournment, and if the President of the United States, who has the responsibility of this matter in hand, is willing to agree to these amendments, then, considering the lateness of the hour and the proximity of final adjournment, I think it is the part of wisdom for the House to accept them.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurring in the Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the title will be amended in conformity with the text.

There was no objection.

On motion of Mr. UNDERWOOD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendments were concurred in was laid on the table.

PETER M'KAY.

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 2589) for the relief of Peter McKay, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to pay, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to Peter McKay, or his legal representatives, the sum of $2,500 as full compensation for permanent injuries received by the said McKay on the 5th day of May, 1904, at Fort Worden, in the State of Washington, by being struck with a large piece of log hurled by the explosion of an excessive blast of powder discharged without warning by employees of the United States Government engaged in clearing lands at said Fort Worden under the direction and control of the United States Government.

With the following committee amendment:

Line 6, strike out "$2,500" and insert "$1,500."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object.

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Speaker, this is the case of an employee of the United States Government, a carpenter, working at Fort Worden, Wash., who had spent the day in working on the cover for a searchlight, and on his way home in the evening, or to the bunkhouse on the reservation, passed a place where other employees, not working with him at the time, were clearing land. They set off a blast of dynamite which resulted in breaking McKay's leg, which was amputated a few days afterwards as a result of that injury.

Now, Mr. Speaker, this injury occurred something like 14 years ago. This bill provides for an appropriation of $1,500. If McKay received $600 14 years ago, it would be equivalent, computing interest, to $1,500 to-day.

Now, we hear much about the workmen's compensation act, and I think it is the common sentiment of the country that it would be a fine factor in our industrial or governmental fabric. The Government of the United States in this case, it seems to me, has owed something to Peter McKay, and I believe this bill ought to pass. I think it ought to have been $2,500 instead of $1,500. There is not a man in the House who would willingly have a leg broken for $1,500, or for $2,500. Mr. McKay is a man who, when he was injured, had a home, was out of debt, practically. He is now 65 years of age, and has a wife 64 years of age, and four daughters, has spent the money he received from the sale of his home, and is now about destitute.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FALCONER. I will.

Mr. GARRETT of Tennessee. Was the injury due to any defect in machinery?

Mr. FALCONER. Answering the gentleman, I will say that when McKay was walking down the trail to the bunkhouse, after having deposited his tools at the end of the day's work, there was no warning given that a blast was to be set off by other workmen in the employ of the Government who were clearing land for the embrasure of a 10-inch gun on the fort. He was not a party in that working group, and knew nothing about the planned explosion. It happened that a few minutes before another group of workmen walked past, and there was a warning given. But the testimony of Mr. McKay, substantiated by a Mr. Howard, is all the evidence there was to show that there was no notice of a blast to be set off. And all the objection at any time against this claim in the committee or in any other place was made by the friends of the party who set off the blast in protecting his position. He claimed he had shouted shortly before and that McKay should have heard, but I submit there is no man who is going to walk into a blast of dynamite if he knows it.

This $1,500 is a small pittance to give to a man who has had to stump along for 14 years on one leg. And I will say now that if anybody is going to hire a carpenter he is not going to hire a one-legged carpenter. He, walking around on a wooden leg with cane or crutch, is a living demonstration of the fact that this Government owes an unpaid debt.

This claim has been before the committee and reported by the committee, and we have the report of Gen. Mackenzie, of the United States Army. He says:

I am quite sure that the accident was not the result of any negligence on his part.

And just a little above this is the Senate report in the Sixty-third Congress, which says:

Clearly justice in this instance has been too long delayed.

I hope there will be no objection to the claim and that the bill will pass.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, this man was injured and kept on the pay roll after he was injured for many years. I do not know whether he is still on the pay roll or not. Under the general compensation law he would not have received this sum of money if he had been injured since the compensation was enacted.

Mr. FALCONER. He would surely have received $600.

Mr. MANN. I am unwilling, so far as I am concerned, to make it a pure matter of favoritism, appealing to a particular Member of Congress to see how much somebody shall be paid, and pay them more because they do that than they would receive under a general compensation act. I have objected to all of these bills, and shall continue to do so.

Mr. FALCONER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MANN. Certainly.

Mr. FALCONER. We have in the State of Washington a workman's compensation act. I was on the commission and helped draft it. For the losing of a leg a man should certainly get $600, and that is all it would have amounted to 14 years ago.

Mr. MANN. It is very specious reasoning which leads the gentleman to say that it would have amounted to $1,500, even with $600, 14 years ago. That has nothing to do with the question now. If a man had $600 14 years ago, he would not have a cent now. Neither one has any application to the proposition. I object.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. LANGLEY, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence for one day, on account of illness in family.

CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD.

Mr. BOOHER. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Missouri rise?

Mr. BOOHER. I rise to ask unanimous consent to return to bill S. 5042, No. 467 on the Unanimous Consent Calendar.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent to return to No. 467 on the Unanimous Consent Calendar. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, what is it?

Mr. BOOHER. It is an act legalizing certain conveyances in five towns of the State of Nevada.

Mr. MANN. I have no objection.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the bill.

Mr. BOOHER. The Senate bill was entirely stricken out, and I suppose it is not necessary to read anything but the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Chair did not understand the gentleman.

Mr. BOOHER. The Senate bill was entirely stricken out after the enacting clause, and an amendment offered. It is not necessary to read anything but the amendment, is it?

The SPEAKER. No.

Mr. BOOHER. Just read the amendment.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the amendment in the nature of a substitute, which includes everything after the enacting clause.

The Clerk read as follows:

S. 5042. Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"That all conveyances heretofore made on or before January 1, 1885, by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California, the Central Pacific Railroad Co., or the Central Pacific Railway Co., or the Contract & Finance Co., to the extent that the conveyances of the latter company were founded upon conveyances originally made by above-named railway companies, or either or any of them or their assigns of or concerning land forming part of the right of way and now within the corporate town or city limits of the towns or cities of Elko, Carlin, Reno, Wells, and Winnemucca, in the State of Nevada, granted by the Government by the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, entitled 'An act to aid the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes,' and all other acts of Congress amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto are hereby legalized, validated, and confirmed, subject to the conditions hereinafter stated.

"SEC. 2. That this act shall have no validating force until the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California, or its assigns, shall file with the Secretary of the Interior an instrument in writing accepting its terms and provisions.

"SEC. 3. That nothing herein contained shall have the effect to diminish said right of way to a less width than 50 feet on each side of the center of the main track of the railroad as now established and maintained."

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendment from the committee.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from California offers an amendment from the committee, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Page 4, line 6, after the word "confirm," insert:

"To the extent that the same would have been legal or valid if the land involved therein affected by this act had been held by the corporation making such conveyances under absolute or fee simple title."

Mr. MANN. Where does this amendment come in?

Mr. BOOHER. It is a committee amendment.

Mr. MANN. The amendment which is now offered?

Mr. BOOHER. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I want to know what it is.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the Clerk will again report the amendment.

The Clerk proceeded to read the amendment.

Mr. MANN. I am asking the gentleman to explain the amendment.

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from California or the gentleman from Missouri explain the bill?

Mr. RAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] will explain it, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. LENROOT. I will say to the gentleman that the original Senate bill sought to legalize certain conveyances made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and the Contract & Finance Co. The Committee on Public Lands recommended a substitute limiting the validation of the conveyances to five towns in the State of Nevada where the Central Pacific Railroad Co. owned the fee of the abutting property as well as having a right of way over it. In the Senate bill the conveyances were sought to be legalized to the extent only that the same would have been legal or valid if the land involved therein had been held by the corporation or person making such conveyance under absolute or fee simple title. In the substitute reported by the committee, through inadvertence as the substitute now reads, it attempts to validate absolutely all of the conveyances, no matter what defects there might have been in them or other equities involved, and the only purpose of the amendment is to validate them only in so far as they would be valid had the railroad company owned the fee-simple title instead of the right of way only.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Colorado rise?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. I want to address the House on this bill. I move to strike out the last word.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman is entitled to five minutes.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I very seriously doubt the wisdom or justice of this bill. I fear that it will set a dangerous precedent that may be injurious in other States. This bill ought not to be jammed through this House in the closing hours of the session in this manner.

Mr. MONDELL. Will the gentleman from Colorado yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Yes, sir.

Mr. MONDELL. In these cases the railroad owned the abutting property in fee, so that as a matter of fact if they had not had a right of way in these particular places they would have owned it in fee anyway.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. I will not discuss the bill in detail. This bill should come from the Judiciary Committee instead of the Public Lands Committee, where it had no business to go. I have received some telegrams denouncing this bill in very strong terms, and attacking the good faith of it. I think the bill as it came from the Senate was a bad bill. But we have very greatly amended the bill and limited its scope; and in deference to the opinions of the Senators from my State, who are very actively supporting this bill, and everyone else in the Senate and House seem to be in favor of it, I am not going to make a point of no quorum. I simply want to voice my protest against it on behalf of a large number of people along the rights of way, throughout Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, and Utah.

Mr. STAFFORD. Why does not the gentleman object to it?

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. As a matter of fact I am simply calling the attention of the House to it, and to the fact that it looks to me as though it may be a scheme for the purpose of setting a precedent for the Central Pacific Railroad and Union Pacific. I will not set up my judgment against the whole House. Maybe the bill is all right. But I warn the House now that this bill will be used by the railroads hereafter as a precedent for further and worse legislation.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, I do not think that the record ought to close with the statement made by the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. TAYLOR], because if the facts were as the impression would be given by the gentleman from Colorado I would agree with him in every particular. So far as this bill in the form now before the House makes a precedent for the future, it makes a precedent altogether along the lines of the ideas of the gentleman from Colorado and myself. The fact is that in previous Congresses general legislation has been enacted validating conveyances of the Union Pacific and Northern Pacific Railroads wherever they have made sales or attempted sales of their right of way. I believe that was an absolutely vicious precedent, and I will join the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. TAYLOR] at any time in resisting legislation of that character. But, Mr. Speaker, this proposition as reported by the committee validates only conveyances made by this railroad where the railroad itself owned the fee of the abutting property. There are five conveyances involved. The railroad company supposed at that time that they had the fee of the right of way as well as of the abutting property, and it was not until the case of the United States against Townsend, in One hundred and ninetieth United States, that it was held that the right of way granted to these transcontinental railroads conveyed anything more than an easement, but conveyed a qualified fee, and that the remainder did not belong to the abutting owner, but remained in the Government of the United States.

Now, the precedent that we will make by enacting this bill is that whenever a land-grant railroad parts with a portion of its right of way to an abutting owner we will validate such conveyance; and I would like to see, from the Mississippi River to the Pacific coast, a portion of this 400-foot right of way of these railroads taken from them if it could be done legally. That can not be done; but where they are willing to relinquish any of that 400-foot right of way to the thousands of farmers along these lines, I say Congress ought to validate such conveyance in the interest of the abutting owners. The Department of the Interior has held repeatedly that the abutting owner owns the fee of the right of way as well as the fee to his abutting property.

As I have said, it was not until recently that the doctrine has been held that the railroad company on these roadways holds a limited fee. So that this bill will make a precedent along the lines that the gentleman from Colorado believes in, as against the precedents that have been created in the cases of the Union Pacific and the Northern Pacific.

The SPEAKER. The pro forma amendment is withdrawn, and the question is on agreeing to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is now on the substitute amendment as amended by the gentleman from California.

The question was taken, and the amendment was agreed to.

The bill as amended was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. RAKER, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the bill was passed was laid on the table.

Mr. RAKER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to file the report, to be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the gentleman will have that permission.

There was no objection, and the report is as follows:

[House Report No. 1467, Sixty-third Congress, third session.]

CENTRAL PACIFIC RAILROAD CO.

Mr. RAKER, from the Committee on the Public Lands, submitted the following report:

The Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill (S. 5042) legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada, having had the same under consideration, beg leave to report it back to the House with the recommendation that all of the bill after the enacting clause be stricken out and that the following be inserted as a substitute for the original bill. The substitute to be inserted is as follows:

"That all conveyances heretofore made on or before January 1, 1885, by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California, the Central Pacific Railroad Co., or the Central Pacific Railway Co., or the Contract & Finance Co., to the extent that the conveyances of the latter company were founded upon conveyances originally made by above-named railway companies, or either or any of them, or their assigns of or concerning land forming part of the right of way and now within the corporate town or city limits of the towns or cities of Elko, Carlin, Reno, Wells, and Winnemucca, in the State of Nevada, granted by the Government by the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, entitled 'An act to aid the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes,' and all other acts of Congress amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto are hereby legalized, validated, and confirmed, subject to the conditions hereinafter stated.

"SEC. 2. That this act shall have no validating force until the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California, or its assigns, shall file with the Secretary of the Interior an instrument in writing accepting its terms and provisions.

"SEC. 3. That nothing herein contained shall have the effect to diminish said right of way to a less width than 50 feet on each side of the center of the main track of the railroad as now established and maintained."

The committee recommends that the substitute do pass.

Senate bill 5042 was referred to the Department of the Interior by Hon. Scott Ferris, chairman Committee on the Public Lands of the House, and on August 19, 1914, Hon. A. A. Jones, First Assistant Secretary, Department of the Interior, made report thereon, which report is as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, August 19, 1914.

Hon. SCOTT FERRIS,
Chairman Committee on Public Lands,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR MR. FERRIS: I have your favor of the 15th instant, transmitting Senate bill 5042, with a request for a report thereon, together with such expression of views as may be held by the department relative thereto.

This bill, entitled "An act legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada," has for its purpose the validation of certain contracts and conveyances entered into or executed by said railroad company or its assigns, of lands forming a part of the right of way conferred upon said company by the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, entitled "An act to aid in the construction of railroad and telegraph lines from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes" (12 Stat., 489), and other acts of Congress amendatory thereof.

The Committee on the Judiciary in the Senate considered this bill, and with some slight amendments submitted a favorable report, whereupon it passed the Senate in its present form August 7, 1914.

The conditions now existing that call for legislation of this character arose in the following manner: The right of way conferred upon the Central Pacific company was a strip of land 200 feet in width on each side of the center line of its road, but the entire width was not regarded as necessary by the company at all places for railroad purposes, and at a number of points, where important towns on the line of road now exist, portions of the right of way were transferred by the company as a part of such town sites, which are now occupied by improvements of various kinds and of great value.

Whatever views may have been entertained as to the authority of a railroad company to dispose of any portion of its right of way prior to the decision of the United States Supreme Court in Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. Townsend (190 U. S., 267), the question is now put at rest, the court holding:

"Manifestly the land forming the right of way was not granted with the intent that it might be absolutely disposed of at the volition of the company. On the contrary, the grant was explicitly stated to be for a designated purpose, one which negated the existence of the power to voluntarily alienate the right of way or any portion thereof. The substantial consideration inducing the grant was the perpetual use of the land for the legitimate purpose of the railroad, just as though the land had been conveyed in terms to have and to hold the same so long as it was used for the railroad right of way."

This decision was cited and followed, the above language being quoted, in the later decision, Northern Pacific Railway Co. v. Ely (197 U. S., 1). Congressional action, therefore, is the only relief in the case of titles of this character.

A bill (S. 7600) was introduced in the Sixty-second Congress, third session, for the same purpose as the one now in hand, but containing some other features, on which a hearing was had before the Subcommittee on the Judiciary. A copy of the report of this hearing is found with our files, from which it seems that the parties introducing the bill, as well as representatives of the railroad company, were heard at considerable length. It appears therefrom that no objection on the part of the company exists as to validating any contract or conveyance that it had theretofore executed. On the other hand, a proposed bill to accomplish such purposes was submitted on behalf of the company.

The necessity of legislation of a character similar to this now proposed has received favorable recognition at the hands of Congress. The act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stat., 538), provided:

"That all conveyances heretofore made by the Northern Pacific Railroad Co., or by the Northern Pacific Railway Co., of lands forming a part of the right of way of the Northern Pacific Railroad granted by the Government by any act of Congress are hereby legalized, validated, and confirmed: Provided, That no such conveyance shall have effect to diminish said right of way to a less width than 100 feet on each side of the center of the main track of the railroad as now established and maintained."

The bill meets with my approval, and I therefore recommend its passage.

Yours, truly,
A. A. JONES,
First Assistant Secretary.

The bill was referred to a subcommittee for hearing. The subcommittee referred the bill to the Attorney General for consideration and report thereon by the following letter:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS,
Washington, D. C., February 9, 1915.

Hon. THOMAS W. GREGORY,
Attorney General, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. GREGORY: I am sending you herewith Senate bill 5042, "An act legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada."

This bill is now pending before the Committee on the Public Lands of the House and referred to a subcommittee on which I am acting as chairman.

I am desirous of having a report from your department upon the bill as to whether or not it would in any way relieve the railway companies referred to of their duties under their grants if this legislation were enacted, and whether or not a bill by these provisions in any way or by any reason or any possible construction be against the interest of the Government in favor of the railroad companies or relieve them of any duty or responsibility by reason of the Government taking affirmative action, as contemplated by the proposed legislation.

An early reply is solicited, to the end that the committee may have the benefit of your opinion at an early date.

Am sending you copy of the hearings taken on similar bill, which kindly return with your opinion.

I am, yours, most truly,
JOHN E. RAKER,
Member of Congress.

After further consideration by the subcommittee, a further letter was directed to the Attorney General, with a proposed substitute for Senate bill 5042, which letter and proposed substitute follow:

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
COMMITTEE ON THE PUBLIC LANDS,
Washington, D. C., February 19, 1915.

Hon. THOS. W. GREGORY,
Attorney General, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR MR. GREGORY: On February 9, 1915, I wrote you in regard to Senate bill 5042, "An act legalizing certain conveyances by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada."

The subcommittee, of which I am chairman, having had this matter under investigation, presented to the full committee a tentative substitute for Senate bill 5042 for the consideration of the committee.

Upon discussion this morning, before the full committee, the question arose as to the proposed substitute, and strike out all the towns referred to except the towns of Elko, Carlin, Reno, Wells, and Winnemucca, as these last-named five towns were granted rights of way under the five deeds referred to on pages 28 and 29 in the hearings before the Subcommittee on the Judiciary on the Senate bill 7600.

As the committee understood it, these five deeds related to land that was on the odd-numbered sections, which were granted to the railroad company by the act.

The question then arose as to the advisability of passing such legislation at all, but to present a resolution forfeiting the rights of way granted to the company, under act of Congress of July 1, 1862, and all other acts amendatory thereof and supplementary thereto.

The committee then, in substance, advised that the subcommittee take the matter up with your office, to the end that you might go into the subject matter fully relative to the present bill as it passed the Senate, Senate bill 5042.

Second. The tentative substitute.

Third. A substitute as amended with section 2 struck out and to limit the towns as above specified.

Fourth. A full report from your department relative to a resolution by Congress forfeiting the rights of way under the acts and amendments thereto, because and on account of the railroads failing to comply with the terms of the grant and the use of the right of way exclusively for the purpose specified in the act.

Fifth. The effect upon the railroad company and its successors in having voluntarily attempted to have sold part of the land granted by the right-of-way act and its nonusage thereof, and its position by voluntarily attempted conveyances, as well as by suffering and permitting permanent and substantial structures and improvements within the limit of its right of way.

The subcommittee is desirous of an early disposition of this matter and would appreciate it highly if your department could give us an early as well as a full and detailed report upon the matters presented in this letter.

Am sending you under separate cover bill 5042, tentative substitute, and a copy of the hearings had before the Senate committee on December 19, 1912, on Senate 7600.

I am, yours, most truly (for the committee),
JOHN E. RAKER, Member of Congress.

That all conveyances heretofore made on or before January 1, 1885, by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California, the Central Pacific Railroad Co., or the Central Pacific Railway Co., or the Contract & Finance Co., to the extent that the conveyances of the latter company were founded upon conveyances originally made by the above-named companies, or any or either of them, or their assigns, or the Pacific Improvement Co., or the successors or assigns of any of them, of or concerning land forming part of the right of way and now within the corporate town limits of the towns of Elko, Golconda, Battle Mountain, Reno, Lovelock, Wells, Winnemucca, Verdi, and Palisade, within the State of Nevada, granted by the Government by the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, entitled "An act to aid the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes," and all other acts of Congress amendatory thereof or supplementary thereto, are hereby legalized, validated, and confirmed, subject to the conditions hereinafter stated.

SEC. 2. That wherever any or either of said companies has heretofore suffered or permitted substantial permanent structures in substantial permanent improvements to be erected and maintained upon any part of the railroad right of way within the corporate limits of the towns in section 1 of this act above named, it shall be lawful for said companies, or any or either of them, but without consideration, to execute and deliver to the owner or owners of such structures or improvements deed or deeds of conveyance for the lands conveyed thereby, with the same effect as if the lands embraced therein had been originally granted to said companies in fee simple.

SEC. 3. That this act shall have no validating force until the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California or its assigns shall file with the Secretary of the Interior an instrument in writing accepting its terms and provisions.

SEC. 4. That nothing hereinbefore contained shall have the effect to diminish said right of way to a less width than 50 feet on each side of the center of the main track of the railroad as now established and maintained.

The Attorney General, T. W. Gregory, made report thereon, in response to both letters and substitutes on Senate bill 5042, which report from the Attorney General follows:

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., February 22, 1915.

Hon. JOHN E. RAKER,
House of Representatives.

MY DEAR SIR: Acting as chairman of a Subcommittee of the Committee on the Public Lands you have favored me with two letters, dated on the 9th and 19th instant, respectively, in which you request that I make a detailed report upon Senate bill 5042 and a proposed substitute therefor (copies of which you inclose) and render a legal opinion upon various questions of law which have arisen before the committee in its deliberations upon this proposed legislation.

The Senate bill is entitled "An act legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada."

The first section refers to—

(1) "All conveyances or written agreements heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California, the Central Pacific Railroad Co., or the Central Pacific Railway Co. or the Contract & Finance Co. to the extent that the conveyances or written agreements of the latter company were founded upon conveyances or written agreements originally made by the above-named companies, or any or either of them, or their assigns, or the Pacific Improvement Co., or the successors or assigns of any of them, of or concerning land forming a part of the right of way of said companies, or either of them, granted by the Government by the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, entitled 'An act to aid the construction of a railroad and telegraph line from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean and to secure to the Government the use of the same for postal, military, and other purposes,' and all other acts of Congress amendatory thereof or supplemental thereto.

(2) "Also all conveyances or written agreements heretofore made by said companies, or either of them, or the successors or assigns of any of them, of or concerning land forming a part of the right of way, and within the State of Nevada, of any of said companies granted by or held under any act of Congress.

(3) "All conveyances or written agreements confining the limits of said right of way or restricting the same."

The section then concludes by declaring, as to all such conveyances and agreements, that they "are hereby legalized, validated, and confirmed to the extent that the same would have been legal or valid if the land involved therein had been held by the corporation or person making such conveyance or agreement under absolute or fee-simple title."

The limited study I have been able to bestow upon this bill does not enable me to gather very clearly the purpose of introducing the matter which I have set out in paragraphs (2) and (3) supra. The latter would seem to be superfluous in view of the general terms preceding. Paragraph (2) refers only to lands in Nevada. This limitation being absent in paragraph (1) the natural implication would be that that paragraph was intended to include lands elsewhere, which contradicts the title.

In other respects, paragraph (2) seems to amount merely to a general reiteration of what is contained in paragraph (1), save in these respects: (a) That paragraph (1) in referring to conveyances and agreements by the Contract & Finance Co., is expressly confined to such as were founded on conveyances or agreements of the "above-named companies" (evidently meaning the three railroad companies), while paragraph (2) omits this restriction; and (b) that paragraph (2) refers to a right of way granted by "any act of Congress," whereas paragraph (1) refers to the right of way granted by the act of July 1, 1862, and its amendments and supplements.

The first section of the proposed substitute, which you have submitted to me in typewriting, obviates most of these suggestions. It refers only to conveyances of land situate within the corporate limits of certain specified towns in Nevada, and forming part of the right of way granted by the act of July 1, 1862, and the acts in amendment and supplement thereof. I think, however, that, without changing the sense, the form of this section might be improved in some respects.

Section 2 of the Senate bill provides that where any of "said companies" has permitted permanent structures or improvements to be erected or maintained "upon any part of the railroad right of way above mentioned" it shall be lawful for "said companies," or any of them, but without consideration, to execute conveyances to the owners of such structures or improvements for the lands covered thereby, and "such additional lands, if any, as may be reasonably necessary for use in connection therewith, with the same effect as if the lands embraced therein had been originally granted to said companies in fee."

Section 2 of the substitute is to the same effect, except that it is confined to lands within the towns named in section 1, and to such as are covered (the word "conveyed" here is evidently a clerical error) by the structures or improvements. The provision for conveyance of additional lands "reasonably necessary," etc., is omitted.

Section 3 of the substitute provides that the act shall have no validating force "until accepted in writing by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. of California or its assigns." There is no equivalent provision in the Senate bill.

Legislative precedents are found in the act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stat., 538), construed and applied in Northern Pacific v. Ely (197 U. S., 1), and the act of June 24, 1912 (37 Stat., 188), construed but held inapplicable in Union Pacific v. Laramie Stockyards Co. (231 U. S., 190); Union Pacific v. Snow (id., 204); and Union Pacific v. Sides (id., 213).

The act of April 28, 1904, supra, purported to validate all "conveyances" theretofore made of lands forming part of the Northern Pacific right of way outside of 50-foot limits from the center of the main track. It was not to become effective until accepted by the company. It was so accepted. In the Ely case it was held that, under a State statute of limitation which operates to convey title, adverse possession for the required period worked a "conveyance" within the meaning of that act of Congress.

The act of June 24, 1912, supra (which did not contemplate or obtain the acquiescence of the company), purports to validate not only "conveyances" but also, by a separate provision, to give to adverse possessions the same effect as they would have had under the State laws if the land of the right of way had been originally granted in fee simple absolute by the United States to the railway grantee. In the case of the Laramie Stockyards Co., and the others cited above from the same volume, the Supreme Court construed this latter provision as intended to operate prospectively only, and intimated quite strongly that if construed to be retroactive it might be open to serious objection on constitutional grounds. One justice dissented and three others did not participate. On the other hand, the opinion indicates quite clearly that such an objection would not apply to the provision validating the past voluntary (though void) "conveyances" of the grantees.

From this it may be safely assumed, I think, that section 3 of the substitute bill is not necessary to the validation of conveyances in the ordinary sense—i. e., voluntary conveyances by act of the company—whereas the presence of that section, aided by the company's acceptance of the act, would probably bring into play the State statute of limitations if it operates as a "conveyance" through adverse possession. (Ely case, supra.)

I trust that the foregoing observations may prove of some benefit to your committee, and I regret that I can not go farther in responding to your inquiries. To answer these fully would compel me to enter upon a discussion of the wisdom of the legislation now proposed, compare it with other legislative action which might be adopted instead, and essay an opinion upon the legal consequences. To do this would violate a uniform practice of the department in respect of the rendition of opinions. The precedents are all against the exercise of this function except in the cases expressly defined by statute. For this department to undertake to formulate opinions in all cases when requested by the committees of Congress concerning the effect of proposed legislation would be manifestly impossible. I have treated the present matter, to some extent, as an exception, because cognate questions were considered here when the act of June 24, 1912, was before the President for Executive approval. The inclosed report, dated June 22, 1912, signed by Assistant Attorney General Knaebel, was prepared in pursuance of the express duty of this department to give advice to the President upon all matters when required by him so to do. From this report you will see that the department not only found no serious objection to the act of June 24, 1912, but recommended it as remedial and beneficial. The report assumed that the act was entirely retrospective, but subsequently the Supreme Court reached a different conclusion in regard to the provision dealing with adverse possession, as I pointed out above.

Sincerely, yours,

T. W. GREGORY,
Attorney General.

JUNE 22, 1912.

The PRESIDENT.

SIR: I return herewith H. R. 16689, "An act legalizing certain conveyances made by the Union Pacific Railroad Co.," which was submitted to the Attorney General on the 18th instant.

From the examination which I have been able to make of the subject I am strongly of the opinion that the good features of this legislation entirely overbalance the possible defects. The extraordinary condition of titles along and in part overlapping the railroad company's rights of way in Nebraska and Colorado was clearly brought out in the hearings before the House Judiciary Committee, and is graphically and, I think, fairly explained in the printed reports of that committee and the Judiciary Committee of the Senate, to which I would invite your attention. That condition is attributable to the conduct of the present company and its predecessors. Were it not that the lands constituting the rights of way are theoretically affected by a public interest and in particular by the right of the United States to insist that they shall remain intact to fulfill the purposes for which they were granted, the titles which this act seeks to confirm would be independently valid, either by virtue of the deeds and agreements made by the company or its predecessors or by virtue of the State statute of limitations and the equitable doctrine of estoppel. As it is, the company is in a position to oust not only those persons who claim strips by long-continued adverse and notorious possession but even, it would seem, those to whom it has deliberately conveyed, or with whom it has entered into solemn agreements, limiting its holdings (Northern Pacific v. Townsend, 190 U. S., 267), and this not upon the ground that the entire width is actually necessary to the operation of the railroad, but because, as a matter of law, that width, having been defined by Congress, is conclusively presumed to be necessary. It is the implied obligation to the Government to preserve the right of way from encroachment that enables the company to escape the estoppels which would otherwise clearly exist, even to the extent of repudiating its own deliberate agreements and of dispossessing private owners who have gone to vast expense in erecting improvements and have maintained their possession in good faith for long periods of time. (Northern Pacific v. Ely, 197 U. S., 1.)

By the present enactment Congress in effect declares that the strips in controversy are no longer deemed essential to the Federal purpose, and quitclaims the Federal interest. It seems to me that this simply amounts to a withdrawal of the shield of Federal immunity which stands between the railroad company and the ordinary legal and equitable consequences of a situation of its own making. I do not, therefore, perceive that the company has any just ground to complain of the legislation. Its own rights, whatever they may be independently, and whether derived from the grant of the rights of way or the grant of the odd-numbered sections over which they pass, can not, of course, be affected. I say this because the act, should it come before the courts, would be necessarily read with the Constitution and confined to the subject matter with which Congress was competent to deal. The Acting Secretary of the Interior, in his letter of the 20th instant, is apprehensive that this act may work injury to the rights of owners of land in even-numbered sections whose holdings abut on or are intersected by a right of way. He assumes that such an owner is interested in the right of way itself to such an extent that when any portion of it legally ceases to be devoted to railway uses the full title to that portion will revert to him. This proposition is consistent with the practice of the Land Department in such cases, which has been to require the entryman to count the right of way as part of his entry, even for the purpose of computing the purchase price if he made cash entry, and has made no exception of the right of way in his patent. On the other hand, in the Townsend case, supra, the Supreme Court said that the land forming the right of way "was taken out of the category of public lands subject to preemption and sale, and the Land Department was therefore without authority to convey rights therein. It follows that the homesteaders acquired no interest in the land within the right of way because of the fact that the grant to them was of the full legal subdivisions."

It may be that the language quoted was broader than the occasion required and that the patentee has indeed a contingent right of reverter, as the Secretary suggests; but if this be true must it not also be true that his interest could not be destroyed by an act of Congress and that this proposed legislation, instead of tending to its destruction, will, in fact, produce such a situation as will enable the patentee to assert his interest for the first time successfully in the courts? Undoubtedly it would have been better if, in framing the act, Congress had inserted language expressly negativing an intention to override any legal or equitable rights of abutting owners. It appears to have assumed, in the absence of any information to the contrary, the claims and titles within the right of way and which are sought to be validated were all either held by the abutting owners themselves or acquired with their consent. The cases in which they are held adversely to such owners, if they exist at all, must be comparatively rare, and the bare possibility of their existence would hardly justify the postponement, and therein, perhaps, the ultimate denial of the relief which the act is intended to afford in the hundreds, if not thousands, of cases where the necessity for relief has been demonstrated.

The act of April 28, 1904 (33 Stat., 538), as construed and applied in Northern Pacific v. Ely (197 U. S., 1), is a legislative precedent in all respects except that the assent of the company was there required. To have introduced a similar provision in this act would probably have resulted in its indefinite suspension. Its adoption in its present form was opposed by the Union Pacific Co., and that company's attitude appears to have been otherwise expressed in the various actions which it has instituted in Colorado, Kansas, and Nebraska, and in its recent policy of extending its fences to include areas which have long been under cultivation and in the adverse and exclusive possession of farmers.

I would invite your attention particularly to the condition of the titles in the city of Greeley, Colo., as described by the circuit court of appeals for the eighth circuit in Union Pacific v. City of Greeley (189 Fed., 1). That case is now on appeal to the Supreme Court, and thus affords a parallel to the Ely case, supra, which was pending in the Supreme Court when the act of 1904, supra, was enacted.

For the Attorney General.

Very respectfully,

ERNEST KNAEBEL,
Assistant Attorney General.

The following letters were received from Senator PITTMAN and Ernest Knaebel, Assistant Attorney General:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Committee on Territories, February 25, 1915.

Hon. JOHN E. RAKER,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR JUDGE: I inclose you letter from Mr. Ernest Knaebel, Assistant Attorney General, with reference to the bill for the validation of titles along the Central Pacific, which you will notice is a strong indorsement of the bill. Please file and consider this letter along with the other documents.

I called up Mr. Ferris this morning, and, while he was not there, I was informed that he intends to call a meeting, if possible, for to-morrow morning.

I sincerely trust you will be able to push this matter through at this time.

Very sincerely, yours, KEY PITTMAN.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE,
Washington, February 24, 1915.

Hon. KEY PITTMAN,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: Your very informing letter concerning S. 5042 reached me on Sunday, and I am indebted to you for the suggestions therein contained.

The Attorney General sent a letter to Representative RAKER on the 22d instant, as early as it could be prepared and dispatched from the department. He went as far as he could without violating the limitations placed by statute and by necessity upon the opinion-making function.

I trust you will have no difficulty in securing the legislation needed for your State.

Sincerely, yours,

ERNEST KNAEBEL,
Assistant Attorney General.

After full hearing by the full committee, the substitute for the bill hereinbefore set out was unanimously ordered reported, and that it do pass.

The purpose of the substitute is to legalize certain conveyances by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and its subsidiary town-site companies to individuals of town lots on portions of the Central Pacific Railway's right of way in five towns in the State of Nevada, the five towns affected by the substitute being Elko, Carlin, Reno, Wells, and Winnemucca. These five towns are on odd-numbered sections and cover five conveyances made by the Central Pacific Co., and are definitely described, relative to the conveyances, date of conveyance, and description of the land on which they are located, as follows:

"First, August 20, 1874, the Central Pacific Co. conveyed to the Contract & Finance Co. the NW. ¼, sec. 11, T. 19 N., R. 19 E., adjoining the town of Reno, reserving only 200 feet right of way instead of 400 feet.

"Second, April 30, 1877, the Central Pacific Co. conveyed to Charles Crocker the NW. ¼, sec. 29, T. 36 N., R. 38 E., at Winnemucca Station, reserving 400 feet in width on the south side of the track, and 150 feet in width on the north side of the track. While this reservation was more than 400 feet in total width, yet it was in fact a conveyance of the northerly 50 feet of the granted right of way on the north side of the railroad for a distance through the town.

"Third, on December 21, 1877, the Central Pacific Co. conveyed to Charles Crocker the SE. ¼, sec. 27, T. 33 N., R. 52 E., at Carlin Station, reserving 30.77 acres for right of way and station grounds, described by metes and bounds, which reservation is of irregular shape and is of 200 feet and more on the north side of the track and 50 feet to 90 feet on the south side of the track. It follows that the portion of the granted 200 feet on the south side of the railroad lying south of that reserved by the deed was conveyed to Mr. Crocker.

"Fourth. On January 31, 1870, the Central Pacific Co. conveyed to Charles Crocker all of sec. 15, T. 34 N., R. 55 E., at Elko Station, reserving 400 feet right of way for railroad purposes, excepting within the town of Elko, where the reservation is of a strip of land on each side of the railroad tracks, as marked on the official map of the town. The reservation as so defined is of irregular width, ranging from about 175 feet at the west end to 240 feet at the east end of the town site, and for a distance of about 4,000 feet.

"Fifth. On December 21, 1877, the Central Pacific Co. conveyed to Charles Crocker the SW. ¼ of the SW. ¼ sec. 3, T. 37 N., R. 62 E., at Wells Station, reserving for right of way approximately 120 feet on the north side of the track and approximately 100 feet on the south side of the track.

"These five instances constitute the only case where the Central Pacific Co. has conveyed any part of the granted right of way situated upon and along its operated line of railroad."

The Central Pacific Railroad under the acts of Congress of 1862 and 1864 was granted rights of way on the public domain in the State of Nevada for a width of 400 feet. In addition thereto it was granted odd-numbered sections for 20 miles on each side of said right of way.

At that time there were practically no settlements along such right of way, but it was natural that towns would spring up along the railroad.

The Central Pacific Railroad Co., directly through certain subsidiary companies and associations mentioned in the act, laid out town sites at various places in the State of Nevada on its odd-numbered sections.

Some of these town sites as laid out embraced a part of the right of way, but in no case to exceed 100 feet.

After these town sites were laid out the town lots were sold and buildings erected thereon. In course of time these towns grew and extended beyond the odd-numbered sections and also continue to extend over the right of way to the same extent as on the odd-numbered sections.

This was done with the knowledge and consent of the railroad company. Later, by decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, it was determined that the railroad company had no authority to dispose of town lots upon any portion of the right of way. Subsequent to this the property of the Central Pacific Railroad was leased by the Southern Pacific Railway Co.

The Southern Pacific Railway Co., without confirmation or authority from Congress, refused to recognize the right of the lot owners to occupy any portion of the right of way which had been sold or upon which buildings had been constructed with the permission of the Central Pacific Railroad.

The committee adopted the following statement as their view on this particular substitute and the action of the said railroad company as it relates to transfers of rights of way under the various acts of Congress, as follows:

"That this act is expressly intended to and does cover only the towns or cities named in section 1 hereof within the State of Nevada, and is not intended as and for a precedent for any other illegal and attempted conveyance of either or any of said companies named in this act, and by reason of the further fact that said named five towns or cities are located on odd-numbered sections, which sections, under the act of Congress of July 1, 1862, and acts of Congress amendatory thereof or supplemental thereto, were of the land granted to said companies with the right-of-way exception. That for all other violations of said right-of-way grants the title of said companies, and each and all of them, to said right of way granted by said acts of Congress ought to be, and should be, forfeited to the United States for a plain violation of the expressed provisions of said grant."

It has attained usurped authority and right of possession to all of the right of way, including all lots that were sold upon the same, thereby casting a cloud upon the title of such lot owners, which destroys the market value of such property.

Under similar circumstances other railroads have instituted suits to eject the occupants on portions of their rights of way, and similar action is feared with regard to occupants on portions of the right of way within the five towns named.

There is no one involved in the legislation of this bill except the railroad company, the Government, and owners of the lots set forth in said substitute, also the towns and citizens thereof, so far as the rights of streets, roads, and alleys are involved and concerned in said five named towns.

By reason of the threats of the railroad company to institute ejectment proceedings an emergency exists—the residents of said towns can escape irreparable damage only through the passage of this substitute.

The committee in considering this substitute realizes the emergency and the rights of citizens of these five towns, who are lot owners within this right of way, as well as that of the towns, as it relates to streets, roads, and alleys, and, so far as the committee is concerned, it does not intend, nor is this substitute intended, as a precedent for any legislation by it on behalf of either or any of the railroad companies named in the substitute or otherwise in confirmance or validation of unlawful and illegal transfers or attempted transfers of land within the limits of the right of way under the grants of Congress except as in this bill specially provided.

Your committee have taken into consideration in reporting this substitute the peculiar conditions surrounding the lot owners and the rights of streets, alleys, and roads within the five towns or cities named within the State of Nevada named in the substitute, and by reason of and on account of such conditions and not otherwise, have recommended and do recommend that the substitute do pass.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carr, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the bill (S. 4522) to amend an act entitled "An act to regulate commerce," approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission, approved June 29, 1906.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment joint resolutions of the following titles:

H. J. Res. 437. Joint resolution authorizing and directing the Sergeant at Arms to refund to Members of the House of Representatives amounts of money deducted from their salaries; and

H. J. Res. 438. Joint resolution concerning estimates and expenditures for the Reclamation Service.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 6854. An act to incorporate the Boy Scouts of America, and for other purposes.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. ASHBROOK, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 8811. An act to execute the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of Sarah B. Hatch, widow of Davis W. Hatch;

H. R. 21546. An act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in appropriations for the fiscal year 1915 and for prior years, and for other purposes;

H. J. Res. 437. Joint resolution authorizing and directing the Sergeant at Arms to refund to Members of the House of Representatives amounts of money deducted from their salaries; and

H. J. Res. 438. Joint resolution concerning estimates and expenditures for the Reclamation Service.

The Speaker announced his signature to enrolled bill of the following title:

S. 2789. An act to award the medal of honor to Maj. John O. Skinner, United States Army, retired.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED TO THE PRESIDENT FOR HIS APPROVAL.

Mr. ASHBROOK, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that this day they had presented to the President of the United States for his approval the following bills:

H. R. 21218. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 20643. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors;

H. R. 21201. An act making appropriations for the Diplomatic and Consular Service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916;

H. R. 20347. An act making appropriations for the support of the Army for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916;

H. R. 20189. An act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes;

H. R. 19909. An act making appropriations for the legislative, executive, and judicial expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes;

H. R. 8811. An act to execute the findings of the Court of Claims in the case of Sarah B. Hatch, widow of Davis W. Hatch;

H. R. 21089. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Regular Army and Navy, and certain soldiers and sailors of wars other than the Civil War, and to widows of such soldiers and sailors; and

H. R. 9899. An act to authorize the laying out and opening of public roads on the Winnebago, Omaha, Ponca, and Santee Sioux Indian Reservations in Nebraska and on Indian reservations in Montana.

MALAMBO FIRE CLAIMS.

Mr. VAUGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S. 4254) to enable the Secretary of War to pay the amount awarded to the Malambo fire claimants by the joint commission under article 6 of the treaty of November 18, 1903, between the United States and Panama.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the sum of $53,800 be, and the same is hereby, appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to enable the Secretary of War to pay to the Government of Panama for the use and benefit of the so-called "Malambo fire claimants" the reduced allowances which were recommended to be paid to the said claimants by the joint commission under article 6 of the treaty of November 18, 1903, between the United States and Panama, as set forth on page 22 of Senate Document No. 148, Sixty-second Congress, second session, by way of compensation for losses suffered by said claimants in and by the fire which was occasioned in the Malambo ward of the city of Panama by the fumigation of houses for sanitary purposes, by order and under the direction of the Isthmian Canal Commission, on or about the 12th day of January, 1906, such payment having been recommended by the President, upon the recommendations of the Secretary of War and the Attorney General, in the special message which was sent by the President to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States on the 13th day of December, 1911 (printed in the aforesaid S. Doc. No. 148, 62d Cong. 2d sess.), in renewal of the recommendation contained in the President's special message of March 3, 1911, on the same subject.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MANN. I demand a second.

Mr. VAUGHAN. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. VAUGHAN. Mr. Speaker, the sixth article of our treaty with Panama reads as follows:

All damages caused to the owners of private lands or private property of any kind by reason of the grants contained in this treaty, or by reason of the operations of the United States, its agents, or employees, or by reason of the construction, maintenance, operation, sanitation, and protection of the said canal, or of the works of sanitation and protection herein provided for, shall be appraised and settled by a joint commission appointed by the Governments of the United States and the Republic of Panama, whose decisions as to such damages shall be final and whose awards as to such damages shall be paid solely by the United States.

On January 12, 1906, a house being fumigated by agents of our Government in conducting the work of sanitation in the city of Panama caught fire and was destroyed, with a number of other houses and considerable other property.

Some 45 claims for damages, aggregating $125,000, on account of the destruction of property caused by the fire were presented against our Government.

In accordance with our treaty with Panama, a joint commission was appointed to appraise and settle the damages.

The report of that commission, made on June 3, 1907, will be found on page 22 of Senate Document No. 148, Sixty-second Congress, second session, and on page 12 of Senate Document 858, Sixty-first Congress, third session. It says:

The joint commission, being unable to determine the origin and cause of the fire in the Malambo district of the city of Panama on the 12th day of January, 1906, is of the opinion the case should be compromised, and recommends the payment by the United States of the following damages.

The report names the claimants, designates the property and the damages done to it, and specifies the amount recommended by the commission to be paid to each claimant, aggregating $53,800; and it is accompanied by a report of the evidence before the commission, which will also be found in the documents to which I have referred.

As the joint commission did not make a decision but recommended a compromise, it is for Congress to determine whether it will carry out the recommendation and make an appropriation to effect the compromise. This bill proposes to do so.

I can not of course in the short time I have give the testimony in detail showing the cause of the fire, but a supplemental report on the bill does so; and any gentleman who will take the trouble to read the extracts from the evidence contained in that report will find ample proof that the fire was caused by our agents in conducting the work of fumigation.

The letter of Attorney General Wickersham to President Taft, found on pages 12–15, Senate Document No. 148, Sixty-second Congress, second session, shows that he had carefully read the evidence before the commission.

In that letter he says:

An examination of the testimony before the joint commission leaves little doubt that the fire was the result of the fumigation by the Government officers—

And so forth.

In another paragraph he says:

There is practically no doubt that the claimants lost their property and homes through the negligence of the agents of the Government fumigating their houses.

It may be said, it has been said, that our commissioners who heard the evidence would not make a finding to that effect, but said they "were unable to determine the origin and cause of the fire." I answer that they were sufficiently convinced of the justice of the claims and of the origin and cause of the fire to make them recommend the compromise for which this bill provides. Having read the evidence myself, I am unable to explain their statement that they were unable to determine the origin and cause of the fire, unless it be true, as Mr. Wickersham says in his letter, that it is evident from the proceedings before the commission that the hearing proceeded upon the theory that the liability of the Government was dependent upon the fire being caused by "the negligence of the employees of the Isthmian Canal Commission in carrying on the necessary work of fumigation," and that the commission was unable to determine whether such employees were negligent or not, although there was testimony indicating that they were.

Attorney General Wickersham recommended to President Taft that he urge upon Congress the propriety of making an appropriation to carry out the recommendation of the joint commission, and the President concurred in his recommendation.

The present Secretary of War, Mr. Garrison, in a letter to President Wilson of date February 21, 1914, says:

This matter has been considered by various administrative officers and the payment of the claims has met the approval of former Presidents Taft and Roosevelt and former Secretaries of War Wright, Dickinson, and Stimson.

In his letter of March 3, 1914, he says:

All those who have handled this case in the past feel that there is an equity which would be settled by the bills which are now before Congress, and from my study of the case I am inclined to agree in this opinion.

The Committee on Foreign Affairs referred this matter to a subcommittee, which examined into the matter thoroughly and reported in favor of the bill, and the committee so reported the bill to the House.

I wish to state to the House that from a careful examination of the evidence, as a member of the subcommittee to which the bill was referred, I have no doubt that the fire was caused by the work of fumigation conducted by the agents of our Government. Whether it was due to negligence of such agents or not is immaterial. If it be said that the law does not hold the Government liable for negligence of its agents—and I know the authorities are to that effect—it is also true that when destruction of property has been caused by negligence of officers, Congress has recognized the justice of making compensation, and has done so, though there was no legal liability on the part of the Government.

But in this case our treaty with Panama obligates us to pay all damages by reason of the operations of the United States, its agents or employees, or by reason of the works of sanitation provided for in the treaty.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I have been down to Panama a number of times. I went down there before our Government took hold to do anything, and have been down there several times since. The city of Panama is a very respectable-looking city at the present time, well paved, healthy, pretty well taken care of. It was a disreputable old hole when we went down there, filthy, muddy, not paved, unhealthy, disagreeable, stinking, and every move we make toward bettering the condition of the people they whine about and want us to pay for the privilege of benefiting them. We have a treaty, narrated by my friend from Texas [Mr. VAUGHAN], under which we assumed certain obligations. Nobody pretends that under the terms of that treaty we are under any obligation to pay these claims. The treaty provides that a commission shall make a finding, and if they find that we have to pay the money, then we pay it, but there never has been a finding by that commission or any of the other numerous commissions we have down there, that there was money due from us to any of the people there that we have not paid. In this case we were endeavoring to clean up Panama and get yellow fever out of it. They were fumigating in some of the houses. They have an open brazier or charcoal stove every few feet or every few inches down there. A fire started. The people whose places were burned insisted that our fumigators set it on fire through carelessness. I do not know whether they did or not, and the gentleman from Texas does not know, and if he did, it would not cut any figure here. The matter was left to the commission. They had the right to find that we were under obligation to pay for the fire, although our Attorney General said they did not have that right. I do not say that they had it, but they had the right to make the finding. The commission, after hearing all the evidence, could not make the finding that the fire was caused by our fumigators. These commissions of ours that are down in Panama are pretty well treated. They are wined and dined and they draw a good salary for staying there. Nearly all of their decisions are rather against the United States, but with all this they could not make a finding that we were liable, so they adopted the lazy man's trick. Finding no liability on the part of the Government they said they thought that we ought to pay half. If we owe anything, we owe $103,000—is not that the amount?

Mr. VAUGHAN. The claims were $125,000.

Mr. MANN. Yes; $125,000. The commission recommends the payment of $53,800.

Mr. VAUGHAN. In the way of a compromise.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no.

Mr. VAUGHAN. I beg the gentleman's pardon.

Mr. MANN. I beg the gentleman's pardon. They recommend it as a gratuity. They say that the case ought to be compromised. I understand that; but they recommend it as a gratuity. They have not been able to find any obligation against us to pay the claim. The commission recommended that we pay this amount of $53,800, and their report is:

The joint commission being unable to determine the origin and cause of the fire.

Well, the only obligation we have under any condition is when they can determine the origin and cause of the fire, and find if that caused it. Why, anybody that goes around the streets of Panama wonders that every house is not burned up every night. You see fire in a little pot everywhere, with children crawling around. I suppose they learn to keep away from them, because the children are naked and would get burned if they touched the pots. But there is no obligation on our part. Now, we have made a good many gratuities to Panama. I do not think we owe them any more than we owe them. Of course I understand that when we come to dealing with our foreign relations that the State Department—and I am not referring particularly to the present State Department, but every State Department—recommends the payment of any claim any foreigner makes against the United States. They have done it for years. This is the way they look at it. I read a letter from the attorney in this case, a very estimable gentleman, which he wrote to the Secretary to the President, and which closes like this. This shows the attitude which these people have toward Congress, toward these claims. It says:

I feel sure that if the matter were brought to the personal attention of the President he would, in view of the unusual circumstances of this case, inform Congress, as suggested by the Secretary of War, what it should do in behalf of the sufferers.

Why, we never charged him with getting as raw as that, that the claims attorney should ask the President to inform the Congress what it should do, and not recommend to us. That is their attitude. But the Secretary of War took quite a different position. He reported that in the absence of an award payment for these claims under a treaty provision could not be made, as such treaty provision requires specifically that claims may be made only on a definite award by the commission. That is Secretary Garrison. He found that there was no award and no liability on the part of our Government. Attorney General Wickersham made the same finding. There was no award and no liability on the part of our Government.

Now, Attorney General Wickersham, at the solicitation of attorneys, and so forth, thought that as a matter of justice we might make them a present of this money. I am satisfied that we did not burn the buildings. I am satisfied that we did not owe them a cent. We have remade their town. We have spent our money doing it. Now they want us not to pay a claim that is a legal claim, though they have a treaty with us, but they just want us to present them with this much money, of which the claimant probably will receive a modest proportion, and those who are and have been interested will receive a fair, at least, compensation.

I am unwilling to present gratuities just at present to the people in the United States. I can see no reason why we should give to people in Panama money which we would not give if the occurrence happened in the United States and American citizens were involved. We have done enough for them when we fulfill our obligations without making presents to them.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. VAUGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I shall take only a few minutes to reply to the gentleman from Illinois. I should like to inquire of the gentleman if he proposes to use any more of his time? I will close, I suppose, in one speech.

Mr. MANN. I had not thought that I would. Is the gentleman himself going to close now?

Mr. VAUGHAN. Yes, sir.

Mr. MANN. That is all right.

Mr. VAUGHAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Illinois seems to misunderstand the whole matter. I said in my opening statement that the joint commission had not made an award. If it had done so, there would have been no necessity for Congress to act in the matter. The award would have been ordered paid by the comptroller out of an appropriation made each year to pay for conducting our operations in Panama. But it is owing to the fact that the commission did not make any award, but recommended that these cases be compromised, that it is necessary for Congress to act in order to carry out the recommendation of the commission.

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] says that the commission recommended donations to the claimants in this case as mere gratuities. He is in error about that. The report of the commission will be found on page 22 of the Senate document to which I have referred. It says the commission is of the opinion that the case should be compromised, and recommends the payment of the following damages, and names one by one the claimants, and specifies the property that was injured or destroyed, and what particular injury was done to it, and names the amount it recommends to be paid to each particular claimant in compromise of his claim. Of course, if there had been an award, it could have been paid, but the question before Congress is whether or not we will make an appropriation for the purpose of carrying out the recommendation of the commission that the case be compromised.

The gentleman says we have cleaned up Panama and that the commission would not find that the fire was caused by our agents. I answer that our joint commission was sufficiently convinced that it was caused by our agents to make them make the recommendation that these cases be compromised.

If Congress refuses to carry out the recommendation of the commission, another joint commission will have to be appointed. Certainly the gentleman would not contend that the Government can not compromise claims against it arising under its treaties. It is true that our treaty does not obligate us to pay until there is an award, but it does bind us to appoint members of a joint commission and to pay the awards of such commission. Any joint commission will be composed of an equal number of members appointed by each Government. Of course we are not bound by treaty to pay until there is an award by a joint commission. If a joint commission had already made an award, it would be a violation of our treaty for the Government to refuse to pay. Can we escape responsibility just because our commissioners refuse to make an award? Though they refuse to make an award, they recommended that the claims be compromised and that certain specified amounts be paid. The question is, Shall these claims be compromised? Shall we carry out the recommendation of the joint commission? The gentleman from Illinois says he is satisfied that the agents of the Government did not set the house on fire. Read the evidence before the commission. You will find it in the Senate document to which I have referred. You will find ample proof, not only by interested but by disinterested witnesses, that the fire was caused by our officers engaged in the work of fumigation. I know there is some conflict in the testimony, but I undertake to say that every lawyer who has practiced any considerable time knows that in almost every case involving a hotly contested issue of fact somebody swears falsely. You will find false testimony in favor of and against the claimants in the record of the evidence before the commission. A witness for the Government swore that the fire originated in the house adjoining the house that was being fumigated. Yet the man who lived in that adjoining house, a member of the fire company, testified that he came to his own house after the fire alarm sounded, put on his fire clothes, and then joined in fighting the fire; that his house was not on fire when he came home, but the adjoining house that was being fumigated was on fire and burned down; that his house caught from it; and that after the fire a part of his house was remaining. I repeat that any man who will examine this evidence will find ample proof that the fire was caused by the fumigating agents of the Government. Whether they were negligent or not is immaterial. The treaty makes us responsible for damages for the destruction of property under such circumstances whether our agents were guilty of negligence or not.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired. The question is, Will the House suspend the rules and pass this bill?

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. MANN) there were—ayes 62, noes 52.

Mr. VAUGHAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for tellers.

Tellers were ordered, and the Speaker appointed Mr. VAUGHAN and Mr. JOHNSON of Washington.

The House again divided; and the tellers reported—ayes 76, noes 61.

Accordingly, two-thirds not voting in the affirmative, the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill was rejected.

ARMY OFFICERS WHO SERVED IN THE CIVIL WAR.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 6857) authorizing the retirement from active service, with increased rank, of officers now on the active list of the Army who served in the Civil War.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The bill was read, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That any officer now on the active list of the Army who served not less than 100 days in the Regular or Volunteer forces of the United States during the Civil War and prior to April 9, 1865, who was honorably discharged therefrom, and who shall since have served not less than 40 years as a commissioned officer of the Regular Army, shall, at his own request, be placed on the retired list of the Army, with the rank of major general.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, if the gentleman from Ohio desires to make a statement I will reserve my objection.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, it is after 2 o'clock in the morning, the Members worn and weary; I know it is no time to attempt to make very much of a speech.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ASHBROOK. I do.

Mr. MANN. I never saw the House in better condition to listen to a good speech.

Mr. ASHBROOK. The Members here appear to be in good humor, including the gentleman from Illinois, for which I am very thankful.

Mr. MANN. I am always in a good humor.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, this bill proposes to retire any officer of the Army who served 100 days or more in the Civil War and who has been a commissioned officer in the Army for more than 40 years.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, how many of these men are there?

Mr. ASHBROOK. I was about to say that there is at this time, of all that great army, but one man living who would be the beneficiary of this bill. That one is Col. John L. Clem, who is the only soldier of the Civil War now in the service.

Mr. MADDEN. Why does not the gentleman bring in a bill to retire the men who were officers in the Civil War who have been struggling along to make a livelihood in private life?

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, as I stated, there will be but one beneficiary of this bill, if it is enacted into law, as I trust it will be and believe it should be. That one was a boy who at the age of 10 ran away from home and, after frequent refusals, was accepted into an enlistment as a drummer boy in the Civil War. While in the service he received several wounds, and at the conclusion of the war he received an honorable discharge. In 1871, by Executive order, the President of the United States, Gen. Grant, commissioned this young soldier as a second lieutenant, and for 44 years he has been in active service. There is not a stain upon his record as a soldier or as a citizen. I want to say that, in my judgment, there is not living to-day a soldier of the Civil War who is better known if as well known or as much loved and admired by the soldiers of the Civil War and tens of thousands of people who enjoy his acquaintance as the drummer boy of Chickamauga.

Mr. HAMLIN. What rank has he now?

Mr. ASHBROOK. He will retire next August with the rank of a brigadier general. This bill proposes to retire him as a major general, which is one rank higher than that which he will receive on retirement under existing law.

Mr. HAMLIN. What increase in pay will that give him?

Mr. ASHBROOK. I believe $1,000, but I am not certain.

Mr. HAMLIN. A thousand dollars a year?

Mr. ASHBROOK. Yes.

Mr. HAMLIN. Is he a colonel now?

Mr. ASHBROOK. Yes.

Mr. HAMLIN. What pay does he now get?

Mr. ASHBROOK. My impression is that he receives $4,500.

Mr. HAMLIN. If this bill should pass, what pay would he draw when he retires?

Mr. ASHBROOK. When he retires he receives three-quarters pay——

Mr. HAMLIN. Of this advanced rank?

Mr. ASHBROOK. Yes.

Mr. HAMLIN. Does the gentleman know what difference that would make in his pay?

Mr. ASHBROOK. Somewhere about $750.

Mr. MANN. The pay of a retired major general is $7,500.

Mr. ASHBROOK. His present pay is $4,500. He would retire, as all Army officers do, with one rank higher than he had at the retirement. This would increase his rank just one grade.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure that no more gracious thing could be done in the concluding hours of the Sixty-third Congress than to recognize the long and honorable service of this distinguished soldier. I think I do not overstate the truth when I say that there has never been a complaint or a charge of any kind against him as an officer during all the 45 years which he has served, and he has been located in many different parts of the United States, where thousands of admiring friends would feel highly pleased to learn the "drummer boy" retires from this long service as a major general.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I would like to ask the gentleman a question. What is this officer doing now?

Mr. ASHBROOK. He is in the War Department, here in the city; in the Quartermaster's Department.

Mr. MANN. How long has he been in the Quartermaster's Department?

Mr. ASHBROOK. I think he has been in the city five or six years.

Mr. MANN. I do not mean how long has he been in Washington, but how long has he been in the Quartermaster's Department?

Mr. ASHBROOK. I understand for a number of years.

Mr. MANN. He is a colonel?

Mr. ASHBROOK. Yes.

Mr. MANN. We have already passed a law that when retired he shall be retired one grade above the rank that he now holds.

Mr. ASHBROOK. That was not done for his benefit.

Mr. MANN. It was passed for the benefit of all the officers?

Mr. ASHBROOK. Yes.

Mr. MANN. He is one of them, is he not?

Mr. ASHBROOK. Yes.

Mr. MANN. It was not a bill like this that did not cover anybody else, but he gets the benefit of it. He is already entitled to be retired at one grade above the rank which he now holds.

Mr. ASHBROOK. That applies to all officers in the service.

Mr. MANN. Yes; a number of distinguished officers in the Army, some of whom are now on the retired list. Does the gentleman think there is any reason why we should give Col. Clem two advances and then give some other officer who really did great service only one?

Mr. ASHBROOK. I do not think it is fair to say that we give Col. Clem two advances. This bill would only give him one.

Mr. MANN. I did not say two advances over what any other officer received. I think Col. Clem is in great luck to be retired as a brigadier general when he is a colonel. He retires as a brigadier general and has the nerve to ask us to retire him as a major general. If he had as much nerve when he went into the Army, I do not wonder——

Mr. ASHBROOK. He had the nerve to run away from home and enlist in the war when 10 years old.

Mr. MANN. I think he had; I admire him for going in, and I have no reflections to pass upon Col. Clem.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ASHBROOK. Yes.

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. Does the gentleman know that on the roll of first lieutenants on the retired list I find one that entered the Army in 1854 and was retired for wounds received in the service as a first lieutenant. Another one who entered the Army in 1862 was retired as a first lieutenant; another entered in 1861 and was mustered out and retired as a first lieutenant—lost his left arm from wounds in line of duty. Another entered the Army in 1861, and I could go on and give you a long list of lieutenants retired, a great many captains and majors, and men retired for wounds received in the service at that time, and no bill is brought to take care of those men who got on the retired list because of wounds in the service.

It seems to me that to bring in a special bill for a man who has the opportunity to serve and keep healthy for 40 years and then be retired at the end of that time with an advanced rank is one of those bills that interferes with the regular promotion of the Army. It makes me think of Hamlet's remark, "Oh, my offense is rank; it smelleth up to Heaven."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MANN. I demand a second, although I am willing to take the vote now. We have discussed the matter sufficiently, I think.

Mr. ASHBROOK. Mr. Speaker, I am quite willing to take the vote.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken; and on a division (demanded by Mr. ASHBROOK) there were—ayes 62, noes 64.

So, two-thirds not having voted in favor thereof, the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill was rejected.

DANIEL THEW WRIGHT.

Mr. BEALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I call up a report from the Committee on the Judiciary on House resolution 446, directing the Committee on the Judiciary to inquire and report whether the action of this House is necessary concerning the alleged official misconduct of Daniel Thew Wright, and I move the adoption of the report (No. 1191) and ask that the Clerk report the finding of the subcommittee.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the conclusions of the committee.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on the Judiciary be discharged from further consideration of and action under House resolution 446.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

RESERVATION OF SCHOOL LANDS IN ALASKA.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 7515) to reserve lands to the Territory of Alaska for educational uses, and for other purposes, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That when the public lands of the Territory of Alaska are surveyed, under direction of the Government of the United States, sections Nos. 16 and 36 in each township in said Territory shall be, and the same are hereby, reserved from sale or settlement for the support of common schools in the Territory of Alaska; and section 33 in each township in the Tanana Valley between parallels 64 and 65 north latitude and between the one hundred and forty-fifth and the one hundred and fifty-second degrees of west longitude (meridian of Greenwich) shall be, and the same is hereby, reserved from sale or settlement for the support of a Territorial agricultural college and school of mines when established by the Legislature of Alaska upon the tract granted in section 2 of this act: Provided, That where settlement with a view to homestead entry has been made upon any part of the sections reserved hereby before the survey thereof in the field, or where the same may have been sold or otherwise appropriated by or under the authority of any act of Congress, or are wanting or fractional in quantity, other lands may be designated and reserved in lieu thereof in the manner provided by the act of Congress of February 28, 1891 (26 Stats., p. 791): Provided further, That the Territory may, by general law, provide for leasing said land in area not to exceed 1 section to any one person, association, or corporation for not longer than 10 years at any one time: And provided further, That if any of said sections, or any part thereof, shall be of known mineral character at the date of acceptance of survey thereof the reservation herein made shall not be effective or applicable, but the entire proceeds or income derived by the United States from such sections 16 and 36 and such section 33 in each township in the Tanana Valley area hereinbefore described, and the minerals therein, together with the entire proceeds or income derived from said reserved lands, are hereby appropriated and set apart as separate and permanent funds in the Territorial treasury, to be invested and the income from which shall be expended only for the exclusive use and benefit of the public schools of Alaska or of the agricultural college and school of mines, respectively, in such manner as the Legislature of Alaska may by law direct.

SEC. 2. That section No. 6, in township No. 1 south of the Fairbanks base line and range No. 1 west of the Fairbanks meridian; section No. 31, in township No. 1 north of the Fairbanks base line and range No. 1 west of the Fairbanks meridian; section No. 1, in township No. 1 south of the Fairbanks base line and range No. 2 west of the Fairbanks meridian; and section No. 36, in township No. 1 north of the Fairbanks base line and range No. 2 west of the Fairbanks meridian, be, and the same are hereby, granted to the Territory of Alaska, but with the express condition that they shall be forever reserved and dedicated to use as a site for an agricultural college and school of mines: Provided, That nothing in this act shall be held to interfere with or destroy any legal claim of any person or corporation to any part of said lands under the homestead or other law for the disposal of the public lands acquired prior to the approval of this act: Provided further, That so much of the said land as is now used by the Government of the United States as an agricultural experiment station may continue to be used for such purpose until abandoned for that use by an order of the President of the United States or by act of Congress.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FALCONER. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I would like the gentleman to explain the features applying to the agricultural college and school of mines.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Speaker, this bill is a bill reserving to the public schools of Alaska sections 16 and 36 in every township in the Territory, as they shall be hereafter surveyed, just as has been done in every Territory since Ohio was organized in 1800. There is nothing more in that part of the bill than is usual except this: The bill provides that if sections 16 or 36 as reserved shall be found thereafter to contain mineral the land shall not go to the Territory, but the proceeds of the land shall go to the Territory.

As to the matter of the location of the agricultural college and school of mines the bill provides for the location of the agricultural college and school of mines upon the Government experiment station in the Tanana Valley. The United States owns 1,400 acres at Fairbanks for agricultural experimental purposes. This bill in that respect has been approved by the Secretary of Agriculture in a letter written to the Committee on Public Lands in the House, and in addition to that he wrote a letter to the Committee on Public Lands in the Senate distinctly approving the use of that agricultural experiment station for the location of the agricultural college and school of mines. The Secretary of the Interior also approved the bill in all respects before both of these committees. The bill has been pending before the committee for more than a year. It has been favorably reported—unanimously reported by the Committee on Public Lands in both House and Senate. In the House it has been reported favorably twice, because the House bill and the Senate bill are identical. First, the House Committee on Public Lands reported the House bill unanimously and favorably. The Senate bill was then passed and came over to the committee, and it has reported that bill unanimously and favorably.

Some question was raised that the Congress ought not to locate this agricultural college and school of mines, but ought to leave it to the legislature in Alaska. The legislature would have no authority to locate the agricultural college and school of mines upon this land, because it is a United States reservation and is exclusively under the control and jurisdiction of Congress. The legislature would have no authority to locate an agricultural college and school of mines or any other public institution upon that land. There is no privately owned land in the Territory of Alaska upon which the Legislature of Alaska could locate an agricultural college or school of mines, so that we are obliged to turn to the Congress, if we are to get an agricultural college and school of mines located there under any circumstances.

Now, assuming that the legislature of the Territory ought to be consulted, I have done that, and I have here a telegram signed by the governor of Alaska and by 19 out of a possible 24 members of the legislature, approving the location of this agricultural college and school of mines upon this identical tract of land. And for the benefit of the gentleman from Washington I will read it. It is as follows:

JUNEAU, ALASKA, February 27, 1915.

JAMES WICKERSHAM,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.:

We strongly favor passage by House of Representatives of Senate bill 7515, reserving sections 16 and 36 in surveyed townships of Alaska for support of common schools and location of agricultural college and school of mines and Government experiment farm at Fairbanks.

Strong, governor; Frank A. Aldrich; O. P. Gaustad; O. P. Hubbard; Dan Sutherland; J. M. Tanner; W. M. Britt; W. T. Burns; N. A. Coombs; E. B. Collins; C. M. Day; Jas. P. Daly; Dan Driscoll; W. W. Getchell; John G. Heid; T. H. Holland; John Noon; A. G. Shoup; C. K. Snow; T. B. Tansy, members Alaska Legislature.

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. WICKERSHAM. I will be glad to answer all questions that I can.

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Speaker, I recall that this bill was up a week or 10 days ago and objection was made to it. This is a case where, in the great Territory of Alaska, there are 35,000 people, and it is now proposed to establish an institution that will confront the taxpayers of Alaska for the next million years, more or less. There is a question involved worthy of the consideration of this House in this matter of educational institutions. Does the Congress of the United States at this time wish to establish an agricultural college at one place, and possibly 5, 10, or 20 years later, a university in another place? Many States have an agricultural college in one corner of the State and a university in another, and have experienced a log-rolling proposition for the maintenance of these institutions. I submit to the gentleman that if he wishes to cut out the establishment of an agricultural institution I will not object to the bill. Otherwise I will object to it.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Of course I do not intend to do that, and the gentleman can, of course, object.

Mr. FALCONER. Then I object.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alaska moves to suspend the rules and pass the bill. Is a second demanded?

Mr. FALCONER. I demand a second.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alaska asks unanimous consent that a second may be considered as ordered. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The gentleman from Alaska [Mr. WICKERSHAM] has 20 minutes and the gentleman from Washington [Mr. FALCONER] 20 minutes.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Speaker, I do not care to use any time.

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a word on this matter. I do think this is a very important proposition. I understand that a part of this land on which it is suggested to locate these educational institutions is owned in part by private parties. I may be mistaken about that.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. The gentleman is mistaken except this, that a portion of the land outside of the experiment station is taken by Mr. Blane.

Mr. FALCONER. Is there any of it taken?

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Blane's brother has about 20 acres of it.

Mr. FALCONER. And that is all that is in a private ownership?

Mr. WICKERSHAM. That is all that is owned in a private way.

Mr. FALCONER. It enhances the price of land to have an educational institution of this character placed in the midst of it. But as regards the establishment of an educational institution in Alaska for the purpose of a school of agriculture, I question the advisability of it. This Congress at some future time or the Legislature of Alaska may settle that question. I do not think that Congress to-day ought to settle it. As development is made it is important that the valleys of Alaska south of the Yukon should be opened up and the best agricultural lands in Alaska opened to access; but at the present time they are not, and there is no way of opening them up until the Government builds a railroad; and I believe that unless the Government railroad runs within a certain number of miles of this institution, as it is finally located, the institution may be poorly located.

Mr. FOSTER. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FALCONER. Yes.

Mr. FOSTER. If this agricultural college should be established there by the Federal Government, does it come in possession of all the rights that accrue to an agricultural college within the States?

Mr. FALCONER. Yes; that is, as I understand it.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. How can a Territory come in with all the rights of a State?

Mr. DAVENPORT. The Territory of Washington was organized then as a regular Territory, with all the jurisdiction of an organized Territory of the United States and not as a non-organized Territory, as Alaska is to-day, with a partial organization.

Mr. FALCONER. I do not recognize the distinction in that way as bearing upon this proposition.

Mr. DAVENPORT. Alaska has a full Territorial organization to-day.

Mr. FALCONER. Absolutely.

Mr. DAVENPORT. Is it not a fact that where you find a fully organized Territory the Federal Government might establish an institution where it could not do so in a Territory that was not fully organized as a Territory?

Mr. FALCONER. Yes; and I think the point raised is a point worth considering. I think the institution would be entitled to support, and would get from the United States Government an annual stipend to carry on the cost and advancement and the building up of that institution.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules.

Mr. MANN. Will the gentleman from Washington yield to me?

Mr. FALCONER. I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I think some one ought to explain the bill, because this is an entire innovation from anything that the Government has ever done before in the way of granting land. I do not say that it is not a proper innovation, and I do not think that a bill of this sort ought to pass the House without a statement of what it is. I would rather one of the other gentlemen who knows more about the bill than I would state it. Of course, I am not opposed to it. I shall vote for the bill, so far as that is concerned, although I have taken time. It is not exactly an emergency matter. There will be no money to come to the Territory of Alaska out of this bill for a long time to come which it can use for school purposes, because such money comes in from the leasing, and it can not sell anything. As the money comes in from the leasing of land, that is retained and only the interest on it is to be expended for school purposes.

In the first place, of course, you will have to lease the land, and you can not lease the lands up there at present for anything, practically, except the minerals. You can not lease those right away for any amount. You will not have any money at all come in very rapidly. Then when it comes in it must be invested, and it will be more than a day or a year before there will be any interest in sufficient amounts to furnish any large amount of school facilities. In the end it conserves the property. I suppose that is the theory of it. I am not complaining about that, but I think the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT], who largely prepared this, ought to make a clean-cut statement, so that the House will understand what to do.

I yield back my time.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT].

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, this bill as originally introduced made a grant of sections 16 and 36 and the other lands mentioned in the bill, and also established an agricultural college and school of mines. The committee were not willing to recommend that the House adopt any such bill, and all that this bill does is to make a reservation of sections 16 and 36 for the support of the common schools, and section 33 in certain portions of the Tanana Valley for the support of an agricultural college and school of mines.

Now, with reference to the question raised by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. FOSTER], as to whether, if this bill is passed, the agricultural college in Alaska will receive the same benefits that an agricultural college in the States would receive, I will say as to that question that this bill does not establish an agricultural college or school of mines; and whether or not such a college, if established, would be entitled to those benefits will depend upon the legislation now existing and not upon this bill in any particular. That is a question upon which I am not ready to venture any opinion. But if they have the benefits, they could establish an agricultural college in Alaska without this bill and get the benefits, if there are any, that would go to Alaska.

With reference to this reservation, it has been assumed throughout the various discussions of this bill that the reservation depended upon the agricultural college and school of mines being established upon the four sections which are granted for that purpose. The gentlemen who make that statement are in error. Whether an agricultural college is established upon these four sections or not, the reservation is made just the same by this bill. The reference to the agricultural college and school of mines is merely a declaration of the purpose of the reservation. But if an agricultural college shall not be established upon these four sections, if it shall be established elsewhere, when the time comes that Alaska becomes a State, or when a grant of land is made, there is no question but that the grant will be made of these sections 33 in the Tanana Valley, wherever that agricultural college may be established, whether it be upon these four sections or not. [Applause.]

Mr. FALCONER. Mr. Speaker, I think there is no question about where the agricultural college will be established, according to the telegram read by the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. WICKERSHAM]. I submit the proposition to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] and will yield him time to answer: If the legislature locates this educational institution on these four sections, or any other place in Alaska, will that educational institution get the benefit of the money from the Treasury of the United States, as is the rule in all States or Territories, to help support and build up the institution?

Mr. LENROOT. If they do, it will not be by virtue of any provision contained in this bill.

Mr. FALCONER. That is true. There are a lot of things that are not in this bill; but does not one follow the other?

Mr. LENROOT. Not at all; because if they do establish an agricultural college the question whether they will receive money or not will not be dependent upon this bill.

Mr. FALCONER. That is true.

Mr. FERRIS. Is there any reason why a Territory that is trying to get on its legs and get started should not have the benefit of a statute that helps all other similar schools?

Mr. FALCONER. No reason in the world except this proposition: I will ask the gentleman from Wisconsin, does Madison have the State's school of arts and sciences and its agricultural institution?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. FALCONER. Yes; and it is one of the greatest universities in the Central West. There are many men in this House who have served in State legislatures; and have they not often observed the fact that where there is an agricultural school in one part of the State and a school of arts and sciences in another part of the State there is a logrolling proposition on appropriations? For years in my State that question has been discussed. The officers of these institutions come before the legislature and before our finance committees for ever-increasing appropriations, and each frequently tries to outdo the other in getting appropriations. As a matter of economy Alaska ought to have all these institutions in one location; and I do not believe that now is the time to put an educational institution in the Territory of Alaska. I am in favor of developing Alaska, and am as friendly to it as any man in this House; but some men have the idea that a man who does not live in Alaska, even though the United States Government owns 99 per cent of that Territory and there are only 35,000 white people there, has no right to make any suggestion with regard to the Territory of Alaska.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FALCONER. Yes; I will yield to the gentleman.

Mr. JOHNSON of Washington. Does the gentleman think it would be right to establish all the schools in one place in a Territory one-quarter as large as the United States?

Mr. FALCONER. With 35,000 people in the Territory, one-quarter as big as the United States, they could not find a man in a hundred square miles at this time. We had better wait until we develop the rich country in Alaska, which is in the vicinity of but south of the Yukon River. Of course it is very desirable for Fairbanks to have an educational institution established there. If I lived at Fairbanks, I would want the school there, and if I lived at Cordova I would want it there, and if I lived at Seward I should want it there. But I would not establish it upon any site at the present time.

Mr. LENROOT. Let me ask the gentleman: When Washington was a Territory, and a reservation similar to this was made, as it was made, was it made on condition that all of the educational institutions should be centered in one place?

Mr. FALCONER. No; and if you were to eliminate the setting aside of the four sections as the location I would withdraw any objection.

Mr. HAMILL. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FALCONER. Yes.

Mr. HAMILL. Is the gentleman's objection due to the fact that when Alaska becomes a State there may be logrolling in the legislature?

Mr. FALCONER. I think it ought to be placed in Alaska long before it becomes a State.

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Mr. Speaker, I sent to the Census Office yesterday to get the number of children in Alaska, and I was informed that there was, at the time the census was taken in 1910, 16,907 persons there under 20 years of age.

Mr. MANN. White or Indian?

Mr. WICKERSHAM. Both; but the whites largely predominate. The Indians are disappearing and the whites are increasing. We send all of our children to the Seattle High School and Seattle University, and we send about 50 a year.

I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Oklahoma [Mr. FERRIS].

Mr. FERRIS. Mr. Chairman, the population of Alaska ought to grow some in the next few years. We have passed a railroad bill, appropriating a large sum of money, which would naturally induce people to go there.

Mr. MANN. While they are building it?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes; while they are building it, and I hope afterwards. We have passed a coal-leasing bill, and I hope that that will open up the mines, and there will be some increase of population on that account. Alaska now supports the schools by license taxes collected from merchants and saloons. There is less than 200 acres of deeded land up there; practically all of it is Government land, and no income from land taxes.

This bill withdraws two sections out of each township and allows the Territory to lease them for school purposes. It is not as liberal as we have been to some of the States. I do not know all of the merits and demerits of the contention between the gentleman from Washington and the gentleman from Alaska, and I do not care to enter into the controversy, as to where the agricultural school should be located, between the gentleman from Alaska and the gentleman from Washington. As a matter of fact this bill does not locate the school at all; it only reserves an area of land on which the Territorial government may locate its schools. It does not locate the agricultural or mechanical school there. The gentleman from Alaska lives at Fairbanks, and it is not inappropriate that he should want to locate it there. The main question is, Shall we reserve two sections of school land and let the Territory of Alaska lease it, so that they may support the schools?

Mr. HELM. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FERRIS. Yes.

Mr. HELM. Is the land in Alaska worth 1 cent or 2 cents or 10 cents an acre?

Mr. FERRIS. Oh, a good deal of it is mineral land.

Mr. HELM. If you are going to give it away, I want to know how much you are giving away.

Mr. FERRIS. The gentleman knows that some of this land has valuable coal on it; we give the coal to the Territory and let them lease it, and the revenues go to the Territory to support the schools. This bill is needed in Alaska. It will help them maintain their schools up there.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on suspending the rules and passing the bill.

The question was taken, and, two-thirds having voted in favor thereof, the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

PAY OF SESSION CLERKS FOR MONTH OF MARCH.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I present the following privileged resolution:

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 748 (H. Rept. 1501).

Resolved, That the Clerk of the House of Representatives be, and he is hereby, authorized and instructed to pay to the session clerks of the committees provided for in House resolution 667, for the entire month of March, 1915, their regular monthly compensation, out of the contingent fund of the House of Representatives.

The following committee amendments were read:

In line 3, strike out the words "clerks of committees provided for in House resolution 667" and insert "employees provided for in House resolutions 54, 55, and 667."

Mr. MANN. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Was this same resolution passed two years ago?

Mr. LLOYD. They were paid two years ago, it seems, without a resolution.

Mr. MANN. How could they be?

Mr. LLOYD. This provides for the payment of session clerks to the Expenditure Committees.

Mr. MANN. How could they be paid without a resolution?

Mr. LLOYD. The appropriation bill provides for the payment of the session clerks to the other committees for the month of March, but there is nowhere anything that construes the word "session" to include the month of March, and two years ago the Treasury Department paid them upon the theory that the word "session" as construed in the appropriation bill was the proper construction of the word. In order to avoid that question being raised again we are simply presenting this resolution.

Mr. MANN. Of course the appropriation bill specifies the length of the session?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. The short session running until the 1st of April and a long session until the 30th of June?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I did not know whether this was the beginning of a movement to pay the employees of the House an extra month's pay. That is what this does in this case. Certain employees are selected out, and they are given an extra month's pay. I do not doubt that they need it. I have no objection to their having it. I always thought it was a good custom, and I still think it is a good custom, where employees are brought to the House from all over the country and receive no mileage, that they may properly receive at the end of every session an extra month's pay, so that they can go home and wear good clothes when they go home.

Mr. LLOYD. This makes no provision for the employees of the House.

Mr. MANN. Oh no; only for a few of the employees and to those it gives an extra month's pay.

Mr. LLOYD. Under the regulations at the present time, as provided in the appropriation bill, the session clerks who receive $6 a day get paid for the month of March. The clerks to the Expenditures Committees who get $125 per month will not get paid for the month of March unless some such provision as this is made.

Mr. MANN. Yes; but the clerks who come in one place go in under the law which provides what their pay shall be, and they know. These clerks come in under a law which provided that their pay should cease on the 3d of March—yesterday.

I have no objection to their getting it. I regret that it is necessary to pay two of the clerks an extra month's pay and let the rest go home on the ties.

Mr. LLOYD. All the clerks to committees get their pay.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution as amended.

The resolution was agreed to.

LILLIE M. REESCH.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I also present the following privileged resolution which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows.

House resolution 722 (H. Rept. 1502).

Resolved, That there shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the House the sum of $600 to Lillie M. Reesch for extra services rendered in connection with the sending out of blanks, receiving, filing, and compiling expense statements filed by Members of Congress in accordance with H. R. 2958, "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act providing for publicity of contributions made for the purpose of influencing elections at which Representatives in Congress are elected,' and extending the same to candidates for nomination and election to the offices of Representative and Senator in the Congress of the United States and limiting the amount of campaign expenses."

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, this is similar to the resolution offered in the last Congress.

Mr. MANN. I do not quite understand it.

Mr. LLOYD. This resolution provides for pay to an individual who had charge of the accounting end of the corrupt practices act. She sends out all of the statements to individual Members with reference to the accounts that they must make, the four statements that are required to be made. This lady has kept those accounts and kept the accounts of all of the Members as they have been filed and of the committees that are required to make reports to the House.

Mr. MANN. May I ask the gentleman what is meant by "H. R. 2958"?

Mr. LLOYD. I do not understand.

Mr. MANN. The resolution says:

And compiling expense statements filed by Members of Congress in accordance with H. R. 2958.

Mr. LLOYD. It is in accordance with the law affecting campaign contributions.

Mr. MANN. I did not know what that was. I am sure they have not filed any accounts under any bill pending in the House. Does not this lady receive a regular salary?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. Does she not perform this work in office hours?

Mr. LLOYD. I do not know.

Mr. MANN. I am pretty sure she could not perform it in any other hours. What do we pay her the other salary for?

Mr. LLOYD. We paid her for the regular service she was required to perform before she was expected to perform this extra duty.

Mr. MANN. Perhaps she was not expected to perform any. I did not know. Do I understand the gentleman to go upon the theory that if we employ a clerk to perform some service and then really give the clerk something to do that we have to pay extra for that?

Mr. LLOYD. We pay for this extra service here exactly on the same theory that we pay the extra clerk detailed from the Pension Office to perform work for the Invalid Pensions Committee, and we pay extra services for the person who is detailed to perform work for the Pension Committee.

Mr. MANN. I do not know that I shall object. I would like a moment.

Mr. Speaker, in the good old days before the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] put the throttle on the throat of the Democratic side of the House, we used to pay quite often to different clerks money for extra services. Then came along the "reform" of the gentleman from Pennsylvania; that was all cut out in the air, in the talk, and in the resolution. It has gradually been going by the boards. Places have been filled again. We have just passed a resolution to pay certain employees one extra month's salary. Now, we have one employee—no doubt a very competent and capable one—who did not have much to do, could not have had much to do, because we propose to pay that employee $600 for doing something in office hours. That is $50 a month. You can employ a very competent person as a clerk for $50 a month. At the end of the next Congress, I suppose, we will pay them all extra compensation. We have raised the salaries of more clerks in the House for committees than had been raised for years before. We have added more clerks to the committees than had been provided in years before.

Let us be on the square about it. The truth is that when one party remains in power in the House for a series of years it gets in the habit of giving a little extra compensation now and then to some person who performs good service, and service that they are paid for. I remember the House at one time, without any suggestion from me, although I would have been glad to have made the suggestion, paid one of my clerks an extra compensation to the amount of $1,500, which was well earned. The House paid it because so many Members of the House had to deal with that clerk and found the clerk so competent. Maybe you will find a clerk after a while, if you keep on, that is worth paying $1,500 to. God knows, I wish you would.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I wish to say in reply to the statement that has just been made, that there have not been more clerks added to the rolls recently than were ever added before.

Mr. MANN. Committee clerks I said.

Mr. LLOYD. The truth about it is, that there have been less added during the last four years than in the same length of time during the last 20 years. We commenced our work on this Democratic side four years ago by cutting off a large number of employees. It was said at that time that they would be put back. They have not been put back up to this good hour. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. MANN. Some of them have been put back in their places and drawing the same rate of pay.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The question was taken and the resolution was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, and also for a reprint of the bills H. R. 21331 and H. R. 21332, the print having been exhausted.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will put one of these requests at a time. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent, Mr. QUEZON, Mr. ABERCROMBIE, Mr. KENNEDY of Connecticut, Mr. SMITH of Maryland, Mr. FITZHENRY, Mr. WILLIAMS, and Mr. CANTOR were granted leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD.

REPRINT OF BILLS.

Mr. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that 1,000 copies each of the bills H. R. 21331 and H. R. 21332, relating to the unemployed, be reprinted, the first print having been exhausted.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to have an extra 1,000 copies printed of each one of the bills he names.

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman knows, I suppose, that the Committee on Printing has authority to order additional copies? The document room will order additional copies of the bill.

Mr. FOWLER. I supposed the committee would get away pretty soon.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no; the Committee on Printing is here permanently. I do not think the House ought to order a reprint of bills. We never do that.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

FREDERICK H. LEMLY.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (S. 3561) to appoint Frederick H. Lemly a passed assistant paymaster on the active list of the United States Navy.

Be it enacted, etc., That the President be, and he is hereby, authorized, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to appoint Frederick H. Lemly a passed assistant paymaster on the active list of the Navy, to take the same rank and position on the list of passed assistant paymasters that he occupied on March 5, 1908 (the date upon which his resignation as a passed assistant paymaster in the Navy was accepted): Provided, That the said Frederick H. Lemly shall establish to the satisfaction of the Secretary of the Navy by the usual examinations required for promotion to the grade of passed assistant paymaster his fitness in all respects to perform the duties thereof: Provided further, That the said Frederick H. Lemly shall be carried as additional to the number of the grade to which he may be appointed or at any time thereafter promoted: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed as entitling said Frederick H. Lemly to any pay or allowances from the date of the acceptance of his resignation herein referred to and the date of the passage of this act.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I reserve the right to object, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. AUSTIN. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Lemly was an assistant paymaster in the Navy for five years, but owing to the serious illness of his father in North Carolina and an appeal to the son, he resigned his position, returned home to North Carolina, and cared for his father until his recovery. Then he made application to the Navy Department for reinstatement, and a bill was introduced by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. STEDMAN]. That bill has been recommended by the Paymaster General of the Navy, stating that there was a necessity for trained and experienced assistant paymasters in the Navy, and that this man's record was an efficient and satisfactory one, and that it was in the interests of the public service to have him rather than to have an untrained man from private life who had never had any experience in this line of business. The bill is recommended by the Secretary of the Navy, who makes an exception in this case for the reasons given in the letter or report of the Paymaster General of the Navy.

Now, I know this young man. He is worthy, he is capable, and has a faithful and efficient record in the Navy. This bill was first recommended in the Senate by the Senate Naval Committee in a unanimous report. It passed the Senate without a dissenting vote, came to the House, and is on the House Calendar with a unanimous report from the House Naval Committee. While I know it is the invariable rule of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to oppose bills of this character, the other day when this bill was on the Unanimous-Consent Calendar with similar bills the gentleman from Illinois stated that there was merit in this one. Now, I appeal to the Members of this House to restore this young man to the Navy—a young man who gave up his career in the Navy on account of an appeal from his invalid father. In doing this he did a noble act which should commend him to every Member of this House. We ought to give him an opportunity to reenter the service, especially when his former superior officers favor and urge it.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, it is always an unpleasant task to object to any of these bills which gentlemen desire to have passed. I have objected to personal bills for reinstatement in the Navy and in the Army for a good many years, rather effectively, always stating that I would have no objection to general legislation which authorized the Secretary of War or the Secretary of the Navy to reinstate a man in the service for active duty. The Army bill carries such a provision, I believe, and the Navy bill carries such a provision. Neither one would carry such a provision if it had not been for the objections which I have made to this rotten system of personal legislation in the House. It is true that provision in the naval bill does not cover this case, but if before the President has signed the Navy bill, which he will sign before noon to-morrow, we commence again the system of personal legislation and put these men back in the Navy and the Army who are not covered by the general legislation, we will be just as badly off in the end as we are now.

Mr. HENRY. Will the gentleman yield for a motion?

Mr. MANN. I will.

Mr. HENRY. This is a bill that was included in the Witherspoon rule that was referred to the Committee on Rules when we reported the resolution for repealing the plucking board, and this was one of the cases that was reported before the committee. And my recollection is that there was a unanimous report from the Committee on Naval Affairs, and we thought that we had covered this case as well as those others.

Mr. MANN. Then the gentleman was very careless.

Mr. HENRY. Relief was given in the other cases, and it seems that this is just as meritorious a case as those. I think it is a bill introduced by the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. STEDMAN].

Mr. MANN. The very distinguished gentleman from Texas, as chairman of the Committee on Rules, brought into the House a rule providing that there should be in order on the naval bill various provisions, and if the Committee on Rules had this case before them, and the gentleman from Texas drew a rule to cover this case and did cover it, then this is not necessary. If he did not cover it, why, then, the gentleman ought not to ask us to make up for his negligence.

Mr. HENRY. I did not mean to state that; but we simply came to the conclusion that this was a meritorious case, and I assumed that there would be a way to get it up here for consideration, like the other cases.

Mr. MANN. There was a way, and that was to put it in your rule.

Mr. HENRY. We did not report a special rule enumerating cases, but reported a general rule that authorized legislation repealing the plucking board; but it seems that this case does not fall under that.

Mr. MANN. But the general rule that the gentleman reported went away beyond the cases of the plucking board. The general rule had one provision in it for the reinstatement of officers who had been plucked. Then it repeated it in another place, and said all other officers——

Mr. HENRY. That was one phase of it. I have no interest in this and no objection to it, and I think it ought to pass.

Mr. MANN. That ought to settle it.

Mr. HENRY. I hope it will be passed.

Mr. LENROOT. The gentleman states that it was the intention of the Committee on Rules to report a general rule to cover all the special bills before the committee. I must respectfully dissent from that.

Mr. HENRY. Oh, no; I did not mean that at all. What I started out to say was that this was one of the cases that we thought meritorious, after hearing a number of the members of the Naval Affairs Committee, and I think it ought to be passed, if there is any way to do it.

Mr. MANN. There was a way to pass it, and there still is a way to pass it.

Mr. HENRY. Then let us pass it.

Mr. MANN. Let the Committee on Rules, which assumes to be the manager of the House——

Mr. HENRY. Oh, no.

Mr. MANN. Let the Committee on Rules bring in a rule to pass it. Goodness knows, they exercise that power often enough.

Mr. HENRY. Let us suspend the rules and pass it to-night.

Mr. MANN. I object.

Mr. AUSTIN. I move to suspend the rules and pass this bill.

The SPEAKER. Is this a private bill?

Mr. MANN. It is a private bill.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will not recognize the gentleman for that purpose.

JUDICIAL DISTRICTS IN ARKANSAS.

Mr. FLOYD of Arkansas. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the bill (H. R. 18086) to amend section 71 of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 4, 1911, and to concur in the Senate amendments.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Arkansas moves to concur in the Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were read.

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurring in the Senate amendments.

The Senate amendments were concurred in.

By unanimous consent the title of the bill was amended to conform to the text.

POST OFFICE, FORSYTH, GA.

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (H. R. 20604) to construct a public building for a post office at the city of Forsyth, Ga.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of a bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States be, and he is hereby, authorized, empowered, and directed to cause to be erected and constructed upon the lot now owned by the United States in the city of Forsyth, Ga., a public building such as he may determine is necessary and proper for the post office and such other public officials as may be located there, in said city of Forsyth, Ga., at a cost not to exceed the sum of $50,000, which sum is hereby appropriated out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MANN. What is the amount carried in this bill?

Mr. BARLETT. Fifty thousand dollars. That is the amount estimated by the department.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, this House is a place that brings men into close touch and friendship. As any of us go out of the House, I think probably the pleasantest memories we shall have relating to our service in the House will be those of the personal friendships between Members, which fortunately are not based on the divisions of party lines.

I remember when I first came to the House, I think it was in my first term, one night when we were considering the sundry civil bill John Allen, whom everybody ought to know or know of, the great humorist from Mississippi, who had had long service in the House, and was then a member of the Committee on Appropriations, offered an amendment which, as I recall it, provided for a fish hatchery at Tupelo. He was going out of the House. I had been around the House for a while, and I supposed, of course, that Uncle Joe, who was in charge of the appropriation bill, would make a point of order against it, it being subject to a point of order, and Uncle Joe had made points of order against the amendments offered by everybody else. The point of order was not made. Private John Allen was going out of Congress after a long service here. He had been succeeded by another most amiable and able gentleman, the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. CANDLER], of Tombigbee.

The House, as a compliment to him, when leaving the service here, made provision for Government work in his town; something that I suppose was needed, but was not authorized, and if offered by anybody else would have been met by a little point of order that would have knocked it out.

The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARTLETT] has served his country well in the House for 20 years. I served with him on the Committee on Elections when I first came into the House for a number of years; I served with him afterwards on the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce until I left that committee. Both of us have a temper, but I believe that no cross word has ever passed between Mr. BARTLETT and myself. I think that he is entitled to the good will of his country and the best wishes of the House. [Applause.] The only way we can properly express that is by having the Government make him a present. [Laughter.] To-night he has asked unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of a bill which has not yet been reported, and he has received that consent, as a mark of the appreciation of his good qualities and of his able services in the House. [Applause.]

Mr. BARTLETT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Illinois very much indeed. It is true that there is not much in this little bill. The House has authorized the purchase of a site, and the Secretary of the Treasury has estimated the amount that is contained in the bill. It is true that the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds have not reported it. I would not have asked for this consideration, but for the fact that I am about to retire from the House after a service of 20 years, and it is the only place in my district where a public building could be authorized where a bill has not passed and the amount been appropriated. [Laughter.]

I did not like to go out of the House and leave that work for some one else. But the fact that I have been permitted to have this bill considered is an occasion that brings to me a very pleasant recollection of my associations in this House. That recollection will go with me through the balance of my life. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] knows how close his relations have been with me personally, and the gentleman from Illinois knows that I appreciate what he has said in reference to it.

Now, just one word more. I apprehend that when I came to this House that I was as partisan, Bourbon a Democrat as ever was born in the South; I had never seen many white Republicans. [Laughter.] Only those who held Federal offices in my State. I did not have a very warm feeling for the Republicans, but I was not here long before I forgot in my personal associations that the Members of this House were Republicans or that they were Democrats. [Applause.]

I, of course, have many associates on this side, but I can recall that some of my closest personal associates, and for whom I had great friendship, were my Republican friends. Some have passed over the river and gone; many of you are here now. I shall leave my place in this House and return to private life, and I shall always carry with me to my dying day the recollections of my associations here. I have no regret in retiring to private life on my own volition; the only regret is on severing my relations with you. I shall always carry with me to my home in Georgia my recollection of association with you here, and it will abide with me during my life. I thank you. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time; was read the third time and passed.

CONSTRUCTION OF REVENUE CUTTERS.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to the present consideration of the bill (S. 6829) to provide for the construction of two revenue cutters.

The Clerk read the bill, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to construct one steam revenue cutter for service in the waters of California, at a cost not to exceed the sum of $350,000, and one steam revenue cutter for service as anchorage patrol boat in New York Harbor, at a cost not to exceed the sum of $110,000, such vessel to be specially constructed for ice breaking.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I object.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill.

The SPEAKER. Is a second demanded?

Mr. MANN. I demand a second.

Mr. ADAMSON. I ask unanimous consent that a second be considered as ordered.

Mr. MANN. I object.

The Speaker appointed as tellers Mr. ADAMSON and Mr. MANN.

The House divided; and the tellers reported that there were 71 ayes and 42 noes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I make the point that no quorum is present.

Mr. ADAMSON. Will the gentleman withhold that for a moment?

Mr. MANN. I can not withhold it; I am making it on the vote.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will not let the gentleman lose his rights if he wishes to withhold it for a moment.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I do not care to put the House in any confusion; I never throw a monkey wrench into the machinery. If anybody gets ahead of me, I always play fair. I had last year before this House two bills in the same position for four revenue cutters, a Senate bill and a House bill, on the calendar. In this open House, after consultation with the leaders, it was agreed in open House that if I would withdraw these two and pass the other two, then the gentlemen interested should have these two now at this session. The gentlemen to whom these were going, on the Pacific coast and in New York Harbor, accepted that understanding, although the gentleman from Illinois, Mr. MADDEN, and the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. COOPER, objected to that sort of a deal in very strong terms. They yielded, however, on the faith of the assurance. I stated here what the leaders had said, and other gentlemen here heard it, concurred in it, and acted upon it, and the gentlemen interested in these vessels accepted it in good faith. They are now demanding that the agreement be complied with, and they are threatening to throw a monkey wrench into the machinery if I yield to the gentleman's threat of no quorum.

I stated when the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] first proposed to make the point of no quorum that I should leave it to the leader on this side of the House and if he sees proper to suggest that I withdraw the bill for the present, I shall do so; but it is not fair, it is not right. We then needed the four cutters, and we got one for the Gulf and one for the New England coast, but the one on the Pacific coast and the one for New York Harbor, which are desperately needed, and were then, have not yet been granted. If we grant them now the money can not be appropriated for it until next winter, and it can not be expended until during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917. So there is no occasion for any one to get nervous about this. The plans can be made, the work can be started, and gentlemen ought to allow us to carry out the understanding that everybody present knows about at that time. There are many gentlemen here who will thoroughly recollect the circumstances. When gentlemen then asked me why I yielded to such pressure I told them that I had to in order to get through those two, the terms were put upon me, and the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. COOPER] stated that I ought not to legislate by contract; and I told him it was a holdup, it was not a contract; but I yielded to it, and I told the gentlemen here, out loud, what the situation was and they accepted and acquiesced in the situation, and I do insist to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] that under the circumstances he ought not to take advantage of it and proceed to obstruct and make the point of no quorum, because he thinks we are about to succeed in passing this bill. If he still insists, I shall leave it to the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] to decide whether the bill shall be withdrawn.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman is through, I would like to occupy the floor for a moment. There is no man in the House of whom I think more than I do of the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ADAMSON], but I will be very careful about making an agreement with him again that is not in writing, because probably I do not understand the agreement. The gentleman last year did not have four bills for revenue cutters.

Mr. ADAMSON. No; there were four in one bill.

Mr. MANN. He had one bill for four revenue cutters. He tried to pass it. He could not get unanimous consent to pass it and I do not think he dared try it in any other way.

Many other people objected to it. I objected to it on two or three occasions. I had had as much to do with legislation about the Revenue-Cutter Service as any man in this House, and the gentleman from Georgia desiring to pass his bill received the statement from me that as far as I was concerned I would be perfectly willing to vote for a bill that provided for two revenue cutters for this Congress. I did not say and did not intimate where the revenue cutters should be placed. I did not care. I thought the service was doing extremely well to get two cutters. That was last year, with a good deal more money in the Treasury than there is now. I, from my recollection of the agreement, thought it was a breach of the agreement for the gentleman to try to pass a bill now for two more revenue cutters. The gentleman from Georgia thinks it is a breach of the agreement for me to object to his trying to pass two now. In future I will want the agreements in writing, because I would not want anything that brings a misunderstanding between me and the gentleman from Georgia, and having my recollection of the agreement I stand for that. I do not blame the gentleman for standing for his recollection of it. I do not think we need the revenue cutters and I know the Treasury can not afford them.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, I will not say that the gentleman's suggestion about agreements in writing is gratuitous or offensive, because I think he misunderstood what I said. I never said I made any private agreement with the gentleman from Illinois at all. I did have some understanding with the leaders on the Democratic side of the House, in private, and gentlemen then on the floor asked me with whom I had made agreements. I never stated then nor now that I had made any private agreements with the gentleman from Illinois, but I did state and state now that on the floor of this House I stated what the condition was at that time. The RECORD will show it, will show what the stipulations were and the conditions placed upon me, and gentlemen on that side of the House objected then to my yielding to them. I said that the understanding then had was in open House, and the RECORD of May 12, 1914, pages 8471–8475, will show every word that was said then and there, and I presume the gentleman from Illinois, if he desires a contract in writing, will accept the record of it. It is true that he has had a great deal to do with revenue cutters. So have I. We went on the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce together. In 1907 we authorized the first batch of revenue cutters. At that time the revenue-cutter fleet was a shame. It was weak, it was dreadful, it was almost helpless and hopeless. In 1910, when the gentleman from Illinois was chairman of the committee, we authorized two. Last year under the holdup already described we authorized two. They are about to be finished this coming spring. So we have had four revenue cutters authorized since 1907, two of them constructed and two have been destroyed. Therefore there has been no net gain yet in the revenue-cutter fleet.

When these two are finished next spring there will be a net gain of two, to be offset by those that have deteriorated and gone out of use. The one we are trying to replace in New York Harbor is the old Manhattan, that is as old as the gentleman from Illinois or myself, substantially. It is unfit for use. [Laughter.] Well, if you are going to give it that signification, I will say "some uses." But the old Manhattan is rustier and more helpless than the gentleman from Illinois and myself. It is described in the report as unseaworthy and unfit for use, and desperately do we need that little revenue cutter there with an ice-breaking nose for use in winter. The one on the Pacific coast is desired for the 6,000-mile coast line, with a coal-carrying capacity and sailing radius sufficient to do the work, for which they have no other suitable vessel at this time. It is no use to talk about it being extravagant to have an increase of two vessels for the Revenue-Cutter Service from 1907 up to this time. It is a valuable service. It is useful in a great many particulars. In addition to fighting in war, it works with the customs in time of peace. It looks out for smugglers and pirates, it works with the seal fisheries, and for the last few years the best vessels have been detailed to patrol the ice regions of the ocean. They absolutely need these ships. They needed them last year and they need them worse now. I do hope the gentleman from Illinois, with a better understanding of what I said and what he understood me to say about his private contract with me, and understanding the necessity for these ships, will refrain from insisting on his point of no quorum. If this House, after hearing the brief argument, agrees with him that these ships are not necessary, I am perfectly willing that this House shall vote them down. On the contrary, if they agree with me that they are necessary, the gentleman from Illinois ought to be willing that they vote him down and give us the ships. I do hope the gentleman will refrain from making his point of no quorum.

Mr. MANN. I made the point of no quorum.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. If the gentleman from Illinois will suspend his motion for a minute, the gentleman from Alabama will be recognized.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. MANN. Not to receive another lecture.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Well, I am sure the gentleman is not accustomed to receiving lectures from me.

Mr. MANN. Well, I do not know.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I want to say, Mr. Speaker, to both sides of the House when we are not in partisan debate I am sure that I can class as my friends and associates those on both sides who are ready to help carry on public business. The situation is such that two appropriation bills may fail. If they do go down, I hope the House will be prepared to pass the resolution extending the appropriations of last year in order to try to avoid an extra session of Congress.

Now, it is apparent to everybody at this time of night that we can not do business without a quorum, and we can not get a quorum at this time of morning. If we attempted to do it, it would probably take up until 8 or 9 o'clock, and I hope no business will come up before 9 o'clock that can not be passed by unanimous consent, unless it will be one of the appropriation bills. We will have to send for a quorum if one is demanded.

I will ask the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. ADAMSON] to withdraw his bill.

Mr. ADAMSON. I will withdraw it temporarily.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman yield? I should like to inquire what body has charge of the papers of the Indian appropriation bill and the Post Office appropriation bill?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that the House was entitled to the papers in the Indian appropriation bill, but I understand, through mistake, the clerk of the committee delivered them to the Senate.

Mr. MANN. Or the Clerk of the House; I am not sure which. If the Senate has them, and has the bill under consideration, of course we can not get them.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. And it is never likely to come over here.

Mr. STAFFORD. Can the gentleman inform the House as to the status of the Post Office papers? I have been informed, though not authoritatively, that those papers were in the Senate instead of the House.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The papers were coming to the House, but the Senate was entitled to the Post Office papers. They have those as a matter of right. We were entitled to the papers in the Indian appropriation bill.

Mr. MANN. Where are the papers of the Post Office bill?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not know where they are.

Mr. STAFFORD. The gentleman from Alabama says the Senate was entitled to the papers of the Post Office appropriation bill.

Mr. MANN. That does not count in the loose system we are running under. I was told by one of the conferees of the House that the House conferees had possession of the papers.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman from Illinois that I expected the papers to come this way myself.

Mr. CARLIN. I can inform the gentleman that I just left the Senate, and they asked me to say that they will be here with the papers in 10 minutes.

Mr. MANN. Who would be here with the papers?

Mr. CARLIN. The House conferees.

Mr. MANN. The House conferees said this?

Mr. CARLIN. Yes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the gentleman from Georgia will withdraw his bill, I hope the gentleman from Illinois will withdraw his point of order.

Mr. ADAMSON. I will withdraw the bill temporarily.

Mr. MANN. Then I will withdraw the point of order temporarily. The gentleman from Georgia might as well withdraw it permanently. We have reached that stage in the proceedings where business can only be transacted by unanimous consent. The gentleman might as well understand that as not, and the only purpose for sitting in session is to take care of the appropriation bills. It is now 4 o'clock on Thursday morning.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The gentleman is mistaken. It is 3 minutes after 4 o'clock. [Laughter.]

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman objects to being lectured, and yet he seems to desire to lecture people.

Mr. MANN. I am taking another lecture now with good will.

Mr. ADAMSON. I will make this announcement, that I will not undertake to call up the bill again when it is apparent that the gentleman from Illinois can hold me up with a point of no quorum. And his action to-night reminds me, Mr. Speaker——

Mr. MANN. I will make the point of no quorum. I am not going to be lectured.

Mr. ADAMSON. I withdraw the proposition.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Georgia withdraws the bill, and the gentleman from Illinois withdraws the point of order.

BOY SCOUTS OF AMERICA.

Mr. FITZHENRY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 6854) to incorporate the Boy Scouts of America, and for other purposes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, pending the gentleman's request——

Mr. MANN. I do not think we ought to have any more requests of this nature now.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I do not intend to make any request in reference to the gentleman's bill.

Mr. MANN. We are going to be in session until 12 o'clock. There are some gentlemen here whom I think it would vastly improve to give them an opportunity to take a nap.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I understand that the Post Office appropriation bill will be here shortly.

Mr. CARLIN. It will be here in a few minutes.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. They say that smoking has a very pacifying effect on the human system. I was going to ask unanimous consent, if the ladies in the galleries will consent, that we may smoke until 7 o'clock.

Mr. MANN. No; I object. I do not propose to get a headache from breathing other gentlemen's smoke.

Mr. HENRY. We might smoke the gentleman out. [Laughter.]

Mr. PARKER of New Jersey. I desire the attention of the gentleman from Alabama. Will the gentleman permit me to submit a request that we take a recess for 20 minutes

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey desires to interrogate the gentleman from Alabama.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that we take a recess for 15 minutes.

The SPEAKER. Did the gentleman from Illinois have a point of order pending, or did he withdraw it?

Mr. MANN. I withdrew it.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, before we take a recess, there is a suggestion to which I think the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] will not object. There was a little bill that the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GOEKE] had passed, which has come back with Senate amendments. I should like to move to concur in those amendments.

Mr. MANN. I have no objection.

Mr. ADAMSON. The bill is on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. What is the number of the bill?

Mr. ADAMSON. I do not know the number of the bill. We can take a recess while it is being looked up.

Mr. FITZHENRY. Mr. Speaker, have I the floor?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman was recognized to present a request for unanimous consent.

Mr. FITZHENRY. Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 6854 and pass it. This bill is identical with the bill H. R. 19967 to incorporate the Boy Scouts of America.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read the title of the bill (S. 6854) to incorporate the Boy Scouts of America, and for other purposes.

Mr. MANN. I object.

Mr. FITZHENRY. This bill is on the Speaker's table, and a similar House bill has been reported.

Mr. MANN. When was the House bill reported?

Mr. FITZHENRY. The House bill was reported on February 3.

Mr. MANN. Then I will withdraw the objection. I thought it was just reported.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The bill was read.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I wish to ask the gentleman in charge of the bill if there is any appropriation authorized anywhere in it?

Mr. FITZHENRY. There is not.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, I should like to ask why this bill is here? I should like to ask why these organizations do not incorporate in the various States?

Mr. FITZHENRY. Mr. Speaker, this bill is here because a large number of the people of this country wanted it to be here, and through their representatives they succeeded in having the bill introduced in both Houses of Congress. The bill follows almost literally the charter of the Red Cross. The Boy Scouts of America is an organization that is well known. Everybody is familiar with the splendid work its members are doing, the wonderful influence that they have upon the boys of this country; and the Judiciary Committee, in considering this bill, felt that it was doing the youth and young manhood of this country a great service by recommending the passage of the bill.

It is true the organization might be incorporated under the incorporation laws of almost any State. It might have been incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia; but the mere fact that the Congress of the United States has recognized this great organization by the passage of a special act, even though no additional power is given to it, over what it would have under the incorporation laws of the District or of one of the States of this country, will be a great service to the boys of America, by increasing the usefulness of the organization. As I understand it, these are the reasons why the bill is here.

Mr. GALLIVAN. Mr. Speaker, I have not been satisfied by anything that the gentleman has said that all these organizations can not be incorporated in the various States, and unless a little better reason is assigned I shall have to object.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that we take a recess for 15 minutes.

Mr. GALLIVAN. I object to the consideration of that bill.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] asks unanimous consent to take a recess for 15 minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 18 minutes a. m., Thursday, March 4, 1915) the House took a recess until 4 o'clock and 33 minutes a. m.

SENATE.

THURSDAY, March 4, 1915.

The Senate met at 11 o'clock and 5 minutes a. m.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we come before Thee at this closing session of this Congress with a sense of our infinite debt of gratitude to Thee. We thank Thee for the broad foundation of Christian truth upon which we are building our national life. We thank Thee for the high ideals that cluster about our flag. We bless Thee for the noble patriotism and devotion of all the people. We acknowledge Thy goodness to us in the gift of our land, which has brought to us its infinite treasure and resource. But above all things we bless Thee for the sense that Thou art guiding us as a Nation and fulfilling through us a divine purpose in the great brotherhood of the nations of the earth. Lead Thou us on to the accomplishment of the divine will and purpose. We ask for Christ's sake. Amen.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the Journal of the proceedings of the preceding session.

Mr. LODGE. I ask that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with.

Mr. STONE. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection is made, and the Journal will be read.

The Secretary proceeded to read the Journal of the legislative day of Friday, February 19, 1915.

Mr. MYERS. Mr. President, I desire to present a conference report on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon Senate joint resolution 74.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator can not interfere with the reading of the Journal.

Mr. MYERS. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the Journal be dispensed with.

Mr. GALLINGER. I object.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The reading of the Journal will be resumed.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the Journal.

Mr. MYERS. I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the Journal may be dispensed with.

Mr. PENROSE. I object, Mr. President.

The Secretary resumed the reading of the Journal, and after having read for some time,

Mr. STONE. Let me say to the Senator from New Hampshire and others that the chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs states that they have finally arranged the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill, and the reading of the Journal may now be dispensed with.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent that the further reading of the Journal may be dispensed with.

There being no objection, the further reading of the Journal was dispensed with, and it was approved.

INDIAN APPROPRIATIONS—CONFERENCE REPORT.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, out of order I ask unanimous consent to present a conference report upon the disagreeing votes of the two Houses upon the bill (H. R. 20150) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

In presenting this report I will simply state that it is the same as the report which was before the Senate yesterday save and except that a different arrangement or agreement has been made with reference to amendment numbered 20 and amendment numbered 120. I ask that amendments 20 and 120 be read. They constitute the only changes in the report as heretofore submitted.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the amendments.

The Secretary read as follows:

Amendment numbered 20: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 20, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed insert:

"There is hereby authorized to be continued during the Sixty-fourth Congress the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs, with powers and duties as provided in the Indian appropriation act of June 30, 1913 (38 Stat. L., p. 81) and the unexpended amount therein appropriated for the expense of said commission is hereby reappropriated and made available for the purposes therein authorized. Said commission shall make their findings, conclusions, and recommendations to the Sixty-fourth Congress: Provided, That when any vacancy shall occur upon said joint commission by reason of the expiration of the term of office of any Member of the House of Representatives upon said joint commission, or of any Senator upon said joint commission, or from any other cause, Hon. CHAMP CLARK, Member of Congress elect from the State of Missouri, if the vacancy occurs with reference to a Member of the House of Representatives, and by the President of the Senate if the vacancy occurs with reference to a Senator."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Mr. President, I wish to interrupt the reading at that point to inquire of the chairman of the conference committee whether the language incorporated there is identical with the language of the bill regarding that same provision as it was reported from the Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate?

Mr. ASHURST. It is identically the same except that the words "Speaker of the House" have been stricken out and the words "Hon. CHAMP CLARK" inserted, because at the hour of 12 o'clock there will be no Speaker of the House.

Mr. LA FOLLETTE. Otherwise it agrees with the amendment as reported when the bill was reported from the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs of the Senate?

Mr. ASHURST. That is true. I ask that the reading of the report be proceeded with.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the action of the conferees on amendment No. 120.

The Secretary read as follows.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 120, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed insert: "In case any Choctaw names are added to the rolls prior to the final distribution such Choctaws and Chickasaws shall have a special payment of $200 per capita in addition to a ratable share of other property"; and the Senate agree to the same.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

Mr. McCUMBER. Mr. President, I feel entirely justified in taking up the argument at the point where my colleague [Mr. GRONNA] left off. I think the arguments of the Senator from Wisconsin [Mr. LA FOLLETTE] and of my colleague have been fully justified.

I want to compliment the conferees upon the fact that while a few million dollars have escaped from scrutiny, they have looked well after the nickels, and anything of that size has been carefully rooted out of the bill if they thought it was not justified. I might make some complaint of the treatment of the Indians in the State which I represent in part. Many of the appropriations made for the benefit of those Indians have been cut off; no one knows why, except that the conferees saw fit to cut them off; but I want to say to the Senator and to the conference committee that they have the heartfelt thanks of the State and of the Indians for one appropriation which they have made, and that is the appropriation of $100 for a tombstone for the Indians of North Dakota [laughter], for which we express our gratitude.

Mr. ASHURST. Mr. President, it is entirely characteristic of my distinguished friend, the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. McCUMBER], that he should at this time indulge in gravestone literature in his usual doleful tone.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. Mr. President, I want to ask the chairman of the Committee on Indians Affairs what was finally done with amendment No. 147, on page 84? It is a proviso to an appropriation of $10,000 for the continuation of the irrigation project in the Uintah Reservation. Did the House accept the amendment?

Mr. ASHURST. If the Senator will pardon me, there were 171 amendments to the bill, and I do not at this time remember as to the amendment in reference to which he inquires, but I will ascertain and notify him at the very earliest moment.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. The Secretary has the report. Will the Secretary kindly inform me?

Mr. ASHURST. The Secretary informs me that the House receded from its disagreement to that amendment.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The report was agreed to.

CONFIRMATION OF REAR ADMIRAL HARRY HARWOOD ROUSSEAU.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, in pursuance of a law just passed, time being so precious, and to take advantage of such matters, I report from the Committee on Naval Affairs favorably on the nomination of Mr. Rousseau, which I send to the desk, and ask for its immediate consideration in open session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be read.

The Secretary read as follows:

From the Committee on Naval Affairs, Harry Harwood Rousseau, to be a civil engineer in the Navy, with the rank of rear admiral of the lower nine.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection to the present consideration of the report? The Chair hears none, and, without objection, the nomination is confirmed.

TEST OF MATANUSKA COAL.

Mr. JONES. I ask to have printed in the RECORD a report of the Secretary of the Navy on the test of Matanuska coal on board the U. S. S. Maryland.

There being no objection, the report was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NAVY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, January 6, 1915.

MY DEAR SENATOR: In compliance with the request contained in your letter of December 28, 1914, I inclose herewith a copy of the report on the test of Matanuska coal on board the U. S. S. Maryland.

As soon as the report of the Naval Engineering Experiment Station has been received, the two complete reports will be published, and the department will take pleasure in sending you a copy of this report, which will be much more complete than the inclosed report.

Sincerely, yours,

JOSEPHUS DANIELS.

Hon. WESLEY L. JONES,
Committee on Fisheries, United States Senate,
Washington, D. C.

(Inclosure 1.)

U. S. S. "MARYLAND,"
Navy Yard, Mare Island, Cal.,
November 18, 1914.

From: Board.
To: Commanding officer.
Subject: Report of coal test; Matanuska coal.
Reference: Bureau of Steam Engineering letter No. 137067-623-15-F of October 16, 1914; and commanding officer's letter A-7-4A of November 5, 1914.
Inclosures: Tabulated data sheets; copies of steam log from November 7 to November 18, 1914. Orders and sample forms.

1. In accordance with your order of November 5, 1914, and the Bureau of Steam Engineering letter No. 137067-623-15-F of October 16, 1914, we report as follows:

The prescribed tests of Matanuska coal, as laid down in the above-mentioned reference, were carried out in the following order:

2. ORDER OF TESTS.

(1) Seven-day port test: 4 a. m. November 7 to 4 a. m. November 14, 1914; test held at the navy yard, Puget Sound, Wash.

(2) Four-hour full-power test: 1.30 p. m. to 5.30 p. m. November 14, 1914; test held in Puget Sound and Straits of Juan de Fuca.

(3) Twenty-four-hour 15-knot test: Three-quarter boiler power; 10.45 a. m. November 15 to 10.45 a. m. November 16, 1914; test held in the Straits of Juan de Fuca and Pacific Ocean en route to Mare Island, Cal.

(4) Forty-eight-hour 10-knot test: 12 noon, November 16 to 4 a. m. November 18, 1914; test held in the Pacific Ocean making passage to Mare Island, Cal.

3. SEVEN-DAY PORT TEST.

Boiler No. 8 was used during the entire week. The usual auxiliaries were run; evaporators were used when necessary for filling the ship's tanks. The load on the ship was rather heavy; somewhat heavier than with that during the tests of Pocahontas or Bering River coals. It will be seen by attached data sheets that the load is proportionate to the total water evaporated. The water evaporated was measured as in previous tests.

The port auxiliary machinery and condenser were used. All steam drains were led into the port feed tank. Water was pumped across to the starboard feed tank, where it was measured before pumping into the boilers. All coal, ash, and clinker were weighed; during day watches of two days the load was so excessive for one boiler that it became necessary to assist the draft by running the blowers. Run-of-mine coal was used for five days, slack for one day, and lump coal for part of one day. There were no casualties. Data were very carefully collected by the assistant engineer officers, who stood a strict watch during the test. At the conclusion of each watch the assistant engineer officer submitted a report of data for his watch on forms which had been previously prepared. During this test the coal burned very freely. The firing was very good, the analyses of the flue gases giving rarely below 9 per cent of CO_2. There was little clinker, but the ash was several per cent higher than with the Pocahontas coal. The firing was carefully supervised, the officer on watch and chief water tender being present at all times. The draft was good and the coal burned with bright yellowish flames. The coal coked very nicely; the coke was friable and very easily worked by the firemen. Fires 6 to 8 inches thick were carried most of the time, though occasionally they were heavier. Two fires were cleaned each watch, although they might have been operated longer. The ash fused into clinker on the grate bars, generally about 2 inches thick, medium weight, porous, a little tough and hard while hot but friable when cold. The clinker had a little ash mixed throughout the mass. It stuck a little to the bridge wall, but not seriously. The soot deposit was about 25 per cent more than with Pocahontas coal. The soot was a little different from that of the Pocahontas, as the granules appeared as minute fused grains.

The work of firing this coal was easy for the firemen. Hoes were used for spreading the fires, which were kept level. The slice bar was used sparingly. The load of the ship was carried with ease except when coaling ship or cleaning up after coaling, when there was a heavy drag on the boiler and the draft had to be assisted by the blowers. The load during this week of test would have ordinarily required two boilers burning Pocahontas coal.

4. FOUR-HOUR FULL-POWER TEST, FORCED DRAFT.

The Maryland stood by to get under way at 8.30 a. m. with all boilers, but owing to the fog she was unable to get under way until 11.19 a. m. The speed was gradually worked up to 120 turns about 1.30 p. m., when the test commenced. The fires had been worked and the ship made 108 turns under natural draft, when the blowers were started and a draft of about 1 inch of air pressure in all firerooms obtained. The speed of 119 to 120 turns was very easily made. The fires were carried thin; blowers regulated to about 350 revolutions; dampers were partly shut. After all the fires were in good condition it was possible to regulate the steam pressure by operating the ash-pan doors. A very uniform steam pressure was carried, as will be seen in the attached data sheet of gauge pressures. The fires burned brightly, the work of firing being very easy on account of the ease of breaking up the coke. The furnaces were one mass of yellowish flame. There was not an excessive amount of ash formed. The men, on being questioned, all said that it was the easiest 20-knot run that they had ever made.

5. TWENTY-FOUR HOUR FIFTEEN-KNOT TEST.

The U. S. S. Maryland anchored in Port Angeles after the four-hour forced-draft test. During the evening and following morning the usual cleaning work was done on all boilers; ash pans and furnaces were hauled and all ash and clinker separated and weighed. Tubes were blown with steam and all soot boxes hauled. The furnaces were primed with Matanuska coal. Boilers Nos. 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, and 16 were lighted up. At 10 a. m. the Maryland got underway and stood to sea, setting a course for San Francisco Bay. By 10.45 a. m. the speed had reached 85 turns, which was the speed set to make 15 knots, and the test began. Data were collected as per sample forms. It soon became evident that the boiler power was much too great for the speed if the fires were to be properly worked in order to get the highest efficiency. Boilers Nos. 4, 6, and 15 were first banked and then allowed to die out. No. 16 boiler was banked and the speed maintained with eight boilers. The firing was by signal, the intervals being about 9 minutes. The same general remarks apply to the burning of the coal on this test. It burned with the greatest of ease, forming a very easily worked coke, not an excessive amount of ash or clinker, and, in general, appeared to be easier to handle than the Pocahontas coal. The CO_2 found in flue analyses was generally high, over 9 per cent. Fires carried about 6 to 8 inches thick were always glowing, ash pans bright, and the furnaces a mass of yellowish incandescent flame. The coal burned like pine knots. The amount of clinker was not excessive, was more or less easy to work, and was very friable when cold. The fires were noticeably hot. The amount of soot made was a little higher than is generally made by good Pocahontas coal, about 10 per cent more.

6. TEN-KNOT TEST.

This test was commenced at 12 noon, November 16, the 15-knot test having been finished at 10.45. Ash pans and furnaces were hauled; tubes blown and soot boxes hauled; all fires were cleaned and were built up. Boilers Nos. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, and 14 were used, but, as in the 15-knot test, it was found that there were too many boilers for working fires properly. Two boilers were ultimately cut out and the test made with four boilers, which were more than ample, as at times there were four evaporators in use. The same remarks as to the fires on the 15-knot test apply to this test. Fires were very easily worked; the coke broke up easily; clinker was not very hard; bright, level fires from 6 to 8 inches thick and sometimes thicker were carried, and the CO_2 was generally high. After running 40 hours it was found there were but 3 tons of Matanuska coal left, so the test was considered completed after 40 hours.

7. GENERAL.

The Matanuska coal was delivered by the steamship company to the coaling plant at the navy yard, Puget Sound, where it was stowed under cover. At the time of the arrival of the Maryland, it was still sacked. Some of the sacks had become rotten and a little coal had been spilled on the floor of the dock. The coal was inspected by the officers of the board and the assistants in the engineering department. It was found to be very slack, as will be seen in the data sheet; also, it was very dry. There were very few lumps larger than a man's fist. A large working party under Ensign Bowden was sent to the coal sheds to load the coal on lighters. Every bag was weighed and spread out for inspection. All extraneous matter observed was picked out. There was very little slate, not over 200 pounds being picked out of the whole lot of 586 tons. About 40 tons were laid aside and screened into two sizes; that which would go through a quarter-inch mesh and that which would not. Of the former there were about 25 tons, and of the latter about 15 tons. This coal was burned on successive days; one day being devoted to the slack and a part of another day to the lump. The slack appeared to burn better than the lump, and the reason will be seen in the chemical analyses sheet attached. When the lighters were filled they were towed alongside the ship and the coal was stowed in bunkers which had been previously swept clean. During the test there was no evidence of any gases being given off the coal. During the loading, in order to avoid dust, the coal was thoroughly wet down, but even with this precaution it was very dusty. The noticeable characteristic of this coal is its friability. Lumps pulverize very easily. This accounts for the chemical analysis which shows the slack to contain less extraneous matter than the lump. It will be seen that the coal, being friable, powders very easily, while the lump contains more or less shale and is hard. In this respect the coal shows a marked difference from the Bering River coal, where the lumps contained a small per cent of extraneous matter, while the slack contained about 30 per cent. Before loading the lighters, samples at random were taken from the pile. These were sized into slack, buckwheat, and lump and were taken to the chemist for analysis as to ash. These samples contained from 6 to 10 per cent of ash, and on account of this showing it was decided that nothing further than hand cleaning would be necessary.

8. PHYSICAL AND CHEMICAL CHARACTERISTICS.

Moisture: There was apparently no free moisture on inspection before loading. This coal was stowed in a dry place and was extremely dry and dusty. Density 40.3 cubic feet per ton alongside and 39.8 cubic feet per ton at coal dock.

Sample: The laboratory sample was obtained by taking a shovelful out of every fifth bag as it came on board the lighter. This was bagged and stowed in a dry place. There were about 50 bags in this pile. On the day the laboratory samples were taken these bags were dumped out and the pile thoroughly mixed. As this pile was about 5 tons in weight it was reduced and every fifth shovelful saved. It was again quartered and then quartered again. This gave a 325-pound sample which was taken on board ship and then quartered and pulverized until there was a proper amount for chemical analyses and shipment to the Bureau of Steam Engineering and the Bureau of Mines.

General sample: Results of analysis are as follows:

	Per cent.
Moisture	0.73
On dry basis:
Volatile combustible matter	20.29
Fixed carbon	69.32
Ash	10.39
Sulphur	.49

	Slack.	Buckwheat.	Lump.
	Per cent.	Per cent.	Per cent.
Moisture	0.75	0.65	0.63
On dry basis:
Volatile combustible matter	20.96	20.22	19.47
Fixed carbon	70.85	70.50	65.19
Ash	8.19	9.28	15.34

Analyses by Mr. North, yard chemist, navy yard, Puget Sound:

A sizing sample of 785 pounds was obtained, which gave the following:

Lump which would not go through a one-half inch mesh screen, 17.7 per cent, 139 pounds.

Buckwheat which would not go through a one-quarter inch mesh screen, 12.1 per cent, 196 pounds.

Slack which would go through a one-quarter inch mesh screen, 70.2 per cent, 551 pounds.

Slate: There were no impurities in this coal of any consequence. Little or no slate could be found.

Calorific value: This could not be obtained.

Smoke: This coal makes some smoke, considerably more than Bering River and about the same amount as Pocahontas.

Indicator cards were taken once an hour during the full-power test and once a watch during the other tests. The horsepower found agreed with the curves of the horsepower on board for the 20-knot test, but the 15-knot test and 10-knot test appeared to be somewhat under that generally found for that of 15 and 10 knots. The indicators are old and the results obtained were irregular.

9. CONCLUSION OF TEST.

At the conclusion of each test an inspection of the boilers was made. No warping or overheating occurred during the 4-hour full-power run. During the 15-knot test the uptakes of No. 7 boiler were warped a little. In the uptake of No. 13 boiler there were 10 rivets pulled out and the uptake door sprung a little. A few panel doors on the boilers show signs of some of the insulation being burnt out. From the above it will be seen that this coal has no bad effects on the boilers or uptakes. There were no other casualties.

There were seven grate bars renewed during the port test.

10. The work of this test has been entered into by the officers and men concerned with the greatest enthusiasm. No effort has been spared to obtain the best results. All other ship work has been made secondary to the coal test. The machinery and boilers of the Maryland functioned perfectly during all these tests.

11. Mr. S. B. Flagg, engineer of the Bureau of Mines, was present in the firerooms during these tests. He did much to assist the ship's force in working fires, and instructing the firemen in the best methods of obtaining efficient combustion of this coal. The board is also indebted to Mr. Flagg for advice and assistance in compiling the data of this report.

12. Coal account.

DISTRICT EXCISE BOARD (S. DOC. NO. 981).

Mr. SHEPPARD. I present the report of the special committee to investigate the conduct of the excise board of the District of Columbia. Accompanying the report is a large amount of testimony and drawings. I ask that the report may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, that action will be taken.

The report is as follows:

REPORT OF THE SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO INVESTIGATE THE CONDUCT OF THE EXCISE BOARD OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

To the Senate of the United States:

We, the committee appointed by the President of the Senate to investigate the conduct of the excise board in the administration of the excise law of the District of Columbia, respectfully report as follows:

The resolution authorizing this committee was passed in the following terms:

"Senate resolution 522.

"Resolved, That the special committee appointed by the President of the Senate to investigate the conduct of the excise board is hereby further authorized to investigate fully into the manner in which the excise law, so called, is being administered in the District of Columbia, and said committee is hereby authorized to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to compel the attendance of witnesses, to employ stenographers to report such hearings as may be had at a rate not to exceed $1 per printed page. The expense of such hearings shall be paid out of the contingent expenses of the Senate, upon vouchers to be approved by the chairman of the said special committee. The said committee is also authorized to sit during the sessions of the Senate."

We have examined many witnesses, and submit herewith a transcript of the evidence we have taken.

We have also made personal investigations of various premises in controversy.

1. We find that the present excise board was appointed to administer what is commonly known as the Jones-Works excise liquor law of the District of Columbia, which became effective July 1, 1913, and that said board was originally composed of Joseph C. Sheehy, chairman, Robert G. Smith, and Henry S. Baker. Mr. Sheehy resigned from the board early in 1914 and was succeeded as chairman by Mr. Robert G. Smith, who remains chairman. Cotter T. Bride was appointed to the vacancy thus occasioned, and is now a member of the board.

2. We find that the excise board in administering the excise law has adopted certain rules which in many instances change the substance and letter of the law.

(a) The law as to hotels is as follows:

"Hereafter no license shall be issued to a hotel having less than 50 bedrooms for guests, nor to any hotel the character of which, or the character of the proprietor or manager of which, is shown to be objectionable to said board."

The rule adopted by the board in the administration of this clause of the law is as follows:

"SEC. 2. No license shall be issued to a hotel, as such, having less than 50 bedrooms for guests."

As the result of this unauthorized change of the law by the board several hotels with less than 50 bedrooms for guests have been granted licenses for the sale of intoxicating liquors. The board granted these hotels licenses under the name of restaurants. The fact remains, however, that they are licensed as hotels by the District government and are not entitled to liquor licenses under the true spirit and purpose of the law.

(b) The law provides:

"That no license shall be granted for any saloon or barroom on any side of any square, block, or tract of land where less than 50 per cent of the foot frontage, not including saloons or hotels and clubs having barroom licenses under this section, is used for business purposes."

In this connection the board adopted the following rule:

"SEC. 6. Beginning November 1, 1914, no barroom license shall be granted on any side of a street where less than 50 per cent of the foot frontage between intersecting streets, excluding the part of buildings wherein barroom licenses are held, is used for business purposes: Provided, That this restriction shall not apply to hotels and clubs."

This proviso is not in the law and is wholly unauthorized. Under it, however, the board has licensed a number of hotels and clubs on sides of squares or blocks with less than 50 per cent of the foot frontage used for business purposes.

Licenses for barrooms have been given to hotels or clubs where the hotel or club is the only business on the side of the square in which the same is located and where the district is wholly residential.

(c) The law provides:

"That no minor under the age of 18 years shall be allowed to enter or be permitted to remain in any place where intoxicating liquors are sold, other than a hotel, restaurant, or club."

The rule of the board on this subject is as follows:

"SEC. 18. Minors under the age of 18 may enter a wholesale liquor store in a case where the licensee also sells merchandise other than intoxicating liquors and where the intoxicating liquors are carried in stock and sold in a section of the store set apart for that purpose by a railing: Provided, That no minor under the age of 18 shall be permitted to enter the place so set apart: And provided further, That no intoxicating liquors shall be sold, given away, or in any way disposed of to a minor."

This rule permits minors to enter stores where intoxicating liquors are sold, contrary to the express provision and real intent of the law.

(d) The law provides:

"No licensee under this section shall sell, give away, or dispense any intoxicating liquors to any person between the hours of 1 o'clock a. m. and 7 o'clock a. m., nor on Sundays or Inauguration Day; and between said hours and on Sundays and Inauguration Day every barroom and other place where intoxicating liquors are sold shall be kept closed."

The rule of the board is as follows:

"SEC. 18a. For the purpose of cleaning up and doing other necessary work licensed premises may be entered or occupied by licensees and their regular employees between 6.45 o'clock a. m. and 7 o'clock a. m., except on Sundays and Inauguration Day; and between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 12 o'clock noon on Sundays and Inauguration Day: Provided, That neither said licensees nor their employees shall drink, sell, give away, or dispense any intoxicating liquors during the times mentioned."

Members of your committee saw a number of individuals in several saloons during the two-hour Sunday period permitted by the board for cleaning up purposes, and in several saloons during this time saw men who were apparently bartenders, dressed as if for dispensing liquors, and from one saloon came two or three young men dressed in business clothes.

(e) In section 20b of the rules the board has added what is in effect a complete new section of the law, as follows:

"SEC. 20b. Except in case of the death of a licensee, any person or persons duly authorized by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia may, with the consent in writing of the excise board, conduct the business of a licensee for a period of not exceeding 60 days. In such cases posting of the licensed premises shall not be required."

This gives express authority for receivers, trustees, and other representatives of licensees appointed by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia to conduct the business of a licensee for which no provision whatever is made in the excise law.

3. The law places the maximum limit upon the number of barroom licenses at 300, but it gives the excise board the discretion to license any smaller number it may see fit to permit. The board has not exercised its discretion for a smaller number. The testimony shows that it is the intention of the board to keep the number at 300, thereby adopting the construction most favorable to the saloons.

4. The law provides:

"Nor shall any barroom licensee establish more than one bar under his license."

This provision has been violated in two instances by permitting the operation of double bars under a single license, one at the corner of Fourteenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue, and another at the corner of Fourteenth and U Streets.

By the operation of a double bar, we mean that in each case the bar was extended into two separate rooms by making about a 10-foot opening between the rooms, and running the bar through the opening and on both sides of the partition separating the rooms.

5. The law also provides:

"Nor provide or permit to be used more than one entrance to said barroom from the street * * * unless the excise board shall especially permit an extra entrance."

This provision clearly means that no more than one entrance shall be provided, unless some special condition or reason warrants it, and naturally the board would be expected to grant but few such permits. According to the report of the board, out of 39 applications for extra entrances, 38 were granted and only 1 refused.

6. The law provides that:

"No saloon, barroom, or wholesale liquor business shall be licensed west of the western line of the fire limits as now established."

Between the time of the passage of the law and the time it was to go into effect, the Commissioners of the District of Columbia so changed the fire limits as to bring two saloons from prohibited territory into license territory; and the territory changed was so small as to raise the unavoidable presumption that it was made for the special purpose of keeping the saloons within the license limits.

Protests were filed with the board against the granting of the licenses to the saloons thus brought within license limits, and the conditions were fully disclosed. Although it had the discretion to refuse these licenses, even though the location might be outside the prohibited zone, and although a plain attempt had been made to nullify the positive provision of the law, the board granted the licenses.

7. The law provides:

"Not more than three saloons or barrooms, other than in hotels or clubs, shall be permitted upon one side of a street between intersecting streets."

Contrary to this provision of the law, four saloons are now permitted to operate on E Street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth Streets NW., one of the principal business sections of the city. The saloon on the corner of Fourteenth and E Streets, opposite the New Willard Hotel, which is owned by Miller Bros., had been refused a license while its entrance was on E Street, because there were three other saloons located on that side of the block. License was then applied for by Miller Bros. as fronting on Fourteenth Street, and the license was granted. Immediately the window fronting on Fourteenth Street was broken out, made into a door, the entrance on E Street was closed, and the board licensed the saloon, although its location was exactly where it was before.

8. The law provides:

"No saloon, barroom, or other place where intoxicating liquor is sold at retail shall be licensed, allowed, or maintained within 300 feet of any alleyway occupied for residences or of places commonly called slums, except upon the unanimous vote of all three members of said excise board."

The plain purpose of this provision was to remove barrooms a reasonable distance, at least, from these places, and protect to that extent the poor people living in them from the baneful influences of saloons. The board has apparently disregarded this purpose. It has granted licenses in practically every instance where applied for within 300 feet of these places, and there are instances where there are three or four, or more, barrooms located within 300 feet of a single alley.

9. The law provides:

"No saloon, barroom, or other place wherein intoxicating liquor is sold at retail or wholesale, other than hotels and clubs, shall be licensed, allowed, or maintained within 400 feet of any public schoolhouse, or a now located or established college, or university, or within 400 feet of any now established house of religious worship, measured between the nearest entrances to each by the shortest course of travel between such places of business and such public schoolhouse, college or university, or established house of religious worship."

The board has construed the language "measured between the nearest entrances to each by the shortest course of travel," to mean a square-cornered or right-angled measurement; that is, having in many instances where saloons are located within 400 feet of schools or places of religious worship by the shortest course of travel which pedestrians would naturally and conveniently take, resorted to the square-cornered measurement, thereby permitting the saloon to operate. However, in several instances, even by the square-cornered measurement the saloons are located within the prohibited distance, particularly Graff's saloon, No. 222 Seventh Street SE., where by square-cornered measurement, even around a parking which he himself constructed evidently for the purpose of making the distance farther, the saloon is still within 400 feet of the Eastern High School.

Also at Schriner's place, 730 Fourteenth Street NW., which by square cornered or other measurements is located within 400 feet of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. In one instance, at Mergner's place, No. 415 East Capitol Street, an iron fence was permitted to be constructed across a sidewalk close to the building, in order to throw the measurement and course of travel around the parking and to make the distance more than 400 feet from a public school at No. 25 Fifth Street SE.

Several other barrooms have been granted licenses within 400 feet of public schoolhouses, churches, and colleges.

We submit herewith plats made at our request by the District surveyor, giving the measurements at the above and other places, and showing the distances between saloons and churches, schoolhouses, and colleges by the shortest course of travel to be in many instances less than 400 feet.

10. In this connection attention is called to the fact that wherever a building is not used exclusively for religious or school purposes the board contends that it is not a house of religious worship or a school or college within the meaning of the excise law. It has, therefore, in several instances permitted saloons to be operated within 400 feet of buildings where large schools are conducted or where large congregations carry on religious worship.

11. We direct attention to that clause of the law which requires that no license shall be granted any hotel the character of which, or the character of the proprietor or manager of which, is shown to said board to be objectionable.

The most notable instance of a violation of this clause is as follows: The proprietor of the Grand Hotel, which occupies Government premises, was granted a license, notwithstanding he had been convicted of dispensing liquor to a minor girl and his license formerly canceled, and notwithstanding it was shown he had organized a corporation, which he controlled, and in the name of which he was applying for a license, and that a strong report was made against him by the police. At the hearings conducted by the board on the question of giving him a renewal of license, in October, 1914, the police report was as follows:

"The manager, Edward L. Gardner, conducts a garden in the basement of this hotel, where they have music and singing. Dancing is allowed on a platform set aside for that purpose. This is a resort for streetwalkers and women of questionable character, and the result is a meeting place for men and women. In my opinion these conditions are objectionable in connection with a bar and should be eliminated."

This police report was signed by J. L. Sprinkle, acting captain, first precinct.

This testimony was corroborated by Sergt. Catts, of the vice squad of the District police, both at the hearings before the excise board on the question of renewing Gardner's license and before our committee.

It also developed in the testimony before our committee that cases are now pending against the proprietor of this hotel, Gardner, for selling liquor to a minor.

The testimony before this committee also shows that other hotels were granted licenses which had been conducted in a disreputable manner.

12. The excise board has refused licenses to properly conducted barrooms and has granted them to disreputable places in the same neighborhood over strong protests. A saloon on the north side of Pennsylvania Avenue had been carried on for many years by Mr. Hurdle. No complaint had been made against him. He was refused a license or transfer of a license, and across the street the Philadelphia House, which was clearly shown by the testimony before us to be a most disgraceful and disreputable resort, was granted a license. The testimony showed that the Philadelphia House is a place of resort for colored prostitutes and for men and women of questionable character.

13. The law also provides:

"That the personal representative of any deceased licensee may within 30 days after the death of such licensee transfer said license in accordance with the provisions of this law touching transfers of licenses."

In violation of this provision the board permitted Mrs. Gordon to operate the bar of her husband long after his death, although the attention of the board was called to the violation of the law, and they did not act to prevent such violation until pressure was brought upon them through one of the District Commissioners, and although the corporation counsel had rendered an opinion that the bar was being operated contrary to the law.

14. The law provides:

"That the interior of every barroom shall at all times when selling is prohibited be exposed to full view from the street without obstruction by screens, blinds, curtains, stained glass, bottles, boxes, signs, or other material, except in the case of clubs licensed under this section and hotels having only an interior barroom, which shall be exposed to full view from the corridors or passageways leading to the entrance or entrances to such barroom.

The committee found on a tour of personal observation that but little attention is paid to this provision of the law. Glass doors and windows are stained and are obstructed by curtains, partitions are frequently erected across the barroom a short distance from the entrance, and the only compliance with this provision of the law in most cases was the drawing aside for just a short distance of one curtain.

15. The law provides:

"Par. 3. That the said board shall appoint a clerk at a salary of $1,500 per annum and an inspector with police powers at a salary of $1,500 per annum. Said inspector shall make inspections as may be required by this section, under the orders of the board, and make full report of such inspections to the board. He shall wear a badge indicating that he is such inspector of the excise board."

Instead of appointing an inspector and requiring him, as contemplated by the law, to inspect places of license holders, the board appointed a stenographer under the name of inspector, who does the stenographic work of the board and makes a stenographic record of the proceedings before the board, and his principal time is occupied by clerical work. He inspected only 130 places prior to November 14, 1914, and has made no inspections whatever since that time. This official testified before our committee that no orders or instructions regarding inspections had been given him by the board, but that he has been made simply a clerk or stenographer.

Licenses have been granted for barrooms on the sides of a square or block where there is no other substantial business, and in many cases where it is evident that there is not 50 per cent of the frontage used for business purposes. Plain violations of this provision have been permitted by allowing the saloon entrances to be changed from one side of the square to another side of the square without any change in the saloon itself or its location.

In some instances it is apparent that buildings of a very unsubstantial character have been constructed for the purpose of making business frontage in order to secure a barroom license, and the board has apparently approved such action by granting the license.

A frontage occupied by a board fence with a business sign on top, but with the ground occupied only by brick or tiling or boards or old barrels, or not occupied at all, has plainly been counted as frontage used for business purposes in order to grant a barroom license.

16. We regard it as significant of the attitude of the board that it has not exercised its discretion in favor of the schools as against the saloons by refusing licenses to saloons which may be located only a few feet beyond the 400-foot limit. The actual distance between the Polk School and the McKinley Manual Training School is 838.5 feet. Just across P Street from the Polk School is the saloon located in the Hotel Thyson. In the case of this hotel it is apparent that additional rooms were constructed in an attempt to comply with the law, and the board granted a license notwithstanding the fact that it was just across the street from a public school. The Hotel Thyson bar fronts on Seventh Street and can not be distinguished from an ordinary separate bar.

Farther along the block, on the same side of the street with the Thyson Hotel, is the Murray saloon, only 402.6 feet from the entrance to the Polk School and 435.9 feet from the south door of the McKinley Manual Training School. Immediately opposite Murray's, on the other side of Seventh Street, are two other barrooms. In other words, within approximately 400 feet of these large schools are four saloons. This is a clear case of the exercise of a discretion in the interests of the saloons and against the schools. The same condition prevails in a number of cases as to churches.

17. It should be stated that in practically all instances where the board has issued licenses to saloons under circumstances that constituted a violation or evasion of the true purpose or spirit of the law, all phases of the situation were brought fully to the attention of the board through numerous protests and representations of citizens before the issuance of the license.

18. The committee finds no evidence of corruption or venality on the part of any member of the board, and believes that each member should be exonerated from any charge or imputation of this character. The committee believes, however, that a careful and dispassionate review of the evidence before us as to the conduct of the board in the administration of the excise law shows that it has disregarded the underlying purpose of the law, that it has nullified its most beneficial features, and that it has encouraged and approved plain evasions and perversions of the law. It is the judgment of the committee that the board has resolved practically every doubt as to law or fact in the interest of the saloons. It has shown no proper comprehension of its duties in the execution of a law framed in the interest of morality and good government. The policy of the board is fostering the liquor traffic to the fullest extent permitted by the law, and in many instances at the expense of both its spirit and its letter, is fraught with increasing danger to the health, peace, and morals of the people of the District of Columbia.

Dated at the city of Washington in the District of Columbia March 4, 1915.

MORRIS SHEPPARD.
WM. H. THOMPSON.
WM. P. DILLINGHAM.
W. L. JONES.

Because of a death in my family I was unable to be present at the hearings of the committee at which the testimony was taken. Therefore I feel that in justice to the excise board, the members of which I believe to be upright, honorable men, I should not give my approval to the report of the majority.

WM. HUGHES.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, as I understand, the Senator from Texas has submitted a report from the committee to investigate the excise board of the District.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Senator has submitted the report.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask unanimous consent, Mr. President, that it be printed as a Senate document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. OWEN. I object.

Mr. JONES. Mr. President, I want to ask if under the rules and practice of the Senate the report with the testimony submitted will not be printed in the ordinary course? If not, it certainly ought to be printed. The testimony is submitted with the report, and the report and the testimony ought to be printed. I hope no objection will be made.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Objection has been made.

Mr. JONES. I want to ask if under the practice and customs of the Senate a report of this character with testimony is not always printed?

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair supposes the committee has power to have it printed.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, this is not a committee of the Senate; it is a special committee appointed by the Vice President, and there was nothing said in relation to printing the report. They have no authority to print it, unless they are so authorized by the Senate.

Mr. JONES. I hope the Senator from Texas will ask that the report and testimony be printed.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President, I ask that the report and the testimony accompanying it be printed as a Senate document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection?

Mr. BRANDEGEE. How extensive is the testimony?

Mr. SHEPPARD. It took us about three or four days to take the testimony.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I do not see any sense in printing the testimony. If the report is printed, I think that will be sufficient.

Mr. JONES. The report is rather the conclusions from the testimony, and it seems to me the testimony ought to be printed.

Mr. BRANDEGEE. I will not object; but I do not see the use of it.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there any objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

THE CORBETT TUNNEL.

Mr. MYERS submitted the following report:

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 74) appropriating money for the payment of certain claims on account of labor, supplies, materials, and cash furnished in the construction of the Corbett Tunnel, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same.

H. L. MYERS,
LUKE LEA,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

E. W. POU,
MARTIN DIES,
L. MOTT,
Managers on the part of the House.

The report was agreed to.

JOINT COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE INDIAN AFFAIRS (S. DOC. NO. 984).

Mr. ROBINSON. From the joint commission appointed under the act of Congress of June 30, 1913, to investigate Indian affairs I submit a report, and ask that it may be printed in the RECORD, and also as a public document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The report referred to is as follows:

JOINT COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE INDIAN AFFAIRS.

[Report of the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs, Mar. 3, 1915, 63d Cong., 3d sess.]

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

The Joint Commission of Congress to Investigate Indian Affairs was created under "An act making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes," for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914; approved June 30, 1913, as follows:

"For the purpose of making inquiry into conditions in the Indian Service, with a view to ascertaining any and all facts relating to the conduct and management of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and of recommending such changes in the administration of Indian affairs as would promote the betterment of the service and the well-being of Indians, there is hereby constituted a commission to be known as the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs, to be composed of three Members of the Senate, to be appointed by the Presiding Officer of the Senate, and three Members of the House of Representatives, to be appointed by the Speaker, the said commission be, and is hereby, directed, authorized, and empowered to examine into the conduct and management of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and all its branches and agencies, their organization and administration. The commission shall have power and authority to examine all books, documents, and papers in the said Bureau of Indian Affairs, its branches or agencies, relating to the administration of the business of said bureau, and shall have and is hereby granted authority to subpœna witnesses, compel their attendance, administer oaths, and to demand any and all books, documents, and papers of whatever nature relating to the affairs of Indians as conducted by said bureau, its branches and agencies. Said commission is hereby authorized to visit any Indian agency, school, institution, or other establishment under the jurisdiction and control of the Bureau of Indian Affairs or the Department of the Interior, and it shall be the duty of the Secretary of the Interior, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, and all other officers connected with the administration of Indian affairs, to aid the said commission and furnish all available information that may be demanded by said commission.

"The investigation hereby provided for shall be conducted by said commission as speedily as possible, and the findings, conclusions, and recommendations of such commission shall be reported to Congress during the Sixty-third Congress. Said commission is hereby authorized to employ such clerical and other assistance, including stenographers, as said commission may deem necessary in the proper prosecution of its work: Provided, That stenographers so employed shall not receive for their services exceeding $1 per printed page. The sum of $25,000 is hereby appropriated to pay the expenses of the said commission. Within 10 days after the appointment of the members of the commission they shall proceed to elect a chairman and secretary, and the funds hereby appropriated shall be paid out on the order of such chairman and secretary, and a full, itemized account of all such expenditures shall accompany the final report of the commission when submitted to Congress."

Pursuant to the foregoing enactment, the following Members of Congress were appointed members of the said joint commission: Senators JOE T. ROBINSON, of Arkansas, HARRY LANE, of Oregon, and CHARLES E. TOWNSEND, of Michigan; Representatives JOHN H. STEPHENS, of Texas, CHARLES D. CARTER, of Oklahoma, and CHARLES H. BURKE, of South Dakota. The commission promptly organized by electing Senator ROBINSON chairman and Robert B. Keating secretary.

On account of the very comprehensive duties imposed upon the joint commission, and owing also to the fact that Congress has been practically in continuous session since its creation, our work has been conducted under difficulties and is incomplete.

OUTLINE OF WORK PERFORMED BY THE JOINT COMMISSION.

The joint commission has held about 65 meetings, and at 52 of these hearings have been conducted relating to conditions prevailing on various reservations and the methods under which the business of the Bureau of Indian Affairs is conducted, which testimony is herewith submitted as a part of this report. The testimony has been printed in convenient form, and comprises about 3,300 pages.

HEALTH AND SANITARY CONDITIONS.

Investigations of the health, diseases, and sanitary conditions prevailing among the Indians on many of the reservations have confirmed information heretofore published as to the prevalence of infectious and contagious diseases, especially tuberculosis and trachoma. These are plagues inflicting every Indian tribe in the United States and threatening serious consequences to white citizens who come in contact with the afflicted Indians.

The alarming prevalence of tuberculosis, approximating 30 per cent of the entire membership of some of the tribes, is attributable principally to insanitary conditions in Indian homes and lack of knowledge on the part of the Indians as to proper treatment and means of prevention. Among the other radical changes which contact with our civilization is bringing to the Indian race is the abandonment of life in the tepee and dwelling in small, unventilated rooms. This is a speedy and certain means for the spread of tuberculosis. The tepee, in which most of the Indians formerly lived, was a healthful habitation in contrast with many present-day Indian houses.

Trachoma is even more general among the various tribes than tuberculosis. It is believed that 70 per cent of some of the tribes are afflicted with this disease in a more or less virulent form.

At the time this joint commission was appointed another joint commission of Congress (composed of Senators ROBINSON and TOWNSEND and Representatives STEPHENS and BURKE) was authorized to investigate the proposed establishment of an Indian tuberculosis sanitarium and the Yakima Indian reclamation project. The testimony taken by that commission, together with its findings and conclusions, have been published in Senate Document 337, Sixty-third Congress, second session.

Upon the recommendations of this commission and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs provision was made in the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1914, for the establishment of a number of reservation hospitals (most of them inexpensive) for the treatment of diseases among the Indians, and especially tuberculosis and trachoma. It must be admitted, however, that the provisions so far made by Congress for the improvement of sanitary conditions among the Indians are inadequate. Manifestly, before these plagues, which threaten the destruction of the Indian race, are overcome a comprehensive, well-organized campaign must be conducted, and this campaign must contemplate not only treatment of the afflicted, but instruction and training of the Indians in subjects relating to hygiene and sanitation. To accomplish this the medical service of the Indian Bureau should be reorganized and reenforced. It has been suggested that this work can best be conducted under the Public Health Service. Some members of this commission adhere to that belief, while others think that the division of authority which this would require would result in bad administration. In any event, if the ravages of tuberculosis and trachoma among the Indians are to be checked more vigorous means and methods must be adopted. Many additional hospitals, physicians, and field matrons will be required, and the expenditure of large sums of money is imperative.

There is no better field for philanthropic and unselfish endeavor than that of reforming the prevailing insanitary conditions of Indian life. In our opinion, it would not be difficult to secure cooperation with the Government on the part of public-spirited citizens who avow their interest in the welfare of the Indian race, and whose efforts are at present unorganized and therefore somewhat misdirected and unavailing.

While among some of the older Indians there is manifested a spirit of resentment at efforts on the part of the Government to confine their afflicted children in hospitals so remote from their homes that no opportunity is afforded parents to visit their afflicted offspring, on the whole the Indians are very appreciative of the benefits to be derived from local hospitals, and readily avail themselves of such institutions, and it is believed they will be reasonably prompt in conforming to the necessary health regulations when once the same are understood by them.

ILLEGAL SALES OF LIQUOR TO INDIANS.

The fondness of Indians for intoxicating liquors is generally understood by the public. Congress has not been slow to enact laws designed for the suppression of the liquor traffic among the Indians. These laws, however, are in many localities openly disregarded and the nefarious business of the "bootlegger" still thrives.

The Indian appropriation bill for the current year and for the next fiscal year carries increased appropriations for the suppression of the sale of liquor to Indians. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs is earnestly seeking to enforce the law regarding this subject and is to be commended for his efforts in that particular. However, it appears to your commission that this evil can only be overcome in any community where a healthy sentiment exists or is created among both the Indians and whites. It is a regrettable fact that in some localities the commercial profits arising from the sale of liquor to Indians appear to have rendered certain elements of the white population indifferent to the enforcement of the antiliquor laws.

IMPROVEMENT OF INSPECTION SERVICE.

The inspection service of the Indian Bureau, with notable exceptions, is in many respects weak and inadequate. Superintendents of some of the agencies reporting to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs have misrepresented or so colored the facts as to not fairly disclose the true conditions existing among the Indians over which they have supervision. It has been brought to the attention of the joint commission that in some instances where we have requested that inspecting officers of the Bureau of Indian Affairs be assigned to particular investigations these officers have devoted their energies, in part, to discrediting witnesses and parties making complaints. The intimate personal relationship which under the prevailing system exists between some of the inspecting officers and the superintendents of some of the reservations have not tended to the correction of abuses and in some cases have resulted in the suppression of facts which should be disclosed.

With these facts in view a force of six inspectors was authorized in the Indian appropriation bill for the present fiscal year. The six additional inspectors have not yet been selected. In the opinion of the commission this should be speedily done and the inspection service fully reorganized.

INDIAN SCHOOLS.

Among the important subjects receiving the attention of the commission is the progress of education among the Indians. We visited and inspected Riverside, Cushman, Phoenix, and Carlisle Schools. These are among the strong educational institutions available for the Indians. Riverside appears to be well organized, the buildings and campus in good condition, and the instruction there thorough and efficient.

At the Phoenix School many of the buildings appear to have been neglected and require repairs. While instruction in many of the grades at this school seems thorough and satisfactory, it is thought that the usefulness of the school may be enhanced by a more careful and active management.

In a few instances the commission found it necessary to make immediate report of unsatisfactory conditions to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, resulting in a change of the management of the Cushman and Carlisle Schools. (For details see Hearings of the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs, pp. 406–407, pt. 3; p. 87, pt. 2; and pp. 1388–1390, pt. 11.)

Vocational training was found particularly efficient at the Cushman School. The hospital at the Phoenix School is very efficient, but is not of sufficient capacity.

EDUCATIONAL FACILITIES INADEQUATE ON SOME RESERVATIONS.

We have observed that there is a lack of adequate school facilities on some of the reservations, due in part to the widely scattered conditions in which the Indians live. It is our opinion that Congress should establish additional day schools on a number of the reservations.

Particular emphasis should be laid in Indian schools on practical training and instruction in hygiene and sanitation.

FINANCE AND ACCOUNTING.

The commission employed experts to inquire into the business methods of the Finance Division of the Indian Bureau. The results of their labors are contained in "the report to the joint commission of Congress of the United States, Sixty-third Congress, third session, to investigate Indian affairs, relative to the business and accounting methods employed in the administration of the Office of Indian Affairs," under date of August, 1914, and made a part of this report.

It appears that the system of bookkeeping and accounting now in use is susceptible of improvement. This report, after a comprehensive review of the organization and management of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, goes into a criticism of the methods in actual operation in the Finance Division of the Bureau. It states that the incomplete and unsatisfactory accounting system as described is largely due to a lack of facilities and a lack of personnel for the installation and operation of an up-to-date accounting system, rather than to deficiencies on the part of officials, clerks, and other employees in the service. A thorough reorganization and revision in business methods is recommended. The present methods of preparing estimates and submitting requisitions for appropriations are condemned. The items of appropriation are not of a character to provide for the exercise of legislative and executive control over the contracting and purchasing relations; the items are now classified in such a manner that the administrator may change a particular voucher to any one or two to a dozen accounts as may suit; it does not establish the conditions or provisions controlling allotments with a view to fixing executive responsibility for the exercise of proper discretion.

It is further stated in this report that there are no records from which could be obtained an accurate statement of revenues and expenditures; that no record is maintained in the Indian Office from which a statement of the property and funds of the Indians could be obtained; that the present method of inspection stands in the way of executive discretion and forces the management into a bureaucracy; that the benefits of inspection are largely destroyed, so far as they may be utilized in the development of individual efficiency; that the appropriation ledger is not balanced and its correctness depends upon the individual accuracy of the bookkeepers; that the liability ledgers are never balanced and the totals are carried in pencil and are often incorrect; that any summaries prepared under the various appropriations are more or less incorrect and unreliable; that there is no systematic method of accounting and bookkeeping used at any of the agencies and only one or two make even a pretense of double-entry bookkeeping; that there is no systematic method in the main office whereby it may be ascertained that an incoming disbursing officer actually receives the property for which he signs; that there is a duplication of accounts; that the quality of auditing and checking in the Finance Division depends largely upon the amount of work on hand; that a disbursing officer is permitted to employ labor and charge the expense to almost any available appropriation and there is nothing in the pay roll or in the disbursing officer's report to show that the labor was actually performed.

Many other evidences of defective methods in the proper accounting of Indian moneys and Government appropriations are alleged in the report. The report and the recommendations therein are respectfully submitted for the consideration of Congress and the Commissioner of Indian Affairs.

INDUSTRIAL CONDITIONS.

The industrial conditions of the Indian Service have been the subject of interesting investigations, disclosing apathy and inefficiency in many of the field employees. So-called "Indian farmers," whose principal duties, apparently, should be the promotion of agriculture among the Indians by instruction and demonstration, have heretofore performed chiefly unskilled labor and acted as mere messengers to the superintendents. Little progress appears to have been made in agriculture and stock raising on the various reservations. The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has inaugurated the policy of stocking several of the large reservations with herds of cattle for the benefit of the Indians and of requiring the "Indian farmers" to devote their attention primarily to the promotion of agriculture.

This is in the nature of an experiment, which has not progressed far enough to enable us to determine its practicability.

Liberal appropriations are carried in the Indian appropriation bill for the purpose of encouraging industry among the Indians, and it is hoped that the judicious expenditure of these funds will result in arousing and stimulating general interest in these important subjects.

The demonstration farms conducted at some of the schools have in our opinion accomplished little. They can be made highly beneficial. By way of illustration, the school farm, comprising 176 acres, at Carlisle, Pa., from statements made by the "school farmers" themselves, has been used to penalize refractory pupils rather than to demonstrate scientific agriculture. In many instances where students have been guilty of violating the rules of the institution, they have been sent to the farm for a fixed period to be disciplined. In this way work on the school farm has been made odious, so that instead of being a means of encouraging industry, it has seemed to have served the contrary purpose. Our attention has not yet been called to a demonstration farm connected with any Indian school which we believe is accomplishing material good by affording practical instruction to Indian pupils in scientific farming.

INDIAN RECLAMATION PROJECTS.

Certain Indian reclamation projects have been the subject of examination before the joint commission disclosing, in our opinion, that Congress has been rather too forward in establishing so-called Indian reclamation projects. Some of these projects are of doubtful value to the Indians owing, in many instances, to the fact that they have been slow, or for lack of means have been unable, to avail themselves of the benefits, while white settlers are prompt and eager to secure the same.

These projects have usually been constructed at tribal expense; that is, the cost of the same is usually reimbursed from tribal funds, and members of the tribe whose allotments are not irrigable in this way have been compelled to share in the expense of the irrigation project from which they can, as individuals, derive no benefit.

We recommend that no new Indian irrigation project be established without the consent of the Indians from whose funds the same is to be paid for or reimbursed, and that the cost of said projects, both as to construction and maintenance, when hereafter established be charged against only the lands benefited.

LEASING OF INDIAN GRAZING LANDS.

The leasing of grazing lands on Uintah and Ouray Reservations, in Utah; Crow, Blackfeet, and Flathead Reservations, in Montana; the Kiowa, Osage, and Comanche Reservations, in Oklahoma, have received the attention of the commission.

It appears that in some instances where allotments have been made within so-called large grazing areas, while these allotments have not been expressly included in the leases, the lessees have actually had free use of the allotments and the allottees have been denied the use of their allotments. This is a manifest injustice to the allottees, who should either be permitted to lease their own allotments or to receive the proceeds therefrom if used by lessees.

YANKTON SIOUX RESERVATION, S. DAK.

Numerous complaints have been received affecting the administration of the Yankton Sioux Reservation, in South Dakota. While opportunity has not been found to visit this reservation, important testimony has been taken and the superintendent has appeared before the commission and testified regarding conditions there. A special agent in the employ of the commission was sent to the agency to receive complaints and affidavits, and his report is included in part 5, Hearings Before the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs.

BLACKFEET RESERVATION, MONT.

Extensive investigations have been made into the affairs of the Blackfeet Indians of Montana. A member of this commission (Senator LANE) visited the reservation during the month of November, 1914. His report is included in part 6–A, serial 2, of the Hearings Before the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs. The Chief Inspector of the Indian Service (Mr. Linnen), whose report is published in the same volume, subsequently visited the reservation. These reports, together with oral testimony heard by the commission, disclosed that the Blackfeet Indians are in a pitiable condition and are suffering from hunger and lack of clothing. The superintendent of the reservation has been negligent and inefficient. He has resented and sought to suppress the making of complaints by the Indians to the commission, and the Indian police on the reservation have warned the Indians against attending meetings or making complaints.

In addition to the destitution and want among these Indians, school facilities on the Blackfeet Reservation are inadequate. Items have been inserted in the pending Indian appropriation bill for the immediate relief of the Blackfeet and Flathead Indians. There appears also to be much want and destitution among the Flatheads. The chief inspector has recommended the transfer or dismissal of the superintendent of Blackfeet and the appointment of more efficient officers and agents generally, as well as the reorganization of the police force.

Employees of the Indian Service who have been found inefficient or incompetent should be dismissed and should not be transferred. The practice which prevails of transferring incompetent or unfaithful employees is condemned.

OSAGE RESERVATION, OKLA.

Witnesses have also been heard on matters of interest to the Kiowa, the Comanche, the Omaha, and Osage Reservations, and these investigations have not yet been completed.

Special agents of the commission visited the Osage Reservation regarding the affairs of the Osage Indians. It appears that Congress has heretofore enacted laws requiring the payment to the Osage Indians, without regard to their competency, enormous funds derived from royalties and otherwise. This has resulted in the grossest frauds and extortions. The evidence shows that it is the universal practice of white persons who loan money to the Osage Indians to charge usurious rates of interest ranging from 40 per cent per annum to as high, in at least one instance, as 10,220 per cent. These facts are supported by the testimony of the former superintendent, by witnesses who admit that they are engaged in the business of loaning money at usurious rates to these Indians, and who regard themselves as benefactors for the reason that they only charge 40 per cent per annum.

The Osage Indians are the wealthiest race of people, per capita, known in history. Their assets have been shamelessly wasted and no progress among them is being made.

The Senate Committee on Indian Affairs, having its attention called to these matters, has inserted in the Indian appropriation bill for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, an item vesting the Secretary of the Interior with discretion in the payment of these funds and authorizing the use of the same for the benefit of the Indians, and forbidding the payment of any part of the same on any usurious obligation or contract.

The regrettable condition prevailing among the Osage Indians is disclosed in part by the report of a supervisor of schools in the Indian Service, of inspections made during March and April, 1913, and printed as an exhibit to part 12-A, serial 2, hearings before the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs. In his report he presents the following diagram of Osage conditions:

Osage wealth leads to	Extravagance Idleness, Vice.	Wastefulness (of Indians). Grafting (of whites). Debts (honest and fraudulent). Educational (many children not in school). Industrial (many parents do not work). Sexual (75 per cent diseased). Drunkenness (27 drunken Osages counted on the streets at one time from a single position). Gambling.	Ignorance, debility, disease, and debasement.	Resulting in the perdition of the Osages.

Owing to the very large number of Osage children who are apparently receiving no schooling or have inadequate opportunities, to the conditions that prevail in regard to the sale or lease of Indian allotments, the necessity for the conservation of their oil and mineral interests, and the apparent unsatisfactory condition of their affairs the continuance of the investigation of the Osage Reservation is justified.

TONGUE RIVER OR NORTHERN CHEYENNE RESERVATION.

Your joint commission also made inquiries into conditions on the Tongue River or Northern Cheyenne Reservation in Montana. Further investigation of conditions on this reservation should be made.

SUBJECTS REQUIRING FURTHER INVESTIGATION.

Notwithstanding the activity of this joint commission, there remain undisposed of many subjects which apparently should be investigated. Complaints relating to the following are on file:

Bad River and Menominee Reservations, Wis.

Blackfeet, Crow, Northern Cheyenne, Fort Peck, Fort Belknap, and Flathead Reservations, Mont.

Crow Creek, Pine Ridge, Rosebud, and Yankton Sioux Reservations, S. Dak.

Grande Ronde, Klamath, and Siletz Reservations, Oreg.

Fort Lapwai Reservation, Idaho.

Uintah Reservation, Utah.

Mescalero, San Carlos, Navajo, and Jicarilla Reservations, N. Mex.

Camp McDowell, Moqui, Pima, and Gila Reservations, Ariz.

Osage and Kaw Reservations, Okla.

Omaha and Winnebago Reservations, Nebr.

White Earth Reservation, Minn.

Seneca and Tuscarora Reservations, N. Y.

In the event the commission is continued in authority, we will proceed with these investigations as rapidly as possible, selecting the apparently most important subjects. Unless Congress sees fit to authorize its further activity, the authority of the commission will expire March 4, 1915, and the unexpended balance of the appropriation available for its use will lapse.

Of the $25,000 appropriated for the use of the commission there has been expended $12,212.15, of which expenditures an itemized account accompanied this report, leaving an unexpended balance of $12,787.85.

The problems connected with the Indian Service, involving the activities, relationship, and welfare of 300,000 persons and property aggregating in value nearly $1,000,000,000, are among the most serious which confront our Government. No quick or complete solution of these great problems has been found or is discoverable. They require the application of patriotic intelligence, which in the past has been hampered and embarrassed by selfishness, corruption, and inefficiency.

It is believed that a material reorganization of the service is desirable.

Respectfully submitted.

SENATOR J. E. THORNTON.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. THORNTON], who has been too ill for several days to attend the sessions of the Senate, who is retiring to-day by reason of the expiration of his term of office, and who carries with him the good will and the affectionate regard of all his fellow Senators, has sent a word of farewell to the Members of the Senate, which I ask to have read and printed in the RECORD. I understand that a similar letter has been written by him to the senior Senator from New Hampshire conveying his farewell regards to the other side of the Chamber and that it was read on yesterday.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, D. C., March 3, 1915.

Hon. JNO. W. KERN,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I had hoped to be able to visit the Senate to-day to say farewell in person to my brother Senators who will be shortly leaving for their respective homes.

As I find it will not be prudent for me to visit the Capitol, I will ask you to do me the favor to say good-by for me to my brother Democrats, with the assurance of my affectionate regard and of my deep appreciation of the unvarying kindness they have always shown me.

I am writing to Senator GALLINGER asking him to present my farewell to the Republican Senators.

With kindest regards,

Truly, yours, J. R. THORNTON.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I ask that the letter I presented in executive session yesterday be likewise printed in the RECORD, following the letter addressed to the Senator from Indiana.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter referred to is as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, D. C., March 3, 1915.

Hon. JACOB H. GALLINGER,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I greatly regret my inability to attend the Senate session of to-day in order to say good-by to my brother Senators who will so soon be leaving for their respective homes.

Will you do me the favor to convey my farewell to my brother Senators on the Republican side of the Chamber, with the assurance of my very great appreciation of the uniform kindness and courtesy they have invariably shown me since I have been a Member of the Senate.

This message can be conveyed by sending this letter by a page around the Chamber for their perusal; and I am writing to Senator KERN requesting that he will convey my farewell to my Democratic colleagues.

With kind regards,

Very truly, yours, J. R. THORNTON.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 441) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 440) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19906) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House agrees to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

H. R. 17894. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto," approved February 17, 1911;

H. R. 18685. An act to repeal penalties on foreign-built vessels owned by Americans; and

H. R. 20439. An act for the relief of the heirs of the late Frank Henry Rogers.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had appointed a committee of three Members to join a similar committee to be appointed by the Senate to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses, having completed the business of this session, are ready to adjourn, unless the President has some communication to make to them, and that he had appointed Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. FITZGERALD, and Mr. MANN members of the committee on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice President:

S. 544. An act for the relief of the Virginia Military Institute, of Lexington, Va.;

S. 4522. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission," approved June 26, 1906;

S. 5495. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to make certain donations of condemned cannon and cannon balls;

S. 7515. An act to reserve lands to the Territory of Alaska for educational uses, and for other purposes;

H. R. 4899. An act to fix the standard barrel for fruits, vegetables, and other dry commodities;

H. R. 5849. An act to amend section 100 of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911;

H. R. 16738. An act to provide for the payment of certain moneys to school districts in Oklahoma;

H. R. 17894. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto," approved February 17, 1911;

H. R. 18086. An act to transfer certain counties in the several judicial districts in the State of Arkansas;

H. R. 18685. An act to repeal penalties on foreign-built vessels owned by Americans;

H. R. 18747. An act to reserve certain lands and to incorporate the same and make them a part of the Pike National Forest;

H. R. 20439. An act for the relief of Mary L. Rogers, widow of Frank Henry Rogers;

H. R. 20604. An act to construct a public building for a post office at the city of Forsyth, Ga.;

H. R. 21562. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across Pearl River at or near the city of Bogalusa, La.;

H. J. Res. 426. Joint resolution providing that the Congress of the United States shall participate in the celebration of the opening of The Dalles-Celilo Canal;

H. J. Res. 439. Joint resolution to empower the President to better enforce and maintain the neutrality of the United States;

H. J. Res. 440. Joint resolution making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 441. Joint resolution making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 570), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of three Senators be appointed by the Vice President, to join a similar committee appointed by the House of Representatives, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses, having completed the business of the present session, are ready to adjourn unless the President has some other communication to make to them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair appoints the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE], and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] as the committee on the part of the Senate.

THE PREFERENTIAL BALLOT (S. DOC. NO. 985).

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, there is on the calendar, reported from the Committee on Printing, Senate resolution 320, providing for the printing of a document on the preferential ballot. I have objected to the printing of that document, but I desire to withdraw by objection and ask that it be printed.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I also objected to the printing of that document, but as the Senator who has introduced it seems a great deal interested in it, I will now likewise reluctantly withdraw my objection.

The resolution was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the papers presented by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. HOLLIS] February 11, 1914, being an address by Lewis Jerome Johnson before the First National Conference on Popular Government, held in Washington, D. C., December 6, 1913, upon the subject "The Preferential Ballot as a Possible Substitute for the Direct Primary," be printed as a public document.

ADDITIONAL MESSENGER BOY.

Mr. DILLINGHAM, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, reported with an amendment Senate resolution 561.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The resolution was read and considered by unanimous consent.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That a messenger boy be appointed, for service in the office of the Sergeant at Arms, at the rate of $600 per annum, to be selected by the Sergeant at Arms and paid from the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided by law.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I desire to have incorporated in the RECORD a communication from the Chief of Engi-

lisle, Pa., from statements made by the "school farmers" themselves, has been used to penalize refractory pupils rather than to demonstrate scientific agriculture. In many instances where students have been guilty of violating the rules of the institution, they have been sent to the farm for a fixed period to be disciplined. In this way work on the school farm has been made odious, so that instead of being a means of encouraging industry, it has seemed to have served the contrary purpose. Our attention has not yet been called to a demonstration farm connected with any Indian school which we believe is accomplishing material good by affording practical instruction to Indian pupils in scientific farming.

INDIAN RECLAMATION PROJECTS.

Certain Indian reclamation projects have been the subject of examination before the joint commission disclosing, in our opinion, that Congress has been rather too forward in establishing so-called Indian reclamation projects. Some of these projects are of doubtful value to the Indians owing, in many instances, to the fact that they have been slow, or for lack of means have been unable, to avail themselves of the benefits, while white settlers are prompt and eager to secure the same.

These projects have usually been constructed at tribal expense; that is, the cost of the same is usually reimbursed from tribal funds, and members of the tribe whose allotments are not irrigable in this way have been compelled to share in the expense of the irrigation project from which they can, as individuals, derive no benefit.

We recommend that no new Indian irrigation project be established without the consent of the Indians from whose funds the same is to be paid for or reimbursed, and that the cost of said projects, both as to construction and maintenance, when hereafter established be charged against only the lands benefited.

LEASING OF INDIAN GRAZING LANDS.

The leasing of grazing lands on Uintah and Ouray Reservations, in Utah; Crow, Blackfeet, and Flathead Reservations, in Montana; the Kiowa, Osage, and Comanche Reservations, in Oklahoma, have received the attention of the commission.

It appears that in some instances where allotments have been made within so-called large grazing areas, while these allotments have not been expressly included in the leases, the lessees have actually had free use of the allotments and the allottees have been denied the use of their allotments. This is a manifest injustice to the allottees, who should either be permitted to lease their own allotments or to receive the proceeds therefrom if used by lessees.

YANKTON SIOUX RESERVATION, S. DAK.

Numerous complaints have been received affecting the administration of the Yankton Sioux Reservation, in South Dakota. While opportunity has not been found to visit this reservation, important testimony has been taken and the superintendent has appeared before the commission and testified regarding conditions there. A special agent in the employ of the commission was sent to the agency to receive complaints and affidavits, and his report is included in part 5, Hearings Before the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs.

BLACKFEET RESERVATION, MONT.

Extensive investigations have been made into the affairs of the Blackfeet Indians of Montana. A member of this commission (Senator LANE) visited the reservation during the month of November, 1914. His report is included in part 6-A, serial 2, of the Hearings Before the Joint Commission to Investigate Indian Affairs. The Chief Inspector of the Indian Service (Mr. Linnen), whose report is published in the same volume, subsequently visited the reservation. These reports, together with oral testimony heard by the commission, disclosed that the Blackfeet Indians are in a pitiable condition and are suffering from hunger and lack of clothing. The superintendent of the reservation has been negligent and inefficient. He has resented and sought to suppress the making of complaints by the Indians to the commission, and the Indian police on the reservation have warned the Indians against attending meetings or making complaints.

In addition to the destitution and want among these Indians, school facilities on the Blackfeet Reservation are inadequate. Items have been inserted in the pending Indian appropriation bill for the immediate relief of the Blackfeet and Flathead Indians. There appears also to be much want and destitution among the Flatheads. The chief inspector has recommended the transfer or dismissal of the superintendent of Blackfeet and the appointment of more efficient officers and agents generally, as well as the reorganization of the police force.

Employees of the Indian Service who have been found inefficient or incompetent should be dismissed and should not be transferred. The practice which prevails of transferring incompetent or unfaithful employees is condemned.

OSAGE RESERVATION, OKLA.

Witnesses have also been heard on matters of interest to the Kiowa, the Comanche, the Omaha, and Osage Reservations, and these investigations have not yet been completed.

Special agents of the commission visited the Osage Reservation regarding the affairs of the Osage Indians. Owing to the very large number of Osage children who are apparently receiving no schooling or have inadequate opportunities, to the conditions that prevail in regard to the sale or lease of Indian allotments, the necessity for the conservation of their oil and mineral interests, and the apparent unsatisfactory condition of their affairs the continuance of the investigation of the Osage Reservation is justified.

TONGUE RIVER OR NORTHERN CHEYENNE RESERVATION.

Your joint commission also made inquiries into conditions on the Tongue River or Northern Cheyenne Reservation in Montana. Further investigation of conditions on this reservation should be made.

Of the $25,000 appropriated for the use of the commission there has been expended $12,212.15, of which expenditures an itemized account accompanied this report, leaving an unexpended balance of $12,787.85.

The problems connected with the Indian Service, involving the activities, relationship, and welfare of 300,000 persons and property aggregating in value nearly $1,000,000,000, are among the most serious which confront our Government. No quick or complete solution of these great problems has been found or is discoverable. They require the application of patriotic intelligence, which in the past has been hampered and embarrassed by selfishness, corruption, and inefficiency.

It is believed that a material reorganization of the service is desirable.

Respectfully submitted.

Attest:

R. B. KEATING, Arkansas, Secretary.

SENATOR J. R. THORNTON.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, the senior Senator from Louisiana [Mr. THORNTON], who has been too ill for several days to attend the sessions of the Senate, who is retiring to-day by reason of the expiration of his term of office, and who carries with him the good will and the affectionate regard of all his fellow Senators, has sent a word of farewell to the Members of the Senate, which I ask to have read and printed in the RECORD. I understand that a similar letter has been written by him to the senior Senator from New Hampshire conveying his farewell regards to the other side of the Chamber and that it was read on yesterday.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE.
Washington, D. C., March 3, 1915.

Hon. JNO. W. KERN,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I had hoped to be able to visit the Senate to-day to say farewell in person to my brother Senators who will be shortly leaving for their respective homes.

As I find it will not be prudent for me to visit the Capitol, I will ask you to do me the favor to say good-by for me to my brother Democrats, with the assurance of my affectionate regard and of my deep appreciation of the unvarying kindness they have always shown me.

I am writing to Senator GALLINGER asking him to present my farewell to the Republican Senators.

With kindest regards,

Truly, yours, J. R. THORNTON.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I ask that the letter I presented in executive session yesterday be likewise printed in the RECORD, following the letter addressed to the Senator from Indiana.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The letter referred to is as follows:

UNITED STATES SENATE,
Washington, D. C., March 3, 1915.

Hon. JACOB H. GALLINGER,
United States Senate.

MY DEAR SENATOR: I greatly regret my inability to attend the Senate session of to-day in order to say good-by to my brother Senators who will so soon be leaving for their respective homes.

Will you do me the favor to convey my farewell to my brother Senators on the Republican side of the Chamber, with the assurance of my very great appreciation of the uniform kindness and courtesy they have invariably shown me since I have been a Member of the Senate.

This message can be conveyed by sending this letter by a page around the Chamber for their perusal; and I am writing to Senator KERN requesting that he will convey my farewell to my Democratic colleagues.

With kind regards,

Very truly, yours, J. R. THORNTON.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 441) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message also announced that the House had passed a joint resolution (H. J. Res. 440) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

The message further announced that the House agrees to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19906) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House agrees to the amendments of the Senate to the following bills:

H. R. 17894. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto," approved February 17, 1911;

H. R. 18685. An act to repeal penalties on foreign-built vessels owned by Americans; and

H. R. 20439. An act for the relief of the heirs of the late Frank Henry Rogers.

The message further announced that the Speaker of the House had appointed a committee of three Members to join a similar committee to be appointed by the Senate to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses, having completed the business of this session, are ready to adjourn, unless the President has some communication to make to them, and that he had appointed Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. FITZGERALD, and Mr. MANN members of the committee on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

The message also announced that the Speaker of the House had signed the following enrolled bills and joint resolutions, and they were thereupon signed by the Vice President:

S. 544. An act for the relief of the Virginia Military Institute, of Lexington, Va.;

S. 4522. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission," approved June 26, 1906;

S. 5495. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to make certain donations of condemned cannon and cannon balls;

S. 7515. An act to reserve lands to the Territory of Alaska for educational uses, and for other purposes;

H. R. 4899. An act to fix the standard barrel for fruits, vegetables, and other dry commodities;

H. R. 5849. An act to amend section 100 of an act entitled "An act to codify, revise, and amend the laws relating to the judiciary," approved March 3, 1911;

H. R. 16738. An act to provide for the payment of certain moneys to school districts in Oklahoma;

H. R. 17894. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto," approved February 17, 1911;

H. R. 18086. An act to transfer certain counties in the several judicial districts in the State of Arkansas;

H. R. 18685. An act to repeal penalties on foreign-built vessels owned by Americans;

H. R. 18747. An act to reserve certain lands and to incorporate the same and make them a part of the Pike National Forest;

H. R. 20439. An act for the relief of Mary L. Rogers, widow of Frank Henry Rogers;

H. R. 20604. An act to construct a public building for a post office at the city of Forsyth, Ga.;

H. R. 21562. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across Pearl River at or near the city of Bogalusa, La.;

H. J. Res. 426. Joint resolution providing that the Congress of the United States shall participate in the celebration of the opening of The Dalles-Celilo Canal;

H. J. Res. 439. Joint resolution to empower the President to better enforce and maintain the neutrality of the United States;

H. J. Res. 440. Joint resolution making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes; and

H. J. Res. 441. Joint resolution making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 570), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That a committee of three Senators be appointed by the Vice President, to join a similar committee appointed by the House of Representatives, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses, having completed the business of the present session, are ready to adjourn unless the President has some other communication to make to them.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Chair appoints the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN], the Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE], and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] as the committee on the part of the Senate.

THE PREFERENTIAL BALLOT (S. DOC. NO. 985).

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, there is on the calendar, reported from the Committee on Printing, Senate resolution 320, providing for the printing of a document on the preferential ballot. I have objected to the printing of that document, but I desire to withdraw by objection and ask that it be printed.

Mr. PENROSE. Mr. President, I also objected to the printing of that document, but as the Senator who has introduced it seems a great deal interested in it, I will now likewise reluctantly withdraw my objection.

The resolution was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the papers presented by the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. HOLLIS] February 11, 1914, being an address by Lewis Jerome Johnson before the First National Conference on Popular Government, held in Washington, D. C., December 6, 1913, upon the subject "The Preferential Ballot as a Possible Substitute for the Direct Primary," be printed as a public document.

ADDITIONAL MESSENGER BOY.

Mr. DILLINGHAM, from the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate, reported with an amendment Senate resolution 561.

Mr. GALLINGER. I ask for the present consideration of the resolution.

The resolution was read and considered by unanimous consent.

The amendment was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That a messenger boy be appointed, for service in the office of the Sergeant at Arms, at the rate of $600 per annum, to be selected by the Sergeant at Arms and paid from the contingent fund of the Senate until otherwise provided by law.

RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. President, I desire to have incorporated in the RECORD a communication from the Chief of Engineers of the United States Army bearing on the lump-sum appropriation for rivers and harbors.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The matter referred to is as follows:

LETTER FROM THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS, UNITED STATES ARMY, TO THE ACTING CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE ON COMMERCE, TRANSMITTING, PURSUANT TO REQUEST, AN ESTIMATE OF THE AMOUNT OF MONEY WHICH SHOULD BE CARRIED BY A LUMP-SUM RIVER AND HARBOR APPROPRIATION BILL SIMILAR TO THE ACT OF OCTOBER 2, 1914.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, February 25, 1915.

HON. DUNCAN U. FLETCHER,
Acting Chairman Committee on Commerce,
United States Senate.

SIR: 1. Replying to your letter of the 23d instant, in which you ask for an estimate of the least amount which should be carried by a lump-sum river and harbor appropriation bill similar to the act of October 2, 1914, in case Congress should consider a lump sum in lieu of section 1 of the pending bill, I have the honor to say that during the consideration of the pending river and harbor bill the estimates have been cut down to what is believed to be the minimum possible that will permit work to be properly prosecuted on all the various improvements which are provided for in the bill. In other words, the sum of $38,627,880, which is now carried by the bill, is all necessary.

2. The bill, as it passed the House, as you are aware, carried considerably less money than the original estimate submitted by this department. As soon as the bill was reported to the House, a copy was sent to each district officer with request to report any changes that could be made in the amounts carried for his district. In no case was a recommendation made that the amount carried could be reduced, but in many cases urgent recommendations were received that the amounts carried be increased. Some, but not all, of the increases recommended by the district officers have been provided for in the bill as it was reported to the Senate. However, as unforeseen conditions, such as inclement weather, high water, etc., may delay the work on some of the improvements, there may be cases where the money will not be spent as rapidly as anticipated, and, if the bill should pass in the form in which it now is, there may be, at the end of the period for which the estimates are made, some works upon which there will be balances left. On other works, the work will proceed more rapidly than estimated, with the result that the funds will be exhausted prior to the end of the period. If the lump-sum appropriation is made, these inequalities can be largely straightened out by making reallotments where necessary, and this ability to make reallotments will also make it possible for a given amount of funds to be used to greater advantage than where the appropriations are available only for specific items and can not be transferred from one appropriation to another. Having this in view, I estimate that if this bill is passed as a lump-sum appropriation, the amount can be reduced to $35,000,000.

3. On the 19th instant there was transmitted to the Senate, in response to a Senate resolution, a statement of the amounts available on January 1. This statement shows that the sum of $30,810,269.55 was available. If this balance is taken into consideration, it may be argued that any further appropriation would be unnecessary at this time, or that, at the most, a very small appropriation would suffice. This is not a fact, for the reason that the balances therein reported were balances from funds which had been appropriated for each particular work and were not available for other works. Of the amount on hand, approximately $4,350,000 were amounts held for works for which an appropriation has been made subject to certain conditions, which conditions had not been fulfilled, and these amounts were therefore not available for expenditure.

4. In other cases, large balances remain on hand which would not be necessary during the period covered by the estimate. For instance, the statement shows on hand and available for the construction of the third lock at the St. Marys Falls Canal, Mich., $758,760.61. This lock is practically completed, and while the available money is not all needed for the present work, it is not available for any other work. In addition to this large balance of money heretofore appropriated, there is an unappropriated authorization under the act of March 2, 1907, of $500,000 for this work. This large balance is due to the work having been done much within the original estimate, and represents that saving over the original estimated cost. If these and other similar funds could be made available for transfer to work where needed, the amount of the appropriation could be reduced by $5,000,000. It is therefore suggested that to the appropriation be coupled the following provisos:

"Provided, That the Secretary of War may, upon the recommendation of the Chief of Engineers, transfer funds heretofore appropriated or authorized for any river or harbor improvement and which will probably not be required for that improvement prior to June 30, 1916, to any other river or harbor improvement for which funds may be needed prior to June 30, 1916: Provided further, That such transfers shall, as far as practicable, be made to improvements in the same engineer district or in an adjacent district."

5. In suggesting these provisos, the condition of the St. Marys Falls Canal is especially in mind. If the authority to make such transfers is given, a transfer from the third lock to the fourth lock of the available balance not needed for the construction of the third lock, and the remaining unappropriated authorization would be recommended, which would permit of making advantageous contracts for the completion of the masonry of the fourth lock with little or no additional allotment from whatever lump-sum appropriation might be made. If the transfer can not be made, in order that the work may be properly prosecuted it will be necessary to make an allotment of approximately $1,200,000.

6. Between January 1, 1915, the date for which the balances above referred to are reported, and February 19, 1915, I have approved contracts amounting to $2,361,360.16; contracts have been awarded, but not yet approved, for $1,366,155.55, and emergency contracts entered into by district officers have been received and accepted, amounting to $131,274.18, a total of $3,858,789.89 obligated in that time.

7. Since the appropriation act of October 2, 1914, was passed, the period has been one of suspended work in all of the northern districts. The contracts which have been referred to are contracts which are being made in anticipation of resumption of work during the coming season, and I mention them merely to show that the funds will be used much more rapidly in the next few months than they have been in the past three or four months.

8. The statement also shows that on January 1 there was available for the improvement of the Delaware River below Philadelphia $712,011.94, whereas on February 1 there was available for this improvement only $416,397.91. Other cases could readily be given which would show a rapid decrease in the amount of the available funds.

9. Should a lump-sum appropriation be made in the same form as the act of October 2, 1914, that is, as a substitute for section 1 only of the regular bill, it would be necessary to make provision for the payment of certain expenses which are regularly paid for out of the appropriation for "Examinations, surveys, and contingencies," ordinarily carried in section 2 of the bill. These expenses are not only the expenses directly connected with making the examinations and surveys, but are certain expenses of printing and payment of technical assistants and clerks in the office of the Chief of Engineers, who handle river and harbor matters, which expenses are authorized by law and amount to approximately $100,000 per annum, as was explained to your committee by Col. Taylor when he appeared before you recently. His statement in regard to these matters appears on pages 333–336 of the report on the river and harbor bill (Rept. 958, 63d Cong., 3d sess.).

10. In order that any doubt as to the availability of funds which are appropriated under a lump-sum appropriation being available for this purpose, it is suggested that the following proviso be added:

"And provided further, That allotments of such amounts as may be necessary may be made toward the completion of examinations and surveys heretofore authorized and for such other contingent expenses as are usually paid from the appropriation for 'Examinations, surveys, and contingencies.'"

However, should section 2 of the pending bill, or a similar section carrying an appropriation for examinations, surveys, and contingencies, be included in the bill, it would not be necessary to include such a proviso.

Very respectfully,

DAN C. KINGMAN,
Chief of Engineers, United States Army.

MEMORANDUM.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE CHIEF OF ENGINEERS,
Washington, February 25, 1915.

An examination of the monthly reports of operations submitted by the district officers for January, 1915, shows that the balances available for many of the works were materially reduced during the month. The available balances on January 1, 1915, and February 1, 1915, of a few of the more important works are given in the following table:

	Jan. 1, 1915.	Feb. 1, 1915.
Boston Harbor, Mass. (35-foot channel)	$44,359.38	$41,880.01
Delaware River, below Philadelphia, Pa.	712,011.94	416,397.91
Baltimore Harbor, Md.	221,895.01	180,759.21
Savannah Harbor, Ga.	257,422.72	143,701.10
St. Johns River, below Jacksonville, Fla.	101,381.15	34,042.83
Mobile Harbor, Ala.	44,283.62	29,012.54
Southwest Pass, Mississippi River (channel to New Orleans, La.)	311,150.71	265,000.00
Los Angeles Harbor, Cal.	95,460.42	89,991.95
Mouth of Columbia River, Oreg. and Wash.	748,883.38	238,339.44
Ohio River (locks and dams)	2,383,328.58	1,911,011.71
Hudson River, N. Y.	622,983.14	566,607.11
Mississippi River Commission	1,802,142.86	1,537,398.10

From this table it will be seen that the balances on these works will be exhausted long before a river and harbor bill could be passed at the next session of Congress, so that, if a bill is not passed at this session, for a considerable period there will be no funds to care for the ordinary maintenance or any emergencies which may arise on these works. The consequences are certain to be serious. In several of them, as for instance the Delaware River below Philadelphia, Pa., Savannah Harbor, Ga., St. Johns River below Jacksonville, Fla., Mobile Harbor, Ala., and Southwest Pass, Mississippi River, constant work is required to maintain the channel which has been obtained, and the suspension of work for any length of time would permit shoaling sufficient to interfere seriously with the commerce now carried on. On all of these works, also, a large plant is maintained, and without further appropriation these plants will be necessarily laid up. The funds for the mouth of Columbia River, Oreg. and Wash., and the Hudson River, N. Y., will be exhausted early in the summer, and on the Ohio River no new work can be undertaken and the work already in progress will be suspended or materially reduced in rate. Should a serious flood occur on the Mississippi River, the Mississippi River Commission will have insufficient funds to fight it, and, unless additional appropriation is made, little effective work could be undertaken on that stream this year. The very large plant which has been accumulated there will be tied up.

SENATOR GEORGE C. PERKINS.

Mr. SIMMONS. Mr. President, speaking on behalf of the Senators on this side of the Chamber, and I am sure giving expression to the sentiments of Senators on the other side of the Chamber, I desire to express my deep and profound regret that the Senate of the United States will lose after to-day one of its most honored and most beloved and most faithful Members, in the fact that the term of office of the senior Senator from California [Mr. PERKINS], who has so long been a Member of this body, will expire when the gavel falls at the hour of 12 o'clock to-day.

Mr. PERKINS. I thank the Senator most sincerely for his very kind expression.

MERCHANT MARINE INVESTIGATION.

The VICE PRESIDENT. In the case of the committee appointed to investigate the shipping business or lobby or whatever it may be called, the term of office of the senior Senator from Ohio [Mr. BURTON] expiring, and the committee continuing, the Chair appoints in his place the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE].

PRESIDENTIAL APPROVALS.

A message from the President of the United States, by Mr. Latta, one of his secretaries, announced that the President had, on the 4th instant, approved and signed the following bills and joint resolution:

S. 136. An act to promote the welfare of American seamen in the merchant marine of the United States; to abolish arrest and imprisonment as a penalty for desertion and to secure the abrogation of treaty provisions in relation thereto; and to promote safety at sea;

S. 7598. An act granting pensions and increase of pensions to certain soldiers and sailors of the Civil War and certain widows and dependent relatives of such soldiers and sailors; and

S. J. Res. 191. Joint resolution to convey appreciation of Congress to their excellencies Señor Domicio da Gama, Señor Rómulo S. Naón, and Señor Eduardo Suárez for their generous and distinguished services as mediators in the controversy between the Government of the United States and the leaders of the warring parties in Mexico.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE (S. DOC. NO. 982).

Mr. BRYAN. As chairman of the subcommittee appointed from the Committee on Naval Affairs I submit a report on Senate resolution 291, adopted May 8, 1914, relative to the development of trade with Central and South American countries and the establishment of adequate coaling supply facilities south of Cape Hatteras, which I ask may be received, printed in the RECORD, and also printed as a public document.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The report will be received and printed as a public document.

Mr. BRYAN subsequently said: I ask that the report submitted by me to-day from the Committee on Naval Affairs may be printed in the RECORD.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Without objection, that action will be taken.

The report is as follows:

On May 8, 1914, the Senate adopted Senate resolution No. 291, reading as follows:

"Whereas in view of the early completion of the Isthmian Canal and of its importance to the United States Navy and the national defense generally, and to the development of trade with Central and South American countries, the establishment of adequate coal-supplying facilities south of Cape Hatteras is deemed imperative; and

"Whereas the usefulness and efficiency of any harbor as a coaling station must depend upon the facilities (first) of the coal producers for reaching it and (second) of the coal carriers in the matter of assembling the product at said port, including coal docks and other facilities for loading and handling, which should be accessible to all shippers and carriers alike on the same terms and conditions; and

"Whereas it appears from numerous complaints now before the Interstate Commerce Commission, as well as from other sources, that the power and influence of the so-called Coal Trust is being persistently used through the management of the railroads reaching South Atlantic ports to prevent the free movement of coal not belonging to said Coal Trust, and it is alleged that practically all of such roads are actually dominated by the same financial interests that control the great coal combines finding outlet chiefly through New York Harbor, Philadelphia, and the Chesapeake Bay ports: Now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Committee on Naval Affairs be, and it is hereby, authorized and instructed to investigate the natural and strategic advantages for naval purposes of ports south of Hatteras as compared with Norfolk and other Chesapeake Bay ports as a permanent point for coal distribution, and included and embraced in the scope of said investigation the said committee is further authorized and instructed to investigate into the character and proximity of the coal supply, and the rates obtainable on coal from the coal fields near by; and the committee is further instructed to ascertain as far as it is practicable—

"First. What quantity of bituminous coal is consumed or used at Charleston, Savannah, Brunswick, Fernandina, and Jacksonville, and in their vicinities, and what proportion of this coal is supplied from mines located on the Pennsylvania Railroad system, including the Baltimore & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, and Chesapeake & Ohio, and what proportion is supplied by mines on the Southern Railway.

"Second. Whether the United States Navy, including the naval stations, now pays a higher freight rate for coal supply at any or all Atlantic seaports than is charged to commercial ships for bunkerage or for coastwise distribution; and whether all coal for naval supply, at the Atlantic seaports, is not supplied by the so-called Coal Trust; that is, by the mines that have a common ownership or control with the coal carriers; and whether present conditions prevent competitive bidding for the United States Navy coal supply, or any part thereof, by independent coal operators.

"Third. The mileage from mine groups located on the Southern Railway in Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Georgia, and Alabama to Wilmington, Charleston, Savannah, Brunswick, Fernandina, and Jacksonville; and the mileage to these same ports, the way the coal is moved from the mines on the Pennsylvania Railroad system and on the Baltimore & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, and Chesapeake & Ohio Railroads and all connecting lines in West Virginia; and in all cases show the freight rates on coals to the cities named, both by rail and rail and water; and where two or more carriers participate, ascertain the proportion of the rate (or service charge) each receives; and also compare these rates with those at seaport towns and cities from Norfolk to New York for local use, for tidewater shipment, and for naval use.

"Fourth. Why the Southern Railway has built no wharves or made no provision for handling tidewater coal at any of the South Atlantic ports, and whether the riparian rights and water frontage of South Atlantic harbors is not now being bought up by the parties in the interest of the Coal Trust, while the Southern Railway is taking no active steps to build for itself an independent outlet.

"Fifth. Whether trustees for the stockholders and members of the board of directors of the Southern Railway are financially interested in coal-mining industries on the Pennsylvania Railroad system, the Baltimore & Ohio, the Norfolk & Western, or the Chesapeake & Ohio, and to what extent; and whether they, or any of them, are financially interested in any coal-mining industries tributary to any of said railways; and, if found to be interested, ascertain whether such mines have been allowed preference or advantages not allowed to all other shippers (shown by cases already decided by the Interstate Commerce Commission or State commissions); and in all coal-mining operations tributary to the Southern Railway in which any director of the Southern Railway or director of any railroad controlled by it, or allied with the Southern Railway, is financially interested, ascertain the division of through rates with other railroads, and in all cases where a coal operation tributary to the Southern Railway controls a local railroad, or when such local railroad is controlled in common with a coal operation, for assembling and distributing its own coal, ascertain just what proportion of rates it receives, if any, from the carriers, or what compensation other than a division of the rates it may receive.

"Sixth. Whether the rate making for the Southern Railway or other southern carriers of coal is dominated by the Pennsylvania Railroad or Norfolk & Western; or whether the freight rates of the Southern Railway and any of the other southern coal carriers are made and fixed and maintained by the traffic men of the Southern Railway and other southern carriers; or whether the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Norfolk & Western Railway, the Baltimore & Ohio, and Chesapeake & Ohio exercise any influence, either through a rate-making or traffic association or otherwise, in the matter of making the rates for the Southern Railway and other southern carriers.

"Seventh. Whether or not there is any discrimination now existing in favor of any one port on the Atlantic seaboard as against another port, and if so, in what does such discrimination consist; and whether or not any coal trust or combination of railroads and coal companies control the coal tonnage to any port or ports, and if so, how; and whether or not the coal supply of West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, and Kentucky flows naturally and without unnecessary obstruction to their respective natural ports upon the Atlantic seaboard; and whether or not there is any discrimination in rates against any coal operators.

"Eighth. The coal rates to 30 or more representative cities on the Southern Railway in Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Florida, and compare these rates with the rates enjoyed by the cities of relative importance and location, with regard to mines, in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan on the Pennsylvania Railroad system, including the cities whose rates are compared in the letter and read into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD by Senator TILLMAN on April 8.

"Ninth. What actual ownership each director of the Southern Railway Co. has in that company, and what ownership, if any, is held in it by the individuals composing the trustees for the stockholders.

"Said Committee on Naval Affairs is authorized to sit during the sessions of the Senate and during any recess of Congress, and its hearings shall be open to the public, and it is authorized and empowered to employ coal experts, railroad-rate experts, and to employ a stenographer at a price not to exceed $1 per printed page. Said committee shall have power to compel witnesses to testify, to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths to witnesses, and do anything necessary to arrive at all the facts.

"The expenses incident to the investigation herein authorized shall not exceed $5,000, and shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers signed by the chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs and approved by the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate. The said Committee on Naval Affairs may, in its discretion, conduct this investigation by a subcommittee of not less than five members, to be appointed by the chairman, and shall make its report as soon as possible."

The undersigned were appointed June 22, 1914, by the chairman as a subcommittee to conduct the investigation and make the report authorized by the resolution. The taking of testimony was begun July 20, 1914, and continued, from time to time, until January 8, 1915.

The resolution had its origin in a letter to Senator TILLMAN, chairman of the Committee on Naval Affairs, from Mr. B. L. Dulaney, dated March 23, 1914. Mr. Dulaney appeared before your committee, and through his counsel completed the testimony which he claims proves the existence of the charges contained in his letter. Having done this, Mr. Dulaney's counsel stated their purpose to withdraw from further participation in the hearings.

The general counsel for the Southern Railway thereupon announced the desire of that company to present evidence to meet the case as made. The question of the reasonableness of the rates upon coal charged by the Southern Railway is, of course, involved; in fact, it is the chief question involved. And by far the greater part of the testimony so far taken has been upon this question.

It would be impossible for the committee to comply with the request of the Southern Railway Co. for a continuation of the hearings and afford it an opportunity to present evidence, without a further allowance from the Senate of funds, because the allowance heretofore made has been exhausted, and without also the expenditure of considerable time in the taking of evidence.

The committee has concluded that it will not request an additional allowance for the expense of continuing the hearings, and that the issues involved do not require further consideration of the resolution, and for the following reasons:

The whole question of coal rates is now before the Interstate Commerce Commission. The case has been argued and submitted, and a decision may be rendered by the commission at any time. Again, our investigation into rates would be but the duplication of work that is now being done by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which, of course, has much better facilities for reaching a just conclusion than we could possibly have without the employment of rate experts at considerable expense.

In view of these facts, your committee do not feel justified in submitting findings of fact upon hearing the testimony of one side only, and for the reasons above stated do not recommend the taking of evidence on behalf of the railway company.

It is unquestionably true that the rates in the territory covered by the Southern Railway are higher than the rates on coal from the fields reached by the Pennsylvania, Baltimore & Ohio, Norfolk & Western, Chesapeake & Ohio, and all connecting lines in West Virginia. It is not surprising that complaints should exist of the high rates in the southern territory, by reason of the fact that coal abounds from Alabama to the West Virginia mines, and the fields, generally speaking, run parallel to and about equally distant from the Atlantic seaboard. It seems beyond dispute that the territory lying between these coal fields and the Atlantic Ocean ought to enjoy reasonable rates upon coal, and that it ought not to be necessary for the ports south of Cape Hatteras to be compelled to pay the combined rail and water rates now existing in order to receive this necessary commodity.

The Southern Railway system was established in 1894 and extends into the coal fields from Alabama to southern Virginia. It has not developed as a coal-carrying road as have other railroads that reach the coal fields. The reasons for its failure to do so can not be determined upon a partial investigation. Indeed, the reasons may not be so important if the policy hereafter shall be, as stated by the general counsel of the company, "to give to the movement of coal of the South Atlantic ports and into the territory served by the Southern Railway Co. every reasonable facility which the resources of the company will permit."

Since this investigation began the Southern Railway has commenced the construction of coal docks at Charleston, S. C. It is claimed by Mr. Dulaney that the installation of these facilities has been due to this investigation. The Southern Railway, on the other hand, contends that it had made arrangements to supply this outlet for coal before the resolution providing for the investigation was considered. Regardless of what the truth may be with reference to this matter, the fact is that the terminals are being built and the rates on coal hereafter will in all probability be as low as obtain at Norfolk.

In view of the fact that the rates are being investigated by the Interstate Commerce Commission, your committee recommends that the evidence taken by it be referred to the commission for its consideration, and that your committee be discharged from further consideration of Senate resolution No. 291.

COMMITTEE SERVICE.

Mr. THOMPSON was, at his own request, excused as a member of the Committee on the Census, as a member of the Committee on Indian Affairs, and as a member of the Committee on Conservation of Natural Resources.

Mr. CAMDEN was, at his own request, excused as a member of the Committee on Philippines.

Mr. CHILTON was, at his own request, excused as a member of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals.

On motion of Mr. KERN, it was Ordered, That Senator W. H. THOMPSON, of Kansas, be, and he is hereby, appointed as a member of the Committee on Interoceanic Canals in place of Senator CHILTON, resigned; and as a member of the committee on the Philippines, in place of Senator CAMDEN, resigned.

THE PREFERENTIAL BALLOT.

Mr. FLETCHER. I ask that the resolution reported by me from the Committee on Printing earlier in the day may be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 573) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to as follows:

Resolved, That the manuscript submitted by Mr. OWEN on February 13, 1915, entitled "The preferential ballot as a substitute for the direct primary," by Lewis Jerome Johnson, be printed as a Senate document.

INDIANS OF WISCONSIN.

The VICE PRESIDENT laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Interior transmitting a further report with respect to the investigation and enrollment of the so-called St. Croix Chippewa Indians of Wisconsin, which, with the accompanying paper, was ordered to lie on the table.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The VICE PRESIDENT presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Idaho, which was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF IDAHO,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, George R. Barker, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of a copy of senate joint memorial No. 2, by Zuck, petitioning the Congress of the United States to extend Federal aid under State direction to the reclamation of arid lands (passed the senate Feb. 2, 1915; passed the house of representatives Feb. 11, 1915), which was filed in this office on the 16th day of February, A. D. 1915, and admitted to record.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 17th day of February, in the year of our Lord 1915, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-ninth.

[SEAL.] GEORGE R. BARKER,
Secretary of State.

SENATE JOINT MEMORIAL NO. 2 (BY ZUCK) PETITIONING THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES TO EXTEND FEDERAL AID UNDER STATE DIRECTION TO THE RECLAMATION OF ARID LANDS.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of Idaho (the House of Representatives concurring).

Whereas upon the production of food staples depends the welfare of the whole people, and any increase in the volume of such production is a direct and distinct benefit to all alike; and

Whereas there are within the State of Idaho approximately 3,000,000 acres of arid lands peculiarly adapted in soil characteristics and topography, as well as favored with climatic conditions, essential to the production of wheat, vegetables, fruits, and other food necessities; and

Whereas this vast acreage of land is unavailable for cultivation because the same requires irrigation, and while there are no insurmountable physical difficulties to prevent water being supplied for the same, yet because of unusual financial conditions its reclamation can not be accomplished by the investment of private capital; and

Whereas the same reasons intervene to obstruct its development by the State of Idaho; and

Whereas because of this there is produced an intolerable condition for those who are endeavoring to establish homes upon this area, and as well the entire Nation is deprived of the benefits which would come if the same were made productive to the point where it would add materially to the food supply of the United States: Now therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States is hereby petitioned to provide for the reclamation of such land, or such portion thereof as may be consistent at this time, by causing to be expended under the direction of the State of Idaho a sufficient amount of national funds to establish for the said land a good and adequate water supply.

Be it further resolved, That a certified copy of this memorial be forwarded to each of the Members of the congressional delegation from the State of Idaho to the Congress of the United States, and that the same shall constitute a request to the said Delegates to employ severally and collectively their best efforts to secure action in the premises.

This joint memorial passed the senate on the 2d day of February, 1915.

HERMAN H. TAYLOR,
President of the Senate.

This joint memorial passed the house of representatives on this 11th day of February, 1915.

A. H. CONNER,
Speaker of the House of Representatives.

This joint memorial received by the secretary of state on the 16th day of February, 1915, at 12.15 o'clock p. m., and approved on the — day of ———, 1915, at — o'clock —. M.

GEORGE R. BARKER,
Secretary of State.

I hereby certify that the within joint memorial No. 2 originated in the senate during the thirteenth session of the Legislature of the State of Idaho.

[SEAL.] S. D. TAYLOR,
Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I present a resolution of the Legislature of Nebraska, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolution.

Whereas this house has been petitioned in behalf of the live-stock industry of the State; and

Whereas the members of the House of Representatives of the Thirty-fourth session of the Nebraska Legislature know conditions therein expressed do exist: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we do now request our representatives in Congress to secure remedial laws for the live-stock industry of the country: And be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted to our representatives in Washington. (Matteson.)

I hereby certify that the above resolution was unanimously adopted this 24th day of February, 1915, by the house of representatives.

First Assistant Chief Clerk.

Mr. PENROSE. I have here a resolution in the nature of a memorial passed by the Legislature of Pennsylvania, which I will ask the Secretary to read. It is short.

There being no objection, the resolution was read, as follows:

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Concurrent resolution No. 5.

Whereas the great industrial Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has suffered more than any other State in the Union because of the present tariff; and

Whereas under its operation our important steel plants, our textile mills, and other industries have been operating only about one-half capacity; and

Whereas the army of unemployed in our cities and towns has brought continued distress through inability to obtain proper food, raiment, and shelter; and

Whereas we believe present conditions will become worse instead of better at the close of the war: It is therefore

Resolved (if the house of representatives concur), That the General Assembly of Pennsylvania, now in session, do request the Congress of the United States to repeal the present tariff law and replace it by a law giving adequate protection to our labor and industries and under normal conditions sufficient revenue to warrant the repeal of the present unjust and uncalled-for special methods of taxation now in operation.

Mr. BRADY. I present a petition of sundry citizens of Pocatello, Idaho, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The petition was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

POCATELLO, IDAHO, December 25, 1914.

Hon. JAMES H. BRADY,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

We, the undersigned citizens of the State of Idaho, petition you respectfully to lend your active support and vote for the adoption of Senate bill 6688, that it may pass the Senate at this session of Congress. We are favoring this resolution for the sake of humanity and strict neutrality.

With best wishes for your success,

Yours, very respectfully, JOHN L. WEGENER (and others).

Mr. WEEKS presented a petition of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of Holyoke, Mass., praying for national prohibition, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Greenfield, Mass., praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the exportation of ammunition, etc., which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of the General Court of Massachusetts, praying for a revision of the tariff laws, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a memorial of Rush Brotherhood, of Cambridge, Mass., remonstrating against the enactment of legislation to prohibit the intermarriage of white and colored persons in the District of Columbia, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

Mr. OLIVER presented petitions of sundry citizens of Pennsylvania, praying for the enactment of legislation to prohibit the exportation of ammunition, etc., which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition of the Missionary Society of Trinity Methodist Protestant Church, of Pittsburgh, Pa., praying for the adoption of an amendment to the Constitution to prohibit polygamy, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN, Mr. STONE, and Mr. GALLINGER, the committee appointed to wait upon the President of the United States, appeared, and

Mr. KERN said:

Mr. President, the committee appointed on the part of the Senate to join a like committee on the part of the House of Representatives to wait upon the President of the United States and to ascertain if he had any further communication to make have performed that duty, and have been informed by the President that he has no further communications to make to either House of Congress.

THANKS TO THE VICE PRESIDENT.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I submit a resolution (S. Res. 571) for which I ask present consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. OVERMAN in the chair). The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Senate are hereby tendered to Hon. Thomas R. Marshall, Vice President of the United States and President of the Senate, for the dignified, impartial, and courteous manner in which he has presided over its deliberations during the present session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the adoption of the resolution just read.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to.

THANKS TO THE PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I take great pleasure in offering the resolution (S. Res. 572) which I send to the desk, and for which I ask immediate consideration.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read as follows:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Senate are hereby tendered to Hon. JAMES P. CLARKE, President pro tempore of the Senate, for the dignified, impartial, and courteous manner in which he has presided over its deliberations during the present session.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to.

FINAL ADJOURNMENT.

The VICE PRESIDENT. Senators, all of us realize that there is a vast deal of difference between that which we know and that which we believe. I hold it to be eternally fit for a man to believe anything that is not wrong, that contributes to his peace of mind and to the happiness of his fellow man.

I realize that the resolution which has just been adopted is a formal resolution always passed in the Senate of the United States; and yet, because I know that it will contribute to my own peace of mind and happiness, I propose to believe that it comes from the hearts of the Senators of the United States of America. [Applause.] I will take it with me in the parole which is about to be granted me from the four years' sentence as Presiding Officer over the Senate of the United States. [Laughter.] It will lighten my vacation, cheer my heart, and draw my mind ofttimes to the pleasant associations I have enjoyed with the Senators of the United States.

May I be permitted to say that when I came here two years ago it was the first time that I ever stepped inside of a legislative body. I know that I have made mistakes, errors sometimes, of the head; but, thank God, I can look you in the face and say to you that there never has been an error of the heart. [Applause.]

I want to thank you for this resolution, and to express the hope that those Senators who leave us permanently may enjoy in the sunset of life the rewards which their labors in the cause of constitutional liberty so well deserve. With them may it be light at eventide. And may I hope, for those who are to return here at the next session of the Congress, that this vacation will give strength of body and strength of mind, and a renewed determination upon the part of all of us, regardless of political faith, that while we are partisans first, we are inevitably and always Americans; and may I hope that when we return here it may be a body unbroken by the advent of the grim messenger of death among us. And may God guard the Republic, and keep it long to the glory of humanity! [Applause.]

The hour of 12 o'clock of the 4th day of March, 1915, has arrived, and, in accordance with the Constitution of the United States, the third session of the Sixty-third Congress of the United States has ended, and the Senate of the United States stands adjourned sine die.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

THURSDAY, March 4, 1915.

(Continuation of proceedings of the legislative day of Tuesday, March 2, 1915).

The recess having expired, at 4 o'clock and 33 minutes the House was called to order by the Speaker.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on the bill (H. R. 19906) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes. I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee presents a conference report upon the Post Office appropriation bill, and asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The conference report is as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1511).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 19906) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 11, 15, 18, 19, 20, 21, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 30, 31, 33, 34, 35, 37, 39, 41, and 42.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 13, 14, 16, 17, 22, 32, and 40, and agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 29: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 29, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 10. That the Postmaster General is authorized and directed to readjust the compensation to be paid to railroad companies from and after the 30th day of June, 1915, or as soon thereafter as may be practicable, for the transportation and handling of the mails and furnishing facilities and services in connection therewith upon the conditions and at the rates hereinafter provided.

"The Postmaster General may state railroad mail routes and authorize mail service thereon of the following four classes, namely: Full railway post-office car service, apartment railway post-office car service, storage-car service, and closed-pouch service.

"Full railway post-office car mail service shall be service by cars 40 feet or more in length, constructed, fitted up, and maintained for the distribution of mails on trains. The authorizations of full railway post-office cars shall be for standard-sized cars 60 feet in length, inside measurement, except as hereinafter provided.

"Apartment railway post-office car mail service shall be service by apartments less than 40 feet in length in cars constructed, fitted up, and maintained for the distribution of mails on trains. Two standard sizes of apartment railway post-office cars may be authorized and paid for, namely, apartments 15 feet and 30 feet in length, inside measurement, except as hereinafter provided.

"Storage car mail service shall be service by cars used for the storage and carriage of mails in transit other than by full and apartment railway post-office cars. The authorizations for storage cars shall be for cars 60 feet in length, inside measurement, except as hereinafter provided: Provided, That less than 60 feet of storage space may be authorized in baggage cars.

"Service by full and apartment railway post-office cars and storage cars shall include the carriage therein of all mail matter, equipment, and supplies for the mail service and the employees of the Postal Service or Post Office Department as shall be directed by the Postmaster General to be so carried.

"Closed-pouch mail service shall be the transportation and handling by railroad employees of mails on trains on which full or apartment railway post-office cars are not authorized, except as hereinbefore provided.

"The rates of payment for the services authorized in accordance with this act shall be as follows, namely:

"For full railway post-office car mail service at not exceeding 21 cents for each mile of service by a 60-foot car.

"In addition thereto he may allow not exceeding $2 as an initial rate and the same as a terminal rate for each one-way trip of a 60-foot car.

"For apartment railway post-office car mail service at not exceeding 11 cents for each mile of service by a 30-foot apartment car and 6 cents for each mile of service by a 15-foot apartment car.

"In addition thereto he may allow not exceeding $1 as an initial rate and the same as a terminal rate for each one-way trip of a 30-foot apartment car and 50 cents as an initial rate and the same as a terminal rate for each one-way trip of a 15-foot apartment car.

"For storage-car mail service at not exceeding 20 cents for each mile of service by a 60-foot car.

"In addition thereto he may allow not exceeding $2 as an initial rate and the same as a terminal rate for each one-way trip of a 60-foot car.

"Where authorizations are made for cars of the standard lengths of 60, 30, and 15 feet, as provided by this act, and the railroad company is unable to furnish such cars of the length authorized, but furnishes cars of lesser length than those authorized, but which are determined by the department to be sufficient for the service, the Postmaster General may accept the same and pay only for the actual space furnished and used, the compensation to be not exceeding pro rata of that provided by this act for the standard length so authorized: Provided, That the Postmaster General may accept cars and apartments of greater length than those of the standard requested, but no compensation shall be allowed for such excess lengths.

"For closed-pouch service, on routes upon which closed-pouch service only is performed, at not exceeding the rates of compensation provided by existing law for average daily weights of mail carried over the whole route; on routes upon which apartment railway post-office car and closed-pouch services are performed, at not exceeding $20 per mile per annum for each 2,000 pounds average daily weight of mails carried, and at pro rata of such rate of compensation for each 100 pounds of average daily weight greater or less than 2,000 pounds; and on routes upon which full railway post-office car and closed-pouch services or full railway post-office car, apartment-car, and closed-pouch services are performed, at not exceeding $19 per mile per annum for each 2,000 pounds average daily weight of mails carried, and at pro rata of such rate of compensation for each 100 pounds of average daily weight greater or less than 2,000 pounds, the average daily weights to be ascertained in every case by the actual weighing of the mails.

"The Postmaster General may require railroad companies carrying the mails to deliver them into and take them from the terminal and intermediate post offices and transfer them between railroad stations on their routes without additional compensation, under such regulations as he may deem proper, in cases where he does not provide for such service otherwise: Provided, That the Postmaster General in his discretion may relieve any of the roads of such service.

"Railroad companies whose railroads were constructed in whole or in part by a land grant made by Congress, on the condition that the mails should be transported over their roads at such price as Congress should by law direct, shall receive only 80 per cent of the compensation otherwise authorized by this act.

"The initial and terminal rates provided for herein shall cover expenses of loading and unloading mails, switching, lighting, heating, cleaning mail cars, and all other expenses incidental to station service and required by the Postmaster General in connection with the mails that are not included in the car-mile rate. The allowance for full railway post-office cars, apartment railway post-office cars, and storage cars may be varied in accordance with the approximate difference in their respective cost of construction and maintenance.

"For the purpose of ascertaining the average weight of closed-pouch mails per day upon which to adjust compensation, the Postmaster General is authorized and directed to have such mails carried on the several routes weighed by the employees of the Post Office Department for such a number of successive days, not less than 35, at such times after the passage of this act, as he may direct, and not less frequently than once in every year thereafter, the result to be stated and certified in such form and manner as he may direct. In computing the average weight of mails per day carried on a railroad route, the whole number of days included in the weighing period shall be used as a divisor. The expense of taking the weights of mails and the compensation to tabulators and clerks employed in connection with the weighings, for assistance in completing computations, and of rentals, if necessary, in Washington, D. C., shall be paid out of the appropriation for inland transportation by railroad routes.

"In computing the car miles of the full railway post-office cars and apartment railway post-office cars, the maximum space authorized in either direction of a round-trip car run shall be regarded as the space to be computed in both directions, unless otherwise mutually agreed upon.

"In computing the car miles of storage cars, the maximum space authorized in either direction of a round-trip car run shall be regarded as the space to be computed in both directions, unless the car be used by the company in the return movement, or otherwise mutually agreed upon.

"New service and additional service may be authorized at not exceeding the rates herein provided, and service may be reduced or discontinued with pro rata reductions in pay, as the needs of the Postal Service may require: Provided, That no additional pay shall be allowed for additional closed-pouch service on established routes until the next regular readjustment of pay therefor on such routes, and no additional pay shall be allowed for additional car service unless specifically authorized by the Postmaster General.

"All cars or parts of cars used for the Railway Mail Service shall be of such construction, style, length, and character, and furnished in such manner as shall be required by the Postmaster General, and shall be constructed, fitted up, maintained, heated, lighted, and cleaned by and at the expense of the railroad companies. No pay shall be allowed for service by any railway post-office car which is not sound in material and construction and which is not equipped with sanitary drinking-water containers and toilet facilities, nor unless such car is regularly and thoroughly cleaned. No pay shall be allowed for service by any wooden full railway post-office car unless constructed substantially in accordance with the most approved plans and specifications of the Post Office Department for such type of cars, nor for service by any wooden full railway post-office car run in any train between adjoining steel cars, or between the engine and a steel car adjoining. After the 1st of July, 1917, the Postmaster General shall not approve or allow to be used, or pay for service by, any full railway post-office car not constructed of steel or steel underframe or equally indestructible material, and not less than 25 per cent of the full railway post-office cars of a railway company not conforming to these provisions on August 24, 1912, shall be replaced with cars constructed of steel annually after June, 1913; and all full railway post-office cars accepted for this service and contracted for by the railroad companies hereafter shall be constructed of steel. Until July 1, 1917, in cases of emergency and in cases where the necessities of the service require it, the Postmaster General may provide for service by full railway post-office cars of other than steel or steel underframe construction, and fix therefor such rate of compensation within the maximum herein provided as shall give consideration to the inferior character of construction, and the railroad companies shall furnish service by such cars at such rates so fixed.

"Service over property owned or controlled by another company or a terminal company shall be considered service of the railroad company using such property and not that of the other or terminal company: Provided, That service over a land-grant road shall be paid for as herein provided.

"Railroad companies carrying the mails shall furnish all necessary facilities for caring for and handling them while in their custody. They shall furnish all cars or parts of cars used in the transportation and distribution of the mails, except as is herein otherwise provided, and place them in stations before the departure of trains at such times and when required to do so. They shall provide station space and rooms for handling, distribution, and transfer of mails in transit, and for offices and rooms for the employees of the Postal Service engaged in such transportation, when required by the Postmaster General.

"Every railroad company carrying the mails shall carry on any train it operates and without extra charge therefor the persons in charge of the mails, and when on duty and traveling to and from duty, and all duly accredited agents and officers of the Post Office Department and the Postal Service, while traveling on official business, upon the exhibition of their credentials.

"If any railroad company carrying the mails shall fail or refuse to provide cars or apartments in cars for distribution purposes when required by the Postmaster General, or shall fail or refuse to construct, fit up, maintain, heat, light, and clean such cars and provide such appliances for use in case of accident as may be required by the Postmaster General, it shall be fined such reasonable sum as may, in the discretion of the Postmaster General, be deemed proper.

"The Postmaster General shall in all cases decide upon what trains and in what manner the mails shall be conveyed. Every railroad company carrying the mails shall carry on any train it operates and with due speed all mailable matter, equipment, and supplies directed to be carried thereon. If any such railroad company shall fail or refuse to transport the mails, equipment, and supplies when required by the Postmaster General on any train or trains it operates, such company shall be fined such reasonable amount as may, in the discretion of the Postmaster General, be deemed proper.

"The Postmaster General may make deductions from the pay of railroad companies carrying the mails under the provisions of this act for reduction in service or in frequency of service where, in his judgment, the importance of the facilities withdrawn or reduced requires it, and impose fines upon them for delinquencies. He may deduct the price of the value of the service in cases where it is not performed, and not exceeding three times its value if the failure be occasioned by the fault of the railroad company.

"The provisions of this section shall apply to service operated by railroad companies partly by railroad and partly by steamboats.

"The provisions of this section respecting the rates of compensation shall not apply to mails conveyed under special arrangement in freight trains, for which rates not exceeding the usual and just freight rates may be paid, in accordance with the classifications and tariffs approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"Railroad companies carrying the mails shall submit, under oath, when, and in such form as may be required by the Postmaster General, evidence as to the performance of service.

"The Postmaster General is authorized to employ such clerical and other assistance as shall be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section, and to rent quarters in Washington, D. C., if necessary, for the clerical force engaged thereon, and to pay for the same out of the appropriation for inland transportation by railroad routes, and hereafter detailed estimates shall be submitted for such services in the annual Book of Estimates.

"The Postmaster General shall, from time to time, request information from the Interstate Commerce Commission as to the revenue received by railroad companies from express companies for services rendered in the transportation of express matter, and may, in his discretion, arrange for the transportation of mail matter other than of the first class at rates not exceeding those so ascertained and reported to him, and it shall be the duty of the railroad companies to carry such mail matter at such rates fixed by the Postmaster General.

"The Postmaster General is authorized, in his discretion, to petition the Interstate Commerce Commission for the determination of a postal carload or less-than-carload rate for transportation of mail matter of the fourth class and periodicals, and may provide for and authorize such transportation, when practicable, at such rates, and it shall be the duty of the railroad companies to provide and perform such service at such rates and on the conditions prescribed by the Postmaster General.

"The Postmaster General may, in his discretion, distinguish between the several classes of mail matter and provide for less frequent dispatches of mail matter of the third and fourth classes and periodicals, when lower rates for transportation or other economies may be secured thereby without material detriment to the service.

"The Postmaster General is authorized to return to the mails, when practicable for the utilization of car space paid for and not needed for the mails, postal cards, stamped envelopes, newspaper wrappers, empty mail bags, furniture, equipment, and other supplies for the Postal Service.

"The Postmaster General, in cases of emergency between October 1 and April 1 of any year, may hereafter return to the mails empty mail bags and other equipment theretofore withdrawn therefrom as required by law, and where such return requires additional authorization of car space under the provisions of this section to pay for the transportation thereof as provided for herein out of the appropriation for inland transportation by railroad routes.

"The Postmaster General may have the weights of mail taken on railroad mail routes and computations of the average loads of the several classes of cars and other computations for statistical and administrative purposes made at such times as he may elect, and pay the expense thereof out of the appropriation for inland transportation by railroad routes.

"It shall be unlawful for any railroad company to refuse to perform mail service at the rates of compensation provided by law when and for the period required by the Postmaster General so to do, and for every such offense it shall be fined not exceeding $5,000.

"That the appropriations for inland transportation by railroad routes and for railway post-office car service for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, are hereby made available for the purposes of this section.

"That after the rates specified in this act shall have been in effect for a period of one year, the Interstate Commerce Commission shall, whenever requested by the Postmaster General or by the representatives of railroads with an aggregate mileage of at least 51 per cent of the mileage of railroads carrying mail, make an investigation of the justice and reasonableness of rates then in effect, grant hearings to parties in interest, and report to Congress at the earliest practicable date thereafter the results of such investigation, making specific findings as to whether the rates fixed herein should be increased or decreased and if either, how much: Provided further, That such investigations thereafter shall not be made more frequently than biennially. Such report shall show for each steam railroad operating company if practicable, the amount of mail service rendered, the cost of performing same, and a comparison of the earnings of such railroad company from mail traffic with those from express traffic and other passenger train traffic. For the purposes of such investigations the Interstate Commerce Commission shall have all powers which it is now authorized to exercise in the investigation of the reasonableness of rates, and the Postmaster General shall supply such information regarding the mail service as may be requested by the Interstate Commerce Commission: Provided further, That the Postmaster General may, in his discretion, make independent investigations and reports."

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 36: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 36, and agree to the same with an amendment, as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 17. That section 3949 of the Revised Statutes be amended to read as follows:

"'All contracts for carrying the mail shall be in the name of the United States, and shall be awarded to the lowest bidder tendering sufficient guaranties for faithful performance in accordance with the terms of the advertisement: Provided, however, That such contracts require due celerity, certainty, and security in the performance of the service; but the Postmaster General shall not be bound to consider the bid of any person who has willfully or negligently failed to perform a former contract.'"

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment numbered 38: That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 38, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter stricken out by the Senate amendment insert the following:

"SEC. 19. That section 3938 of the Revised Statutes be amended to read as follows:

"'All letters of domestic origin which can not be delivered by postmasters or returned to the writers shall be sent to the Dead Letter Office, or a branch thereof, and such as contain inclosures of value, other than correspondence, shall be recorded. If the sender or addressee can not be identified, such letters shall be held for a period of one year awaiting reclamation. If within one year they have not been claimed, they shall be disposed of as the Postmaster General may direct.

"'All other undeliverable letters shall be disposed of without record and not held for reclamation.'"

And the Senate agree to the same.

Amendment No. 24: Repealing act approved August 24, 1912, relating to so-called "blue-tag matter"—sending second-class matter by freight. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 25: To amend existing law so as to extend the period during which the department may ship mail bags in mail trains at railroad mail rates in emergencies. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 26: To enable the Postmaster General to substitute estimated weights in cases where, because of interruptions in service on account of floods or other causes, the weights taken are shown to have been below the normal or the mails were not weighed, the estimated weights to be based on the average weights for the normal period. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 27: Readjustment for diversions of mail: To amend existing law by repealing the provision of section 4 of an act approved August 24, 1912. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 28: To provide for transferring clerks from post offices of the first and second classes to the Railway Mail Service at salaries higher than the lowest in the Railway Mail Service. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 29: New method of fixing railway mail pay: To provide a new plan for the authorization and regulation of railroad mail service and fixing rates of compensation therefor. House agrees, with amendment.

Amendment No. 30: To enable the allowance of additional compensation on railroad routes from August 15, 1913, on account of the extension of weight limit and change in rates on parcel-post matter. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 31: To enable the Postmaster General to make allowance of additional compensation on railroad routes from January 1, 1914, for the additional weight of mails carried as a result of the extension of weight limit and reduction in rates on parcel-post mails effective from that date. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 32: To reduce the minimum of pieces of third and fourth class matter which may be accepted for mailing without stamps affixed, the postage being collected in money, and to extend such privilege to matter of the second class mailed at the special rates of 1 cent and 2 cents a copy. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 33: To modify the restrictions on the amount that may be accepted from a postal-savings depositor, with the proviso that interest shall not be paid on more than $1,000. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 34: To enable the department to expedite payments to carriers on star mail routes who have performed service for contractors and have not been paid the amounts due them. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 35: To provide for temporary service on star routes when necessary. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 36: To permit the department to prescribe the mode of transportation where necessary on star mail routes. House agrees, with amendment.

Amendment No. 37: To give ample protection to all boxes intended or used for the receipt or delivery of mail on any mail route. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 38: To facilitate the disposition of undeliverable letters and to avoid their accumulation in the department beyond a period when reclamation is not desired.

As amended, the section will read as follows:

"All letters of domestic origin which can not be delivered by postmasters or returned to the writers shall be sent to the Dead Letter Office or a branch thereof, and such as contain inclosures of value, other than correspondence, shall be recorded. If the sender or addressee can not be identified, such letters shall be held for a period of one year awaiting reclamation. If within one year they have not been claimed, they shall be disposed of as the Postmaster General may direct.

"All other undeliverable letters shall be disposed of without record and not held for reclamation."

House agrees, with amendment.

Amendment No. 39: To enable Postmaster General to provide star-route service when in his opinion bids submitted are exorbitant, unreasonable, or result of combination of bidders to fix rates. Senate recedes.

Amendment No. 40: To provide additional pay to rural carriers engaged in village delivery. House agrees.

Amendment No. 41: To authorize the reimbursement of Navy mail clerks and assistant Navy mail clerks for certain losses of postage stamps, postal funds, money order funds, and certain other Government property. Senate recedes.

JOHN A. MOON,
D. E. FINLEY,
MARTIN B. MADDEN.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the gentleman withhold that motion for a question?

Mr. MOON. I will.

Mr. STAFFORD. The statement, so far as amendment 29, says that it was agreed to with an amendment. Will the chairman indicate what changes have been made—that is, with reference to the railway mail pay?

Mr. MOON. The section remains exactly as it passed the House, except in three particulars: First, the 30-foot railway post-office car; the bill had 10½ cents a mile, and the conferees agreed upon 11 cents. On the 15-foot railway post-office car it was 5½ cents, and the conferees agreed upon 6.

Then, there is an amendment placed at the end of that section that provides that if the Postmaster General or 51 per cent of the mileage of the railways of the United States shall desire it, they may file an application with the Interstate Commerce Commission, and proceedings shall be had there to determine whether the rates existing in this bill are just or not. The complainant has all the opportunities he would have in court, and the Interstate Commerce Commission has all powers that it now has to investigate matters under the statutes, and the commission is to report to Congress its findings. The law must remain one year as it is before the department or the railway companies can demand that investigation or report. Thereafter it can be demanded only every two years.

Mr. STAFFORD. As I understand it, if this bill becomes a law neither the Postmaster General nor 50 per cent of the railway carriers, if they elect, can petition the Interstate Commerce Commission for a determination as to whether the rates are just and reasonable until the expiration of one year of its enforcement.

Mr. MOON. No; they make the findings and report to Congress, and Congress will determine whether they are just and reasonable.

Mr. STAFFORD. In the contingency that the Interstate Commerce Commission should find that they are not just and reasonable?

Mr. MOON. The report will be made to Congress, and Congress will determine that question.

Mr. STAFFORD. One other question. What was done so far as the increase of salary which the House bill provided for the supervisory officials? Was there any change made whatever along the lines recommending an increase of pay to supervisory officials as carried in the House bill?

Mr. MOON. The provision remains in the House bill.

Mr. MADDEN. No; the Senate struck that out, and the House conferees agreed.

Mr. STAFFORD. Those are amendments 5 and 7.

Mr. MOON. Will the Clerk read what the statement says about amendment 5?

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment 5. For compensation to clerks and employees at first and second class post offices—providing for superintendent of finance in lieu of assistant postmasters—the House agrees.

Mr. MOON. I did not realize the amendment that the gentleman inquired about. The House bill failed to make appropriations for assistant postmasters, and the Senate disagreed to that proposition, and included a sum of money necessary to pay the assistant postmasters in accordance with the old law. The conferees have accepted the Senate amendment.

Mr. STAFFORD. In the House bill we provided an increase of salary for supervisory officials to the extent of more than $3,000,000.

Mr. MADDEN. That is all taken out.

Mr. STAFFORD. Will the Clerk read the statement as to amendment No. 7?

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment No. 7, providing for a reclassification of supervisory employees at first and second class post offices on the basis of receipts of office; House agrees.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee a question: There are two increases for the provision of railway mail pay, on the 15-foot and the 30-foot car. What will that increase amount to?

Mr. MOON. One million two hundred and ten thousand dollars.

Mr. MURDOCK. Was there any change made in the storage cars?

Mr. MOON. No; the House bill remains the same.

Mr. MURDOCK. What was done in regard to the discretion left with the Postmaster General in connection with the use of the words "not exceeding"?

Mr. MOON. Those words have been in the statute for 45 years, and we declined to strike them out because we believe the present Postmaster General will discharge his duties like all of the others have.

Mr. MURDOCK. So those words are left in?

Mr. MOON. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. One more question. What is the estimated total railway mail pay with these two increases?

Mr. MOON. It is estimated under this bill that it was $63,247,000, and then there would be added $1,210,000.

Mr. MURDOCK. Sixty-three million dollars under the bill?

Mr. MOON. No; $62,000,000 now.

Mr. MURDOCK. And it will go above the $63,000,000?

Mr. MOON. Yes.

Mr. MURDOCK. Does the gentleman know how much it would have been under the old method?

Mr. MOON. It would have been less than it is now. I think the department estimated some $580,000 less.

Mr. MURDOCK. That is on the weight pay?

Mr. MOON. Yes. The railroads are getting that much more, but under the space system we can recoup all of those losses in the handling of the mail and profit very largely under the act.

Mr. AUSTIN. What became of the proposition to give the rural carriers an extra $100 for a standard route of not less than 24 miles?

Mr. MOON. The proposition of the rural carriers was acceded to by the Senate just as it passed the House, and was not in conference.

Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

By unanimous consent, leave to extend remarks in the RECORD was granted to the following:

Mr. LEWIS of Maryland, Mr. CRAMTON, Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas, Mr. CARAWAY, Mr. BARKLEY, Mr. MURDOCK, Mr. LEVY, Mr. MOTT, Mr. RAINEY, Mr. AINEY, and Mr. GOLDFOGLE.

RECESS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess until 9 o'clock this morning.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that the House stand in recess until 9 o'clock a. m. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 58 minutes a. m.) the House stood in recess until 9 o'clock a. m. to-day, March 4, 1915.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House (at 9 o'clock a. m.) was called to order by the Speaker.

SAFE BOILERS FOR LOCOMOTIVES.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Georgia rise?

Mr. ADAMSON. To call attention to the fact that there is a little boiler-inspection bill, that you recognized me on last night, that has come over. It is on the Speaker's table.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

An act (H. R. 17894) to amend an act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers on railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto," approved February 17, 1911.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. ADAMSON. Mr. Speaker, apologizing for saying "last night" instead of "this morning," I move to concur in the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. ADAMSON, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the Senate amendment was agreed to was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Carr, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed with amendment bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

H. R. 17894. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to promote the safety of employees and travelers upon railroads by compelling common carriers engaged in interstate commerce to equip their locomotives with safe and suitable boilers and appurtenances thereto," approved February 17, 1911.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed the following joint resolution, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. J. Res. 245. Joint resolution providing for the payment of salaries of officers and employees of the Senate and House of Representatives in full for month of March, 1915, on the 4th day of March, 1915.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED.

Mr. ASHBROOK, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

H. R. 18747. An act to reserve certain lands and to incorporate the same and make them a part of the Pike National Forest; and

H. R. 8846. An act making appropriation for payment of certain claims in accordance with findings of the Court of Claims, reported under the provisions of the acts approved March 3, 1883, and March 3, 1887, and commonly known as the Bowman and the Tucker Acts, and under the provisions of section No. 151 of the act approved March 3, 1911, commonly known as the Judicial Code.

The SPEAKER announced his signature to enrolled bills of the following titles:

S. 4522. An act to amend an act entitled "An act to amend an act entitled 'An act to regulate commerce,' approved February 4, 1887, and all acts amendatory thereof, and to enlarge the powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission," approved June 29, 1906;

S. 544. An act for the relief of the Virginia Military Institute, of Lexington, Va.;

S. 7515. An act to reserve lands to the Territory of Alaska for educational uses, and for other purposes; and

S. 5042. An act legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada.

DISPOSAL OF CLOTHING OR UNIFORMS.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, I move to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 7051.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill S. 7051, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 7051) to authorize the disposal of clothing or uniforms which have become unserviceable or unsuitable.

Be it enacted, etc., That whenever any clothing or uniforms, which have heretofore, or may hereafter be furnished by the War Department to any State, or Territory, or the District of Columbia, have become unserviceable, or unsuitable from use in the service, or from any other cause, they shall be examined by a disinterested surveying officer of the Organized Militia, to be appointed by the governor of the State or Territory, or the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, to which the clothing or uniforms have been issued, and his report shall be forwarded by said governor or commanding general direct to the Secretary of War, and if it shall appear to the Secretary of War from the record of survey that said clothing or uniforms are unserviceable or unsuitable for the purposes for which intended, then the buttons or braid thereon, if any, shall be removed therefrom, and the said clothing or uniforms shall be turned over to the governor of the State or Territory, or to the commanding general of the National Guard of the District of Columbia, to which said clothing or uniforms were furnished, to be by him distributed among the destitute of his State, Territory, or District of Columbia, in such manner as to him may seem proper and just.

SEC. 2. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent with these provisions are hereby repealed.

Also the following committee amendment was read:

Page 2, lines 1 and 2, after the word "issued," insert "or by a disinterested officer of the Regular Army, to be appointed by the Secretary of War."

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object——

POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT APPROPRIATIONS.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the following joint resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of House joint resolution 440, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 440) making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes.

Resolved, etc., That all appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department which shall remain unprovided for on June 30, 1915, are continued and made available for and during the fiscal year 1916 to the same extent, in detail, and under the same conditions, restrictions, and limitations for the fiscal year 1916 as the same were provided for on account of the fiscal year 1915 in the Post Office appropriation act for that fiscal year. For all of such purposes a sufficient sum is appropriated in conformity with the act of July 2, 1836, not to exceed in the aggregate the amount appropriated for the fiscal year 1915: Provided, That if the revenues of the Post Office Department shall be insufficient to meet the appropriations made by this joint resolution, a sum equal to such deficiency of the revenues of said department is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to supply said deficiencies in the revenues for the Post Office Department for the year ending June 30, 1916, and the sum needed may be advanced to the Post Office Department upon requisition of the Postmaster General: Provided further, That this joint resolution shall not be construed as providing for or authorizing the duplication of any special payment or for the execution of any purpose provided for in said appropriation act that was intended to be paid only once or done solely on account of the fiscal year 1915: And provided further, That letter carriers assigned to collection service who were promoted to the higher grades in accordance with the classification act, approved March 2, 1907, and whose salaries have been reduced during the past year, through no delinquency or charges of misconduct on their part, shall be restored to their former grades: Provided also, That on and after July 1, 1915, the compensation of each rural letter carrier for serving a rural route of 24 miles and over, 6 days in the week, shall be $1,200 per annum, payable monthly; on routes 22 miles and less than 24 miles, $1,152; on routes 20 miles and less than 22 miles, $1,080; on routes 18 miles and less than 20 miles, $960; on routes 16 miles and less than 18 miles, $840; on routes 14 miles and less than 16 miles, $720; on routes 12 miles and less than 14 miles, $672; on routes 10 miles and less than 12 miles, $624; on routes 8 miles and less than 10 miles, $576; on routes 6 miles and less than 8 miles, $528; on routes 4 miles and less than 6 miles, $480. A rural letter carrier serving one triweekly route shall be paid on the basis for a route one-half the length of the route served by him, and a carrier serving two triweekly routes shall be paid on the basis for a route one-half of the combined length of the two routes: Provided, That in the discretion of the Postmaster General, the pay of carriers who furnish and maintain their own motor vehicles and who serve routes not less than 50 miles in length may be fixed at not exceeding $1,800 per annum.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, the situation in the Senate is such that it seems that neither the Post Office appropriation bill nor the Indian appropriation bill can become law. This resolution to continue the appropriations has been prepared by the experts in the Committee on Appropriations in conference with the experts in the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants in the Treasury Department and with the Comptroller of the Treasury. It continues the existing appropriations for the current year and in addition carries two provisions which were agreed to by the managers of the two Houses in the Post Office appropriation bill—one to protect the city carriers from demotion, in order to accomplish a saving, and the other the provision fixing the compensation of the rural carriers. These provisions are inserted because of suggestions that if they were not contained in the resolution in all probability it could not be passed in this House. Our obligations to provide the money to carry on the Government necessitates this resolution. I hope it will be adopted.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read a third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. FITZGERALD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution was passed was laid on the table.

APPROPRIATIONS FOR INDIANS, ETC.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the House joint resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House joint resolution (H. J. Res. 441) making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indians Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

Resolved, etc., That all appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs and for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, which shall remain unprovided for on June 30, 1915, are continued and made available for and during the fiscal year 1916 to the same extent, in detail, and under the same conditions, restrictions, and limitations for the fiscal year 1916 as the same were provided for on account of the fiscal year 1915 in the Indian appropriation act for that fiscal year. For all of such purposes a sufficient sum is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, or out of funds to the credit of Indians as the same were respectively provided in the Indian appropriation act for the fiscal year 1915: Provided, That the appropriations from the Treasury of the United States or from Indian funds shall not exceed in the aggregate the amounts of such appropriations for the fiscal year 1915: Provided further, That this joint resolution shall not be construed as providing for or authorizing the duplication of any special payment or for the execution of any purpose provided for in said appropriation act that was intended to be paid only once or done solely on account of the fiscal year 1915: Provided further, That appropriations continued hereunder shall be available for the maintenance, repair, and operation of motor-propelled and horse-drawn passenger-carrying vehicles in the same manner as appropriations were available for those purposes during the fiscal year 1915.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question? I want to ask the gentleman from

New York if under this resolution the same amount of money can be expended for different purposes as was appropriated in the appropriation bill for the current year?

Mr. FITZGERALD. The same sum.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Let me ask the gentleman in reference to this matter. There is an item in the current appropriation bill authorizing expenditure of $600,000, known as the industrial fund. The bill which failed, or will fail, assuming that it will not be passed by the Senate, this year carried $200,000. In conference it was agreed to at $300,000. What I wish to know is, will the Indian Bureau now have an appropriation of $600,000 for that purpose to be expended in the next fiscal year?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, it depends on the character of the appropriation. This resolution provides that it shall not be construed as providing for or authorizing the duplication of any special payment or for the execution of any purpose provided in said appropriation act that was intended to be paid only once or done solely on account of the fiscal year 1915.

If the item to which the gentleman refers has been annual in character, then the $600,000 would be available. If it were a specific appropriation for a specific purpose, nothing is provided under this resolution.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. Take an appropriation for a reclamation project where the appropriation for the fiscal year is, we will say, $300,000, and possibly in appropriating this year we might not think it wise to appropriate more than $50,000 or $100,000, does the gentleman think they could expend $300,000?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I would doubt it on an appropriation for such a purpose as indicated by the gentleman. Of course the gentleman will appreciate the difficulty of preparing a resolution which extends appropriations.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. I appreciate that.

Mr. FITZGERALD. These resolutions have been passed by Congress as to various services since 1876. This resolution has been prepared after consultation with the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants in the Treasury Department and the Comptroller of the Treasury. There will unquestionably be some embarrassment and there will be some doubt as to the construction to be given some of the appropriations.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. The real intention of such resolution——

Mr. FITZGERALD. The intention is to extend the items of annual appropriations.

Mr. BURKE of South Dakota. And such appropriations in order to carry on the business of the department for which you are making the appropriations that are absolutely necessary in the interest of public business.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Specific appropriations for specific purposes, where it is clear that they were intended that there should be but one appropriation, are not continued.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the resolution?

There was no objection.

The resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, was read a third time, and passed.

On motion of Mr. FITZGERALD, a motion to reconsider the vote by which the resolution was passed was laid on the table.

DISPOSAL OF UNSERVICEABLE OR UNSUITABLE CLOTHING OR UNIFORMS.

Mr. GARD. Mr. Speaker, I believe the pending matter is the consideration of the bill (S. 7051) to authorize the disposal of clothing or uniforms which have become unserviceable or unsuitable.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the consideration of the bill? The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARD] had made the request, and that matter was hung up.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, we are within two and one-half hours of the time of the adjournment of this Congress. I think that proposition is altogether too important to take up at this time, with only a small proportion of the membership of the House present. Gentlemen will say, "Well, it is something that ought to be done now, and this is the last chance"; but my experience and observation is that when things wait until the last moment they have a very slim chance of getting through. Now, I had a bill which passed the House and is pending in the Senate. It did not bear my name, but I drew it—the bureau of labor safety bill. But I realized several days ago what the situation was. Probably the bill ought to have been passed before. Smilingly and with contentment, and with the expectation to renew the proposition in another Congress, I realize that in this Congress that bill will not become a law. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GARD] will have to come to the same serene contentment and knowledge.

Mr. GARD. Will the gentleman withhold his objection?

Mr. MANN. I shall be very glad to withhold my objection while the gentleman makes a speech.

Mr. GARD. I do not desire to make a speech. I simply desire to call the attention of the gentleman to the fact that this is a purely local matter. It is not of general application. It simply means that about 1,800 Army overcoats, which have been declared unserviceable, can be distributed to miners who are in distress, instead of destroying the overcoats; the present law, as I understand it, being mandatory that these uniforms and coats shall be destroyed if declared to be unserviceable. Now, these overcoats have been declared by a survey to be unserviceable. The proposition is just a little local one, whether these 1,500 or 1,800 overcoats can be distributed among these miners who are in distress for clothing, by the governor of the State of Ohio, or whether they shall be burned or otherwise destroyed.

Mr. MANN. Of course I could not tell by hearing the bill read, and I may be in error as to the House bill which was reported; but my recollection was that it was a bill general in terms.

Mr. GARD. Oh, no; it is not general. It is just for the relief of that situation which I speak of.

Mr. JOHNSON of Kentucky. I will say to the gentleman that I have read the bill since it went to the Speaker's desk, and I am quite sure it is a general bill.

Mr. MANN. If it is not a general bill, I am clear off on my reading of the House bill. Formerly when United States Army clothing was no longer serviceable, and many times when it was, it was sold. When I was a young boy everybody wore a United States Army uniform or overcoat. Those were left over from the Civil War.

Mr. GARD. That is still the law; but if they are declared to be unserviceable, then they must be destroyed.

Mr. MANN. Oh, no. These were declared unserviceable for the Army, and they had been sold. In Chicago and in New York they have stores selling quartermasters' stores purchased from the Army, and we have recently had reported from the Quartermaster's Office or from the office of the Secretary of War a long list, covering page after page, showing that certain sales of quartermasters' materials have been made. Retail stores are run out of the goods purchased at those sales. If these overcoats are so unserviceable that they can not be sold, they ought not to be given away to some poor suckers; and if the law has been changed so that they can not sell them, in order to prevent the Army uniform being worn, I am not in favor of changing it without consideration.

Mr. GARD. The language of the present law is—

> * * * If the articles so surveyed are found to be unserviceable or unsuitable, the Secretary of War shall direct what disposition, by sale or otherwise, shall be made of them, except unserviceable clothing, which shall be destroyed; and if sold, the proceeds of such sale shall be covered into the Treasury of the United States.

Now, as I have said, these overcoats, or almost the entire bulk of them, have been declared unserviceable.

Mr. MANN. What is the date of the law which the gentleman has quoted?

Mr. GARD. That is section 4 of the act of February 12, 1897, amended by section 4 of the act of June 22, 1906.

Mr. MANN. Passed, I take it, for the purpose of preventing Army uniforms being scattered around the country for everybody to wear and representing themselves to be soldiers?

Mr. GARD. I do not know the purpose of it, but there is no danger of that in this bill, because it provides that the emblems of the militia shall be removed, and these overcoats made as nearly like the overcoats of civilians as they can be, and they will merely be applied to relieve this condition of local distress.

Mr. MANN. What is the number of the House bill?

Mr. GARD. I do not know the number of the House bill. This is the Senate bill.

Mr. MANN. Has the gentleman completed his statement?

Mr. GARD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois objects.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ELECTRICAL VOTING DEVICE.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, I should like to call up the electrical voting device proposition which I sent up day before yesterday (H. Res. 513).

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield before he calls that up?

Mr. LLOYD. Yes.

Mr. MANN. That is a very important matter. It involves not only the convenience of the Members, but, I think, the integrity of the proceedings of the House. It does not seem to me that we ought to act upon that without considerable discussion and a full membership in the House. I would be unwilling to let that come up before the House without the presence of a quorum and as many more Members as we could get. I hope the gentleman will let it go over. The gentleman and I will be here in the next Congress.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, I shall have to object to it anyway.

Mr. LLOYD. It is not my purpose to interfere with a quorum at this late hour in the session. I called it up to ascertain whether anybody was going to make an objection to it on the ground of no quorum.

Mr. MADDEN. No; I would not do that, but I object to it on its merits, for I do not think we ought to use artificial devices for voting. Some one might take the key and vote four or five Members.

Mr. LLOYD. If the point of no quorum is to be made, I do not wish to call it up.

Mr. MANN. It would be raised.

ELSIE M'CAULLEY.

Mr. BROCKSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the bill (S. 5705) authorizing the health officer of the District of Columbia to issue a permit for the removal of the remains of the late Elsie McCaulley from Glenwood Cemetery, District of Columbia, to Philadelphia, Pa.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Delaware asks unanimous consent for the present consideration of this bill, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read the bill at length.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, I do not recall the name; is there a House bill on the same subject which has been reported?

Mr. BROCKSON. There is not.

Mr. MANN. I shall object.

RECESS.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I desire to move that the House take a recess until half past 10 o'clock to-day. Pending that motion, I wish to say this so that it may go into the RECORD: The House has attended to the business of this Congress. We have passed all the appropriation bills that came to us or could possibly come to us. The House has now passed two resolutions extending the two appropriation bills that have not passed and become a law, and if the finances of the Government are not taken care of at this session of Congress it is not the fault of this House. [Applause.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, with that statement in the RECORD, I wish to say that the resolutions have gone to the Senate. There is no necessity of our being in session for an hour, and at the end of that time I think we can take care of these matters that are coming up. Therefore I move that the House now stand in recess until half past 10 o'clock a. m.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a statement of two or three minutes, and I ask the gentleman to withhold his motion.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say to the gentleman that if we do not take a recess now we will not take it at all.

Mr. SLAYDEN. There is a matter which does not pertain to my district any more than it does to that of the gentleman from Alabama about which I wish to speak. It is one in which the whole bar of the fifth judicial circuit and the litigants in that section are interested and on which they are urging action. One of the three judges was 82 years old last December and has not been on the bench for three years. Another is 77 years old. The operation of the district courts is interrupted by taking judges away to sit on the circuit court bench, thus causing trouble and delay to litigants and the bar in the various districts. I merely want an opportunity to move to suspend the rules and try to pass the bill to cure this situation, which the Department of Justice also has urged me to do.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. I will say that we have already reached an agreement here that we will not offer any motions to suspend the rules and will not do any more business without unanimous consent.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Who agrees to that?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. It has been so stated here this morning.

Mr. SLAYDEN. Who has the right to say for the whole Congress that we shall not exercise the privileges that the rules give us?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. The Member who comes on the floor and says that there is no quorum present.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I understand that, but the gentleman stated that "we" have arranged. Who is meant by that royal "we"?

Mr. UNDERWOOD. If the gentleman had been here at an earlier hour——

Mr. SLAYDEN. I was here at an early hour and a late hour.

Mr. MANN. Let me say to the gentleman that we just passed two resolutions by unanimous consent extending the appropriations for the Post Office and the Indian Service.

Mr. SLAYDEN. I was here.

Mr. MANN. I stated that those resolutions would not pass without some discussion if there was to be a lot of other business before the House as new matter. I had the power to prevent it and I should have exercised that power. I advise the gentleman to go home and curse the minority leader——

Mr. SLAYDEN. I do not do that and I do not kick, but when a whole section of the country embracing great commercial interests, the bar and the Department of Justice are pressing for a measure so reasonable and so manifestly needed, and I do my best to have it enacted, it is a little bit "raw" to have the gentleman get up here and say "we" have agreed that there shall be no such legislation as this. I do not recognize the right of anybody to do it. If I have an opportunity and Congress says so, it is all right; but it is not so when the authority to control or direct business is assumed by a few people who call themselves "we."

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman from Alabama yield?

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that the House stand in recess until 10.30 o'clock a. m. Is there objection?

Mr. SLAYDEN. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I object.

Mr. FINLEY. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object——

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House stand in recess until 10.30 o'clock a. m.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama that the House stand in recess until 10.30 o'clock a. m.

The question was taken.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I demand a division.

The House divided; and there were—ayes 68, noes 7.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that there is no quorum present.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota makes the point of order that there is no quorum present. The Chair will count. [After counting.] One hundred and ten Members present—not a quorum. The Doorkeeper will close the doors, the Sergeant at Arms will notify absentees, and the Clerk will call the roll. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Alabama that the House stand in recess until 10.30 o'clock a. m.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 257, nays 15, answered "present" 7, not voting 144, as follows:

The SPEAKER. On this vote the yeas are 253 and the nays are 15. A quorum is present. Pending the announcement of the vote the Chair lays before the House the following report from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk proceeded to announce the report from the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

Mr. MILLER (interrupting the Clerk). Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of order.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. MILLER. The Speaker has declared the motion to take a recess carried, has he not?

The SPEAKER. The Chair simply announced the figures, but did not announce the result.

Mr. MILLER. Is it in order for the Clerk to proceed with the announcement of a report from the Committee on Enrolled Bills when the House is in recess.

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not announced the result of the vote.

Mr. MILLER. When the Speaker has announced the figures showing that the motion prevailed is not that equivalent to the announcement of a vote?

The SPEAKER. The Chair has not announced that the motion prevailed. The Chair merely announced the figures, and pending the announcement of the result of the vote the Chair laid before the House a report from the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, my parliamentary inquiry, if the Chair will bear with me, is this: The Speaker having announced the figures which disclose that the motion prevails, is not that equivalent to a statement from the Chair that the motion has prevailed?

The SPEAKER. Each gentleman can add the figures up for himself.

Mr. RUBEY. Mr. Speaker is it too late to vote?

The SPEAKER. It is.

Mr. MILLER. Mr. Speaker, I make the point of order that the House is in recess.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will continue the announcement of the report of the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

The Clerk continued and concluded the announcement of the report from the Committee on Enrolled Bills.

The SPEAKER. A quorum is present. The ayes have it. The Doorkeeper will open the doors. The motion prevails.

Accordingly, at 10 o'clock and 16 minutes a. m., the House stood in recess until 10.30 o'clock a. m.

AFTER THE RECESS.

The recess having expired, the House (at 10 o'clock and 30 minutes a. m.) was called to order by the Speaker.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the amendments of the House of Representatives to bills of the following titles:

S. 5495. An act authorizing the Secretary of War to make certain donations of condemned cannon and cannon balls; and

S. 5042. An act legalizing certain conveyances heretofore made by the Central Pacific Railroad Co. and others within the State of Nevada.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed bills of the following titles, in which the concurrence of the House of Representatives was requested:

S. 392. An act to create in the War Department and the Navy Department, respectively, a roll designated as the "Civil War Volunteer officers' retired list," to authorize placing thereon, with the retired pay, certain surviving officers who served in the Army, Navy, or Marine Corps of the United States in the Civil War, and for other purposes; and

S. 7066. An act for the relief of Amos Dahuff.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed without amendment bills and joint resolutions of the following titles:

H. J. Res. 426. Joint resolution providing that the Congress of the United States shall participate in the celebration of the opening of The Dalles-Celilo Canal;

H. J. Res. 440. Joint resolution making appropriations for the service of the Post Office Department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, and for other purposes;

H. J. Res. 441. Joint resolution making appropriations for current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916;

H. R. 21562. An act to authorize the construction of a bridge across Pearl River at or near the city of Bogalusa, La.; and

H. R. 20604. An act to construct a public building for a post office at the city of Forsyth, Ga.

FRANK HENRY ROGERS.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I call from the Speaker's table the bill H. R. 20439.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the bill.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 20439. An act for the relief of the heirs of the late Frank Henry Rogers.

The Senate amendment was read.

Mr. GARDNER. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House agree to the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was agreed to.

The title was amended so as to read:

An act for the relief of Mary L. Rogers, widow of Frank Henry Rogers.

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. PALMER] asks unanimous consent to address the House for five minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. PALMER. Mr. Speaker, some time ago the suggestion was made by many of his associates here that upon his retirement from the position of majority leadership in this House it would be proper for the Members of the House to make some adequate and fitting recognition of the great public services of the distinguished gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. [Applause.]

The suggestion finally took the form of the presentation of a portrait of the gentleman from Alabama, to be hung in the hearing room of the Committee on Ways and Means, in order that during all time his handsome countenance might smile upon the scene of his greatest triumph. [Applause.] A very large number of the Members of the House on both sides have gladly contributed to this end, and I am pleased to announce that one of the greatest artists in the country has been commissioned to paint the portrait of the gentleman from Alabama and that it will be hung at the opening of the next regular session of Congress. As I have been acting as chairman of the committee which has it in charge, and as I and many others interested will not be here at that time, I have asked for this opportunity to make public announcement of the fact.

I am sure that I speak for all of the donors when I say that with the gift goes the love, the respect, and the admiration of every Member of this House for Mr. UNDERWOOD. [Loud applause.] He has been a leader whom it has been a delight for his friends to follow and a pleasure for his opponents to honor. [Applause.] He goes now from this scene of his strenuous activities to the rather quiet and somnolent atmosphere of another legislative body. [Laughter.] As he has been the leader here, we have no doubt he will soon become the leader there. [Applause.] We commend him and his qualities of leadership to the thoughtful and serious consideration of the august body of which he is about to become a Member.

He combines all the qualities necessary for successful leadership in a great legislative body. He has a commanding presence, strong personality, a sweet disposition, and with these he combines consummate tact, infinite patience, absolute self-poise, self-control, and sound judgment under all circumstances. He leaves this body with the best wishes of every Member in it. [Applause.] We know that his record in the other branch of Congress will reflect honor upon himself and credit to his country, but he need do nothing more than that which he has already done in this House to entitle him to be known as one of the greatest Americans of his time. [Loud applause.]

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent of my colleagues that I may proceed for a few minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama asks unanimous consent that he may proceed for a few minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say to you and to my colleagues on both sides of this House that there is no higher compliment that they can pay me than to feel that as I leave this House I have their good wishes and their commendation. There is no greater pleasure that you could give me, or no tribute to the humble service that I have rendered the House, that would be more pleasing than that of allowing my picture to hang in the halls of the Committee on Ways and Means alongside of the great men who have presided over that body in the past and whose shoestrings I am not worthy to tie. No matter what the future may hold, no matter what may come to my life hereafter, I feel to-day that the real work of my legislative career ends. For 20 years I have served a district in Alabama on the floor of this House. I came here as a young man, and the men of this House gave me my opportunity. I believe that among all of the legislative bodies of the world there is no better place for a young man to have his opportunity than to hold a commission to serve on the floor of the House of Representatives in the Congress of the United States.

In leaving you I want to say to you all that I realize fully that if my leadership, representing the majority of the House in the last few Congresses, has been in any degree successful, it is not due to myself, but it has been due to the kindness, the courtesy, and the generosity that have been shown me by the membership on both sides. To-day we are about to close the legislation of one of the most historic Congresses that has ever met in the history of our country, and although we have had stormy sessions, we have had many combats, I feel that I can leave this House with a feeling that I bear the good will of every Member of it, and I wish to assure my colleagues on both sides of the House that for all time to come there will rest in my heart a sincere affection for each one of you. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, in closing I wish to compliment the other side of the Chamber on the great ability, the earnestness of purpose, the faithfulness to duty, that has been displayed by your chosen leader. [Applause.] Naturally I hope that my own party will remain in power for many years to come, but should the tide of battle run against us in the future and your flag once more come to the top, I feel sure that the distinguished services of the gentleman who has commanded your fight in the last two Congresses, Mr. MANN, of Illinois, will be recognized by his party and by his country for even more distinguished service than he has had in the past. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, two decades ago you and I started in public life together, almost at the same time. In leaving the House I can not refrain at this time from giving public utterance to the feeling that I have for the Speaker. [Loud and long-continued applause.]

Mr. Speaker, at times our political ambitions may have crossed, but I am glad to say to you and to give public testimony that in a service of 20 years, where we have battled for our party and our party's principles together, there has been no moment of that time when a spirit of friendship and brotherly love has not always existed between us. And I expect, Mr. Speaker, and know that it will go on down to the end of our lives. [Applause.] Your distinguished services to your country need no monument. You have already achieved your place in the history of our Government, and there is no man in the United States that more proudly and more willingly and more gladly gives acknowledgment to the distinguished services of the greatest Speaker of the American Congress. [Applause.]

Mr. Speaker, I move the adoption of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

NOTIFICATION OF THE PRESIDENT.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman moves the adoption of the resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 752.

Resolved, That a committee of three members be appointed by the Speaker, to join a similar committee to be appointed by the Senate, to wait on the President of the United States and inform him that the two Houses have completed the business of this session and are ready to adjourn, unless the President has some communication to make to them.

The resolution was agreed to, and the Speaker appointed as the committee on the part of the House Mr. UNDERWOOD, Mr. FITZGERALD, and Mr. MANN.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on House bill 21606.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. SIMS] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

By unanimous consent, leave to extend remarks in the RECORD was granted to Mr. BULKLEY, Mr. FARR, Mr. MOORE, Mr. ABERCROMBIE, Mr CONNELLY of Kansas, Mr. REILLY of Connecticut, Mr. BEAKES, Mr. ALEXANDER, Mr. KEATING, Mr. PORTER, Mr. GOODWIN of Arkansas, Mr. LINTHICUM, Mr. BURKE of Wisconsin, Mr. PATTEN of New York, Mr. WINGO, Mr. LANGLEY, and Mr. KETTNER.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all gentlemen have leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD for five calendar days.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that all gentlemen have leave to extend their remarks in the RECORD for five calendar days. Is there objection?

Mr. LANGLEY. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LANGLEY. Does that limit of time apply to those to whom the privilege to extend remarks has already been granted this morning?

The SPEAKER. The request just submitted by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] embraces everybody.

Mr. LANGLEY. But does the five-day limit apply?

The SPEAKER. The five-day limit begins at 12 o'clock noon to-day.

Mr. FOSTER. I notice that the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD this morning announces that the last issue of the RECORD for the Sixty-third Congress will be printed on March 15. Why not let the limit be extended until then?

Mr. MANN. I should like to suggest to the gentleman that if, as a matter of fact, Members wait until the 15th, the last issue of the RECORD will probably be about 3 feet thick. [Laughter.] As a matter of fact, gentlemen will have no trouble under the five-day limit, and somebody ought to print remarks before the 15th. Otherwise you will not be able to handle the RECORD of that day conveniently, let alone read it.

Mr. FOSTER. I believe the suggestion of the gentleman is a good one.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN].

There was no objection.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Nixon, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20150) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916.

The message also announced that the Senate had agreed to the report of the committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 74) appropriating money for the payment of certain claims on account of labor, supplies, materials, and cash furnished in the construction of the Corbett Tunnel.

H. R. 2969.

Mr. BAKER. Mr. Speaker, I find that my name appears on the bill H. R. 2969. I have no knowledge of the bill and desire to have my name stricken from it.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BAKER] asks to have his name stricken from the bill (H. R. 2969), stating that he has no knowledge of it.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Then the bill should be stricken from the files of the House.

The SPEAKER. If there be no objection it will be so ordered.

INDIAN AFFAIRS (H. DOC. NO. 1669).

Mr. STEPHENS of Texas. I desire to present a report from the joint commission to investigate Indian affairs, appointed under the act of June 30, 1913.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. STEPHENS] presents the report of the joint commission to investigate Indian affairs, which will be printed.

THANKS TO THE SPEAKER.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I should like to request the Speaker to call the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] to the chair temporarily.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] will take the chair. [Applause.]

Mr. MURDOCK took the chair as Speaker pro tempore.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I am about to perform what I think is the pleasantest duty that falls to my lot during the term of Congress. While it has not been usual to precede by any remarks the offering of the resolution which I shall offer, I do not feel quite willing to let the occasion go by without paying a very short tribute to the able and beloved Speaker of this House. [Applause.]

It is seldom that a man is so gifted with the qualities of statesmanship and kindness together. The Speaker of the House—fair, impartial, able—has gone away beyond those qualities in reaching down into the hearts of all the Members of all the parties in this House and in the country. [Applause.]

To me it is a pleasant spectacle, though unusual in the history of the country, that the floor leader of one party, addressing the floor leader of another party temporarily in the Speaker's chair, offers a resolution of thanks to the leader of the majority party in the House, and I think probably that spectacle could not be witnessed in any other parliamentary body in the world. That is the saving grace of our Republic and of the American people. [Applause.]

I offer the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman offers a privileged resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 753.

Resolved, That the cordial thanks of this House are presented to the Hon. CHAMP CLARK, its honored and distinguished Speaker, for the able, impartial, courteous, and dignified manner in which he has presided over its deliberations and performed the arduous and important duties of the Speakership during the present term of Congress now about to end.

The resolution was agreed to. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, the multiplied honors and kindnesses which the House of Representatives has extended to me go straight to my heart. [Applause.] They will constitute a splendid heritage for my children. [Applause.]

It is amazing with what rapidity the membership of the House changes. I was first elected in 1892. I was one of the victims of the landslide of 1894. At that time the House had 357 Members.

Coming back after the election of 1896, the Clerk of the House having sent me a list of the Members, which I counted on the train, I found there were 101 changes in one election out of 357 Members.

In a few minutes I will have finished my twentieth year in the House. There are only four men in the House that have served longer than I—the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. COOPER [applause], the gentleman from Virginia, Mr. JONES [applause], the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. GILLETT [applause], and the gentleman from Missouri, Dr. BARTHOLDT [applause].

Very much to my personal regret Dr. BARTHOLDT takes his leave of the House to-day. That would leave three, but Uncle Joe is coming back. [Laughter and applause.] So that I will have four seniors in the next House.

Since I came here the membership of the House has grown from 357 to 435. I wish to state now what I have stated a thousand times, either in print or in public speech, that the Members of the House are industrious, intelligent, patriotic, honest, sober, well-behaved men. [Applause.] They really behave better in Washington than they do at home. [Laughter and applause.]

Anybody who thinks that service in the House is a holiday performance is greatly mistaken. We are coming to the end of the Congress that has been in session more days than any other Congress that ever met. We have put more bills upon the statute books than any other Congress that ever assembled. [Applause.] I hope from the bottom of my heart that these statutes which we have enacted in this Congress will prove a blessing to the country and promote the cause of free government everywhere. [Applause.]

I desire to compliment publicly the distinguished leader of this House [Mr. UNDERWOOD] and also the distinguished minority leader [Mr. MANN], and to thank him, not for all that he has done [laughter] but for numerous services he has rendered me in my capacity as Speaker. [Applause.] He is one of the most valuable legislators America can boast.

I regret exceedingly that the gentleman from Wichita, Kansas, VICTOR MURDOCK, is going out of the House. He went out of his own volition; he was not put out. I knew him when he was wearing kilts. He was then a very lively youngster; he is now a very active man. His father was good to me in that faraway day. He was running a little weekly newspaper at Wichita, which has grown into a great daily, and I do not forget kindnesses in this world. [Applause.] So when the son came here I tried all I could to promote his fortunes. He has repaid me in Scripture measure, "heaped up, pressed down, and running over."

The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] has had an exceedingly difficult position to fill. He led his thin line of followers with gallantry, courage, and ability. I filled that place once; how well or to the contrary history will tell; but it will be written on the glowing page of history with iron pen that the gentleman from Illinois is a great minority leader. [Applause.] And if the fortunes turn and the Republicans get the House again—and they may do so some day—he will in all human probability be Speaker—and even higher honors are not beyond his reach. [Applause.] It is safe to say that whatever places he may hold will be honored by his talents, his character, and his patriotism.

It is a strange historical fact that politics run on the half-and-half plan in this country.

When President Wilson was sworn in the Government had existed 124 years under the Constitution, and out of that time the Democrats had run it 60 years; that is, if you class the Presidents politically the way they were elected; counting John Quincy Adams as a Democrat, which is a rather far-fetched performance, but he was elected that way; and the other parties in lineal succession had run it 64 years; that is, if you count John Tyler a Whig, and he was elected by the Whigs; and Andrew Johnson a Republican, as he was elected by the Republicans. So it was our turn at last, and we are in.

A man who has never been in the Army, I suppose, has no adequate conception of and never can understand the feeling that soldiers who have fought shoulder to shoulder have for each other; but, next to that, men who fight together in this legislative body have a feeling approximating that of the soldiers' feeling for each other.

I have a deep affection for the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD]. I have great admiration for him. He had an exceedingly difficult place to fill in this House and he filled it with consummate ability. [Applause.] He did it with unfailing courtesy, always pouring oil on the troubled waters. He has made a magnificent success of his leadership. He is about to be translated to another body—I will not call it promotion—and I doubt very much, I doubt exceedingly, whether he will be as happy over there as he has been here. I fully appreciate his kindly feeling for myself. We have stood here for a score of years fighting shoulder to shoulder, heart to heart, for what we consider the welfare of our beloved country. For 16 years we were steadily defeated. We never lost heart or hope. Then the tide turned and for four years we have been victors. We lost together. We triumphed together. Wherever he goes, whatever he achieves, my love will attend him. To the leaders in politics or in war go the chief honors; but Mr. UNDERWOOD and I could have accomplished nothing save for the steadfast support of our colleagues. Every one of them is entitled to his full share of the honor and the glory.

One of the most intense characters who was ever in this House since I have been here, a man of great ability, was John L. Wilson, of Washington. He was one of the best rough-and-tumble fighters I ever saw on the floor of the House, and he was always ready to fight.

One day, after he had been in the Senate for about 12 months, I met him down by the Peace Monument. He had not created any disturbance in the Senate, but had been quiet as a lamb. So I said to him, "John, how do you like it over there? What is the reason you are not carrying on as you did in the House?" He said, "There is some kind of a soporific influence over there that a man can not resist." I have, as I say, a deep personal affection for the gentleman from Alabama, as likewise I have for the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and for the gentleman from Kansas, VICTOR MURDOCK. [Applause.] I have no sort of doubt that the gentleman from Alabama will be one of the distinguished figures in the Senate. He will not have to pass through any novitiate, because he already has an international reputation and is already armed at all points exactly cap-a-pie.

I hope, because I am not going to make any speech, when the gavel falls finally on this Congress, that every man of the House will enjoy this long vacation, if in the providence of God it turns out to be a long one [laughter], and that the blessings of Almighty God will rest on you and yours, not only upon those who are coming back, but those who are retiring to the walks of private life. [Applause.]

ENROLLED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS SIGNED.

Mr. ASHBROOK, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that they had examined and found truly enrolled bills and joint resolutions of the following titles, when the Speaker signed the same:

PENALTIES ON FOREIGN-BUILT VESSELS.

Mr. ALEXANDER. Mr. Speaker, I call up the bill (H. R. 18685) to repeal penalties on foreign-built vessels owned by Americans, with a Senate amendment, now on the Speaker's desk, and ask that it be laid before the House. It is a bill that passed the House some time ago.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Missouri calls up a House bill with a Senate amendment on the Speaker's desk. The Clerk will report the Senate amendment.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment.

The SPEAKER. The question is on concurring in the Senate amendment.

The Senate amendment was concurred in.

POST OFFICE APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to make a brief statement to the House, which I think ought to be made in view of the present situation.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MOON. Mr. Speaker, I have heard with great pleasure, and I may say profound gratification, the exchange of compliments between the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], the Speaker, and the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], and I take pleasure in acquiescing in all that has been said about the distinguished gentlemen, and I am gratified to see the approval of the House of all that has been said.

I regret that after such a pleasant and gracious performance in this House I feel it to be my duty to make a statement that may not be pleasant, and yet in making it I want to assure the House that I make no reflection personally on any Member of it.

The House is well aware of the great struggle that has been going on in conference between the Senate and the House conferees on the Post Office appropriation bill (H. R. 19906). The House knows that, notwithstanding all the beneficial legislation in that bill, the real crux of the contention was, Shall the Government of the United States protect its Treasury against the raids of private carrying corporations? That has been the fight. At last the Senate yielded upon the House provision for a new basis of computation of railway-mail pay, and that bill went to the Senate under the maledictions of the representatives of railroads who were standing thick and fast last night at both ends of this Capitol. What has happened since? While that bill was there, before any action was taken or could be taken upon the conference report by the Senate, after the adoption of the conference report in this House, at an early hour this morning, when there was no quorum present, when the chairman of the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads and the members of the committee were not present, because it was not necessary to be present at that hour in the absence of a quorum, when nothing was expected to be done, a resolution was offered by which the Post Office Department was to be supplied with funds in accordance with the fiscal bill for the year 1915. I am not here to say or to call into question, and do not mean to be so understood, because I am not doing that, the good faith or the integrity of the gentlemen who brought about that situation; but I do feel that in the absence of the chairman of the committee, when the bill was in the Senate for consideration on the conference report, no action of this character should have been taken. We at least ought to have waited until a little later, to see whether the Senate was going to concur in this legislation, which would save this country millions of dollars. But gentlemen saw fit to offer the resolution. What I have complained of and what I have said to the gentlemen whom I understood were interested in it was that it was hardly courteous, under the circumstances, to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads to offer the resolution; it was hardly fair to the people of the United States to include in that resolution special legislation in the interest of employees of the Government upon the express and avowed ground that the resolution could not pass unless these gentlemen were provided for.

Has it come to this, Mr. Speaker, that the American Congress must bow in obedience to the will of postal employees, and when a resolution is passed, if it is to be passed, that it should contain provisions that carry out the behests of a portion of the employees of the Government in order to pass it? I have no objection to the proper care of these employees. I have no objection even to that section personally, but it looks a little out of order to me not to give the Senate an opportunity and a little more time than they have had to pass upon the conference report. It looks a little out of order for the House to hurriedly adopt a resolution with two provisions that tie the hands of the department upon these questions of the law and disregarding those economic provisions that ought to have been and would have been considered in the conference report.

Now, what I have said I do not want to be construed as a reflection upon the gentlemen who offered the resolution. I know they are honorable gentlemen and would not undertake to do anything wrong in reference to the matter intentionally. I am not reflecting upon them. I thought it was bad taste and bad judgment—and I think so yet—for them to offer this resolution in my absence at that early period in the morning, when there was no quorum present. And my remarks, Mr. Speaker, are largely for the purpose of presenting the facts as I understand them, and to say to this House that we do not take the responsibility, as the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads, for this resolution or for the effect that it may have. You may think that you are doing the rural carriers a great service when you bow down before them in this House. There is no man here that has done as much for them as I have, but the time has come when this Congress must not be dictated to by the employees of this Government. I think it was a bad idea to put that section in this special resolution. I want to disclaim for myself as chairman of that committee any responsibility for that legislation, because we were given no information in reference to it. And let me say to this House again—and I have said similar things to you twice, and you have suffered on these very questions—you are not going to accomplish that which you think you will accomplish by rallying to your aid rural letter carriers' friends in this House in the maintenance of the rural system in the country. You may not have thought it, but there is a stinger in your resolution. I am glad you have voted the House provision in that shape for that reason, if you had it to do.

You have provided here for automobile routes of not less than 50 miles. The Postmaster General has the power for $1,800 to double up the two, three, or four routes that make 50 miles and have one carrier instead of four and pay him $1,800, which would be about $600 instead of $1,200, which you propose here. Again, under the general law the Postmaster General has the power not only to refuse to establish other rural routes, but he has the power to abolish rural routes. And you have put this question up to the administration in such a shape that it has to give away $18,000,000 of the public money or else abolish some of these routes and these carriers. That is exactly what is going to happen. It is going to happen in this case, as it has in every other case. When you seek power, when you seek interest, when you seek benefits, by standing in with the employees of the Government against the people, as represented by the Government, that Government must avail itself of the benefit of the law for the protection of the Public Treasury. And when I make this statement, I make it advisedly, as I did heretofore on an occasion when I told you what would happen in the event that you passed certain legislation along this line. Now, look for it again. I venture that there is not a man in this House, with the resolution passing in the shape that it is in, that does not find one-third of his rural routes cut out in 90 days or 6 months, and it has to be done to protect the public interests, and you may just as well know it.

Now, I have been a friend of the rural routes and rural carriers. I want to make the statement here that I think the limit has come in compensation along that line for the present, and I regret any action that forced the department into the attitude to which I have referred.

Mr. Speaker, this is very much more than I intended to say on the question. I want to say, however, that I do not know who introduced this resolution here this morning. Possibly it was my friend Leader UNDERWOOD, or Mr. FITZGERALD; but, whichever one it was, or whether it was both, I mean no reflection, as I said in the beginning, on them. I think they ought to have said something to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads about it; but, as long as they did not do that, I have no desire especially to complain of them, except of the unnecessary haste in the matter and a failure to give time to the Senate to act on the conference report before offering the continuing appropriation resolution, which should have come from the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads and not from them. It was an unnecessary and unfortunate interference in the work of another committee, and, I think, against the public interest.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to address the House briefly.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to address the House for how long?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will not abuse the patience of the House at this hour of the session. What I shall say will be in reply to the statement made by the gentleman from Tennessee. I ask for 10 minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent for 10 minutes. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, the resolution which I offered this morning to extend the appropriations of the present fiscal year for the Post Office Department was prepared in the Committee on Appropriations at the request of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MOON].

Mr. MOON. Now, Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will let me interrupt him.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I wish the gentleman would permit me to finish my statement. When I complete it, the gentleman will not wish to interrupt me.

Mr. MOON. Go ahead.

Mr. FITZGERALD. The statement was prepared there by the expert clerks of the Committee on Appropriations, in consultation with the experts in the Division of Bookkeeping and Warrants in the Treasury Department and in consultation with the Comptroller of the Treasury. The request was made yesterday or the day previously.

It was one of four resolutions prepared, one to cover the Post Office appropriation bill; one to cover the Indian appropriation bill; one to cover the Agricultural appropriation bill; and one resolution embracing all three of the others. The resolutions were not only prepared, but they were enrolled and engrossed in advance, so that if it became necessary to resort to such resolutions the Congress would not be held up and an extra session forced because of the failure to take the necessary precautions. The two provisions to which the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MOON] refers, one in reference to letter carriers demoted from the $1,200 grade in order to effect economy, and the other fixing the compensation of rural carriers at the rate fixed by the Post Office appropriation bill as it passed the House of Representatives, were not put in at the request of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. MOON. No; that is right.

Mr. FITZGERALD. They were put in by myself, after having received information that a resolution extending the appropriations for the support of these services of the Government could not command a two-thirds vote in this House. They were not put in because I desired them in such a resolution. I am one of the few men in the House who has antagonized propositions to raise the rates of pay of rural carriers and to the rates fixed in this resolution. But the House by an overwhelming majority adopted such a provision to the Post Office bill, and it is a notorious fact, which would have been pointed out to the House, that if the House exercised its power, after having incorporated such a provision in the bill, no one could secure the passage of the resolution without such a provision in it.

Mr. Speaker, I left this House about 5 o'clock this morning. I told the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. MOON] that the resolution was prepared, that it had those two provisions in it because of the information I had received that the resolution could not pass unless they were in it. I told him I would be back before 9 o'clock this morning.

Mr. MOON. No; you did not do any such thing. You told me——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will not yield to the offensive interruption of the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. MOON. I do not wish to be offensive to the gentleman.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Then the gentleman should not challenge my veracity.

Mr. MOON. If the gentleman will recall, he met me in the hall and casually said, "We have got up a resolution in the matter," and I supposed, of course, it was the kind of resolution that we were speaking of before; that it was to be used in the event the bill did not carry. He then said, "We are thinking of putting in" or "We have put in"—I do not recall which he said—"a provision in reference to rural carriers." I said, "Mr. FITZGERALD, I object to that and do not want that done," so the gentleman had notice when he came in here and did it, and I was not here. That is the discourtesy that I complained of, exactly.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I hope I will not be interrupted again by the gentleman from Tennessee. I did not interrupt him.

Mr. MANN. Will not the gentleman yield for a moment?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I will yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. MANN. The gentleman knows that he and I and the gentleman from Alabama and others had a little conference this morning after the House met.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I was about to make a statement about that.

Mr. MANN. I think I am going to make a statement of a fact with which the gentleman is not familiar. I had ascertained that the gentleman from Tennessee had lost the papers—that the House had lost the papers—on the Post Office appropriation bill; and when we met this morning, having last night agreed to a conference report, it had not been messaged to the Senate and could not be messaged to the Senate, because we could not find the bill. I knew that when we were having our conference this morning.

There was no chance to send the conference report back to the Senate to be acted upon. Subsequently, we discovered that the gentleman from Tennessee had carelessly left the original papers on his table last night, and that one of the messenger boys had picked them up and locked them up, endeavoring to save them; but not knowing what they were, we were not informed of the fact until a considerable time after the resolution introduced by the gentleman from New York had passed the House.

Mr. MOON. You thought the papers were over there when you passed the resolution, did you not? They were not lost, but on the desk.

Mr. MANN. I did not. I knew they were not.

Mr. MOON. They were all together. If you could get one you could get them all, and the Clerk had the report and statement, all of the papers needed all of the time.

Mr. MANN. I knew they were not there, because I knew the message had not been delivered there.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I returned to this House before 9 o'clock this morning. The resolutions were ready. It takes time to enroll and engross them and that work could not be left to the closing hours of the session. There were but few Members present. There was a conference between the Speaker, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD], the responsible leader of the House, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], representing the minority in the House, and myself. I was urged to take up the extending resolutions at once. I suggested that we should wait to see if the gentleman from Tennessee would arrive. At about half past 9 it was insisted that the resolutions be passed, because if an extra session of Congress were to be avoided the resolutions had to be acted upon promptly. No one could tell whether any gentleman would raise the point of order and insist upon a quorum being present. Delay was impossible. No one desired to act discourteously to the gentleman from Tennessee, but some one had to assume the responsibility of passing through this House a resolution to provide the moneys necessary to maintain the Government during the next fiscal year unless an extra session of Congress was to be forced.

Under the unbroken precedents of the House the task fell to me as chairman of the Committee on Appropriations. I assume full responsibility for what I did. If I had not acted, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. UNDERWOOD] was prepared to do so. If there is any impropriety in the resolution, if the gentleman believes it was designed to advance the interests of railroads by giving them money to which they were not entitled——

Mr. MOON. The gentleman did not say that. I was in my office in this building all night and this morning.

Mr. FITZGERALD. There is time now to have the President of the United States disapprove the resolution and let the House pass upon the question with the present full attendance.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. GALLIVAN. I hope the gentleman from New York will not be interrupted any more.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. FITZGERALD. I decline to yield.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I want to offer a privileged report.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I decline to yield. This resolution was passed in the interest of the public service. It was as difficult for me to return before 9 o'clock, leaving here after 5 o'clock, as it was for the gentleman from Tennessee. I have had just as difficult a task during the last week or ten days as any Member of this House. It was not easy for me to be here. I came here to discharge my public duty. I deny the statement that the resolution was prepared without the knowledge of the gentleman from Tennessee——

Mr. MOON. It was.

Mr. FITZGERALD. When, as a matter of fact, the first step taken toward its preparation was at the gentleman's own request. The provisions about which the gentleman complains were inserted in order to make possible the enactment of the resolution. It could not pass without them, and I believed the gentlemen with whom I consulted—the gentleman from Tennessee not being present—agreed that it was necessary to include the provisions in the resolution.

The SPEAKER. The time of the gentleman has expired.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, I desire to call up the conference report on the Indian appropriation bill, and I ask unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

Mr. MOON. Will the gentleman yield me two minutes?

Mr. CARTER. No; I can not, for we only have about 10 minutes before the hour of final adjournment.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman asks unanimous consent that the statement be read in lieu of the report.

Mr. HARRISON. I object.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

The Clerk read as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT (NO. 1509).

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the Senate to the bill (H. R. 20150) making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, for fulfilling treaty stipulations with various Indian tribes, and for other purposes, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its amendments numbered 2, 10, 11, 16, 17, 22, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, 32, 34, 38, 44, 48, 49, 51, 56, 58, 63, 65, 66, 75, 77, 78, 79, 80, 82, 88, 91, 92, 93, 96, 98, 100, 107, 109, 113, 117, 118, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 138, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 148, 153, 156, 157, 158, and 159.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendments of the Senate numbered 1, 5, 8, 12, 13, 15, 20, 21, 30, 31, 35, 36, 37, 39, 40, 45, 46, 47, 57, 59, 60, 61, 71, 73, 83, 95, 99, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 110, 111, 114, 116, 119, 121, 122, 123, 125, 128, 137, 139, 141, 147, 149, 151, 154, 155, 160, 161, 165, 167, 169, and 170, and agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 3, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In line 1 of the proposed amendment, after the word "sum," strike out the figures "$25,000" and insert in lieu thereof the figures "$10,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 4, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the matter proposed by this amendment insert the following: "Maintenance of hospitals and sanatoriums, for incidental and all other expenses for their proper conduct and management, including pay of employees, repairs, improvements, and for necessary expenses of transporting Indian patients to and from such hospitals and sanatoriums, and for the correction of sanitary defects in Indian homes, $350,000: Provided, That not to exceed $90,000 of the amount herein appropriated may be expended in the erection and equipment of new hospitals for the use of Indians, and no hospitals shall be constructed at a cost to exceed $15,000, including equipment"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 6, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$1,500,000."

And on page 5 of the bill, line 4, after the word "schools," strike out the period, insert a colon, and add the following: "And provided further, That $75,000 of the amount herein appropriated shall be expended for tuition of children of Indian blood enrolled in the public schools of New Mexico"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 7, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$420,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO WAIT ON THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, the committee of the House appointed to wait on the President, with a like committee of the Senate, desire to report that they have performed that duty and waited on the President, and he desires us to notify the House that he has no further communication to lay before it.

INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will proceed with the reading of the conference report.

The Clerk continued the reading of the conference report, as follows:

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 9, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$425,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 14, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$115,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 18, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$300,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

That the House recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the Senate numbered 19, and agree to the same with an amendment as follows: In lieu of the sum proposed insert "$75,000"; and the Senate agree to the same.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will not the gentleman from Oklahoma withdraw the conference report? It is perfectly patent that it can not be agreed to before the Congress expires.

Mr. CARTER. Mr. Speaker, the adoption of this report means much to the service and to my constituents, and there is no reasonable thing I would not do to put it through. Since, however, only 19 of the 171 amendments have been read in the last 10 minutes, and the hour of adjournment is practically upon us, with no possible chance to even finish the reading of one-tenth the remainder, I feel that I should yield to the wishes of the House, but I think the entire report should be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that the conference report be withdrawn on the Indian bill. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

THE CORBETT TUNNEL.

Mr. POU. Mr. Speaker, I present a conference report on Senate joint resolution 74, appropriating money for the payment of certain claims on account of labor, supplies, materials, and cash furnished in the construction of the Corbett Tunnel.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the report.

The report was read, as follows:

CONFERENCE REPORT.

The committee of conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendments of the House to the joint resolution (S. J. Res. 74) appropriating money for the payment of certain claims on account of labor, supplies, materials, and cash furnished in the construction of the Corbett Tunnel, having met, after full and free conference have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses as follows:

That the Senate recede from its disagreement to the amendment of the House, and agree to the same.

E. W. POU,
MARTIN DIES,
L. MOTT,
Managers on the part of the House.
H. L. MYERS,
LUKE LEA,
Managers on the part of the Senate.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the conference report.

The conference report was agreed to.

JOINT COMMITTEE ON PARCEL POST.

Mr. FINLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to submit in lieu of a report from two members of the Joint Committee on Parcel Post, which committee has taken no action, a letter which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have it inserted in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from South Carolina asks unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD a letter in lieu of a report from two of the members of the Joint Committee on Parcel Post. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The letter is as follows:

COMMITTEE ON THE POST OFFICE AND POST ROADS,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., February 6, 1915.

HON. JOSEPH L. BRISTOW,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Your letter of recent date in reference to the work of the Joint Committee on Parcel Post, together with what you term the report of the joint committee to Congress, has been received. I note that you state in your letter that, if authorized to do so, you will sign my name to the report. I decline to authorize you to sign my name to your report and refuse absolutely to sign the same myself. My reasons are, first, that the joint committee has made no investigation on the subject matter. What your activities have been, I do not know. I have discussed the matter with Hon. D. J. LEWIS, one of my House colleagues, appointed along with me a member of the joint committee.

There has only been one meeting of the joint committee so far as we are advised, and nothing was done at this meeting except to organize by the election of yourself as chairman and myself as vice chairman. I believe that it was arranged for you to appoint the clerks. Since that time there has been no meeting of the joint committee, so far as I am advised. My recollection is that the three members of the joint committee from the Senate and the Hon. JOHN J. GARDNER, from the House, opposed the appointment of a subcommittee. Both Mr. LEWIS and myself have had no opportunity to do anything in the way of discharging the duties imposed upon us by the act of Congress of February, 1913. I have looked over your proposed report and do not agree as to all of the statements of facts contained therein, and most emphatically do I dissent from many of the conclusions stated therein. To sum the matter up, there has been no effort on the part of the joint committee to carry out the evident intention of Congress in making an investigation of the parcel post, and while I believe it is true of the $25,000 appropriated to defray the expenses of the investigation, only some five or six thousand dollars have been spent, as you state. In my opinion the information or data which you state you have gathered can be of no aid to Congress in considering what further legislation is necessary to perfect the parcel-post law, and is not worth 6 cents.

Why no meetings of the joint committee have been called or held other than the one mentioned, and why the joint committee has not discharged its duty in making an investigation as intended by Congress, I do not know. This is a question that is up to you.

Yours, very truly,
D. E. FINLEY.

PERSONAL STATEMENTS.

Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. MURDOCK] may be permitted to address the House for five minutes.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MURDOCK. Mr. Speaker and gentlemen of the House, I have served 12 years in the House of Representatives, and they have grown rich in memories to me, as I have viewed them in retrospect this morning. As I sat here watching the close of the proceedings of this great Congress and this great session of Congress, the thing which came first to my mind was the reflection of how legislatively green I was when I arrived in 1903. We were presented upon arrival in those days with a green volume, flexibly bound, containing the Constitution, the venerable Jefferson's Manual, and the rules of the House of Representatives, these later backed up by eight volumes of Hinds' Precedents, each one of them as large as an unabridged dictionary. The mastery of these seemed prodigious to me then; it seems so yet, and I leave the House entirely innocent of all parliamentary law. [Laughter.] It never would stick. In the Constitution—and I think, Mr. Speaker, that in my 12 years' service, not being a lawyer, this is the first time I have referred to the Constitution [laughter]—the fathers who wrote it placed among all the arms of the Government first the House of Representatives. For this Nation was to them and is a democracy, and this House is the center of the power and glory of the people who constitute it. When all is said and done, we are individually a good deal like the people who send us here, and the more that is the case the more representative we are in fact.

In bidding good-by to those with whom I have served I want to say this, that so far as I know I have never received a wound in this body that lasted, and I have never intended to give one that would endure. [Applause.] The personal charm of this assembly is its camaraderie. I think that every man who serves here through a course of years grows—grows in vision, in fraternity, grows in the humanities, in the nobilities—and in parting I would be derelict indeed if I did not pay a tribute to one who is so preeminently an exemplar of these qualities—to CHAMP CLARK, the Speaker. [Applause.] The other day I had as a visitor in the gallery, a lady from England, and she said, "Who is the man who is sitting up in front?" I said, "He is the Speaker—CHAMP CLARK." "Well," she said, "Do they uncle him?" [Laughter.] We have not "uncled" him, but I think it can be said by every man in the body, conscientiously, that we all look upon him lovingly as a superb type of American citizenship. [Applause.]

And I would be equally delinquent if I did not also here, in parting, say a sincere word of tribute to that wonderful man, that wonderful mind, JAMES R. MANN. [Applause.] There can easily develop a tendency in a man who serves in this body to fall into lax mental methods. A man here is not an employee. He is largely his own boss. He can be a very lazy Member or he can be a very industrious one; and I think that it can be said absolutely without fear of successful contradiction that in the history of parliamentary bodies, from the time of the first Greek Assembly and the Roman Senate down, there has never been a man in a legislative body who equaled in industry the gentleman from Illinois. [Applause.]

The best quality of the House on the score of personal experience, as I said in the beginning, is its fellowship; and on the score of opportunity for public service, let me say in conclusion, this House is growing better. Its procedure is mending. The close of this Congress, with the exception of the unfortunate incident respecting the Post Office bill, has been accomplished with more facility than the close of any other Congress that I have ever attended. It is my earnest hope that the House will go on with its reforms toward the achievement of perfect representation; and I think I could say nothing more truly reflecting my deepest civic desire than to express the hope with all my heart and soul, as I go back to my home and my people, to private life, that the future will bring to every individual Member of the House of Representatives of the United States of America an increasing degree of individual freedom of opinion, individual opportunity for initiative, and an increasing quantum of individual power. I thank you. [Applause.]

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, my colleague, Mr. MADDEN, desires to address the House for a few minutes, and I ask unanimous consent that he may address the House for three minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks unanimous consent that his colleague, Mr. MADDEN, may be permitted to address the House for three minutes. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. MADDEN. Mr. Speaker, as a rule we compliment men after they die or after they become prominent leaders; never after they have gone into retirement. We have to-day listened to many eloquent speeches complimenting the worthy character of the Speaker of the House, of the majority leader, and of the minority leader, but I am not going to speak of any one of these men, for they are all crowned with fame. I want to speak of one of the most modest, one of the most efficient, most systematic, most patriotic men who has ever served in this body, and who to-day, to my great regret and to the detriment of the public service, is about to retire to private life. No man in all the history of my public experience is more worthy of the confidence and esteem of the men with whom he is associated and of the confidence and trust of the American people than is FRED C. STEVENS, of St. Paul. [Applause.] He leaves this body after having made a record of achievement equal to that of any leader who has ever occupied a high public place. FRED STEVENS, always modest, always on the job, always effective when brains were needed, always able to explain the intricate problems of legislation, always patriotic, never failing in the performance of his public duty.

All hail to FRED C. STEVENS, to-day the private citizen, and may he succeed in whatever he undertakes, and may God go with him wherever he goes! I hope the Sixty-fifth Congress may be dignified by his presence as a Member, for he has been an ornament to this, the greatest legislative body in the world. [Loud applause.]

OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for one minute.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. RAINEY] asks unanimous consent for one minute. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. RAINEY. Mr. Chairman, a subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives was appointed recently for the purpose of drafting resolutions concerning the service of the Hon. OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, of Alabama [applause] in this House and as chairman of that great committee, to be spread at large upon the records of the committee. I ask unanimous consent now that those same resolutions may be read from the Clerk's desk and printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

We, the undersigned, a subcommittee appointed by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives to draft resolutions concerning the retirement of Hon. OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, of Alabama, as chairman of that committee, herewith report the following:

The service of Hon. OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD, of Alabama, as a Member of the Lower Branch of the Congress of the United States, covering a period of 20 consecutive years, ends at noon to-day. For 15 years of that time he has been a member of the Ways and Means Committee, and for four years of that period he has been chairman of that committee, presiding over its deliberations with great fairness and with marked ability.

He has participated actively in the construction of two general bills revising the tariff, one of which bears his name.

He has at all times, by his courteous, kindly demeanor, endeared himself to all members of this committee irrespective of party affiliations.

While we regret the fact that he to-day severs his connection with this committee, we congratulate him and the State he represents upon his election to the United States Senate and upon the fact that without intervening time after 12 o'clock to-day his service as a Member of that body commences; and we congratulate the country upon the fact that before him larger fields of usefulness and greater opportunities for service are opening.

We, the undersigned subcommittee of the Ways and Means Committee, representing the Democratic, Republican, and Progressive Parties on that committee, therefore submit, to be spread at large upon the records of this committee, the foregoing, together with the following resolutions:

Resolved, That in the retirement of Hon. OSCAR W. UNDERWOOD from this committee the committee has lost an able, courteous, obliging chairman;

Resolved, That we congratulate him upon his promotion to the Senate of the United States, and that we predict for him a long period of useful service for his State and his country in that body; and

Resolved, That we extend to him the thanks of this committee for his courtesy at all times and for the kindly and able manner in which he has presided over our deliberations.

HENRY T. RAINEY,
Illinois.
J. W. FORDNEY,
Michigan.
VICTOR MURDOCK,
Kansas.

WAYS AND MEANS COMMITTEE ROOM,
House of Representatives, March 4, 1915.

[Applause.]

ADJOURNMENT.

The SPEAKER. The hour of 12 o'clock noon having arrived, I declare the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third Congress adjourned without day.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

1. Letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, report on preliminary examination of Red River of the North, from Wahpeton, N. Dak., and Breckenridge, Minn., to the international boundary line (H. Doc. No. 1666); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

2. Letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, with a letter from the Chief of Engineers, reports on preliminary examination and survey of Navidad and Lavaca Rivers, Tex. (H. Doc. No. 1667); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed with illustrations.

3. Letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting a letter from the Chief of Engineers, etc., in regard to inland waterway, coast of Texas, from Corpus Christi to point on Baffins Bay (H. Doc. No. 1668); to the Committee on Rivers and Harbors and ordered to be printed.

4. Letter from the Secretary of War, transmitting, pursuant to law, annual report of the American National Red Cross (H. Doc. No. 1665); to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS.

Under clause 2 of Rule XIII, private bills were severally reported from committees, delivered to the Clerk, and referred to the Committee of the Whole House, as follows:

Mr. FERRIS, from the Committee on the Public Lands, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 12288) releasing the claim of the United States to that portion of land, being a fractional block, bounded on the north and east by Bayou Cadet, on the west by Cevallos Street, and on the south by Intendencia Street, in the old city of Pensacola, reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1507), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

He also, from the same committee, to which was referred the bill (H. R. 13042) releasing claim of the United States to lot No. 306 in the old city of Pensacola, Fla., reported the same without amendment, accompanied by a report (No. 1508), which said bill and report were referred to the Private Calendar.

PUBLIC BILLS, RESOLUTIONS, AND MEMORIALS.

Under clause 3 of Rule XXII, bills, resolutions, and memorials were introduced and severally referred as follows:

By Mr. CARLIN: A bill (H. R. 21615) to create a national interstate highway system and to establish a commission for same, etc.; to the Committee on the Post Office and Post Roads.

By Mr. TAYLOR of Colorado: A bill (H. R. 21616) to provide for stock-raising homesteads, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Public Lands.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 1 of Rule XXII, petitions and papers were laid on the Clerk's desk and referred as follows:

By Mr. BRODBECK: Petition of M. L. Howard and others, of York, Pa., protesting against export of wheat, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.

By Mr. BURNETT: Petition of sundry citizens of Alabama, favoring placing limit on export of wheat, etc.; to the Committee on Foreign Affairs.
